STONE IS CONFIRMED BY SENATE, 71 TO 6; SCORED ON WHEELER

WALSH EXTOLS HIS ABILITY

But Says the Move to Indict Senator in Washington Was Political and Unfair.

OTHERS FEAR A PRECEDENT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The nomination of Attorney General Harlan F. Stone as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court was confirmed by the Senate today by a vote of 71 to 6, after a six-hour debate in open session. Two Democrats, Heflin of Alabama and Trammell of Florida; two Republicans, Frazier of North Dakota and Norris of Nebraska and the two Farmer-Laborites, Johnson and Shipstead of Minnesota, voted against confirmation.

Senator Wheeler of Montana, running mate of Mr. La Follette in the last campaign, and about whom the fight against Mr. Stone's confirmation centred, refrained from voting. Senator Walsh of Montana, who is counsel for Senator Wheeler, asked to be excused from voting.

Senator Norris announced that if Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, who ran for President on the Progressive Party ticket last Fall, had been present he would have voted against confirmation.

Announcement that the confirmation would be debated in public served to draw a large crowd, and when Senator Walsh began the presentation of his side of the argument, soon after the noon hour, the public galleries were filled and most of the seats in the Senate were occupied. Senator Walsh and Senator Heflin of Alabama made the principal addresses, the latter confining his attacks almost entirely to the connection of Mr. Stone with the so-called Owenby case.

Senator Borah of Idaho, head of the Senate committee which exonerated Senator Wheeler of guilt in connection with charges on which Mr. Wheeler was indicted in Montana about a year ago, voted for confirmation but declared that he was unalterably opposed to a policy under which the Department of Justice is now seeking indictment and trial of Senator Wheeler on a conspiracy charge in the District of Columbia, 2,500 miles from the home of the Montana Senator.

Reed Would Amend the Laws.

This point was also emphasized by Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, who in voting for confirmation said that there were circumstances in connection with the prosecution of Senator Wheeler which he did not like at all. Senator Reed declared that in his opinion Congress should take steps to alter or supplement the laws so that a defendant could not be forced to stand trial in a strange community, far from his home, at the will of the Attorney General.

With this viewpoint Senator Borah was so thoroughly in agreement that he announced he would address the Senate at a later day on the legal principles involved and possibly make recommendations for legislative enactment.

A touch of the spectacular was given to the proceedings when Senator Norris of Nebraska, in announcing that he would vote against Mr. Stone, attacked a number of the appointments recently made by President Coolidge. He mentioned Mr. Stone, Charles B. Warren, nominated to succeed Mr. Stone; T. F. Woodlock, nominee for Interstate Commerce Commissioner, and W. E. Humphreys, nominee for the Federal Trade Commission.

The people, in the last election, said Senator Norris, had shown that they preferred a Vermont farmer to John W. Davis, counsel for Morgan. But they did not know that instead of getting the lawyer of Morgan in the White House they were to have Morgan represented on the Supreme Court bench.

"They didn't know," he exclaimed, "that Warren, tainted with the Sugar Trust influence, was going to be appointed Attorney General." Mr. Woodlock he classified as a representative of the railroads, Mr. Humphreys as representing the most reactionary thought. All men of honor, all honorable men, Mr. Norris added, but men who "see the things of life through the glasses of corporations."

Fears for the Common People.

"With Morgan and Company's attorney on the Supreme bench," he exclaimed, "with the sugar trust running the Attorney General's office, with the railroads themselves operating the Interstate Commerce Commission, with the greatest reactionary of the country sitting on the Federal Trade Commission, tell me, O God, tell me, where the toiling millions of the honest, common people of this country are going to be protected in their rights as against big business."

Senator Walsh of Montana presented a long statement of his position. He said that he had no thought of attacking the moral character or ability of Mr. Stone, but that he could not escape the conclusion that politics played a part in the moves that had been made to obtain a second indictment against Senator Wheeler in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Stone, Senator Walsh said, had

Herrin Sheriff Will Leave County as Means of Peace

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Sheriff George Galligan of Williamson County today signed an agreement in the presence of Governor Len Small promising to stay out of Williamson County as long as his absence seems desirable as one means of restoring tranquility there. He appointed Deputy Randall Parks to take charge.

Agreement by the Sheriff followed a three-hour conference with Governor Small, Adjutant General Black, Attorney General Carlstrom and five Supervisors from Williamson County. The Supervisors expressed the belief that Galligan's withdrawal would result in a definite peace.

The agreement also included a provision for the revocation of all special deputy commissions except those issued to men guarding coal mines and property.

RECALLS MITCHELL FOR MORE EVIDENCE

House Committee Will Hear Him and Drum Today on Aviation Policies.

NEW OUTBURST IN HOUSE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The House Select Committee investigating the Federal air service voted today to request Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, Assistant Chief of the Army Air Service, storm centre of the current controversy, to appear before it tomorrow morning.

General Mitchell, whose assignment for another four years after March 26 has been held up pending consideration of a statement he has been called upon to submit to Secretary Weeks to back his earlier testimony before the Select Committee, will be questioned further about the Army Air Service by the committee members. Brig. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, organizer of the Meuse-Argonne offensive and an Assistant Chief of Staff of the army, who, in his own testimony before the committee, has been challenging the creation of a united air service as proposed by General Mitchell, will also be asked to testify tomorrow.

It is said that both officers will be closely questioned tomorrow about an air operation on a large scale directed by Mitchell in the Meuse-Argonne advance. Representative Perkins pointed out today that General Drum has already testified that General Mitchell did not succeed on that occasion, in spite of using 300 planes. He added that this operation had been cited by the War Department in its opposition to the Curry bill for a single Federal air service, which is still awaiting consideration by the House Military Committee.

The committee, which seems to lean strongly toward the cause espoused by General Mitchell in the present controversy, and was considering the introduction of a resolution in censure of alleged intimation of army and navy witnesses, today decided for the present not to do so. Instead it decided to indicate its confidence in the position of General Mitchell by calling upon him to restate his position.

General Mitchell was a frank witness on his previous appearances before the committee. His testimony so bristled with criticism of the air policy of the War Department and of what he characterized as the "conservatism" of the army, that he has been called upon by the Secretary of War to substantiate his assertions. Unless General Mitchell changes overnight it is expected that his testimony tomorrow will be equally lively.

The decision of the committee was reached in an executive session which took up the whole day. When it met today it received from Secretary Wilbur a denial that any naval officer has been intimidated concerning testimony before Congressional committees. Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, also wrote denying that officers of the Naval Air Service had been interfered with in the fullest expression of opinion when testifying.

"I am fully conscious that an officer should be subject to discipline," said Representative Perkins, the chief committee examiner, after the receipt of

J. D. ROCKEFELLER JR. SUBSCRIBES $500,000 TO CATHEDRAL FUND

ACTION INSPIRES WORKERS

TOTAL IS NOW $6,567,975

Rich and Poor, Young and Old, Help City-Wide Drive to Raise the $15,000,000 Needed.

A donation of $500,000 by John D. Rockefeller Jr. to the fund to complete the Cathedral of St. John the Divine was announced last night by Bishop William T. Manning. This, the largest individual gift, sped the campaign toward the $7,000,000 mark on the way to the goal of $15,000,000. The total of the fund is now $6,567,975.

Bishop Manning made the announcement at a meeting in Grace Church, Vyse Avenue and 177th Street, the West Farms section of the Bronx, held to permit the Bronx parishes to report on the canvass of the borough's churchgoers.

"Mr. Rockefeller's noble gift," the Bishop said, "will be very greatly appreciated by our whole city and by all who are interested in the building of the cathedral. This addition to the building fund is not only a very great help in itself, but will inspire others and will give still greater confidence to the army of workers who are giving their time and their help in this great cause."

It was announced that $75,000 of Mr. Rockefeller's contribution would be applied to the credit of the petroleum group of the business men's division. This group is headed by C. E. Arnott. The business men's quota of the campaign is $2,500,000, and this sum will be devoted to the cost of the west front of the cathedral. The remainder of Mr. Rockefeller's donation will go to the general building fund.

All Workers Enthusiastic.

"We have had great encouragement since I was here with you last Thursday night," said Bishop Manning, "and nothing has given me more pleasure than the spirit shown by the churches and the people in the Bronx. I have carried to the other groups your message that you are making progress but that you have only just got well under way, and they have received this with enthusiasm and have charged me to bring the same message from them to you.

"We are all agreed, I know, that now that the interest is so wonderfully aroused and the whole country has the vision of the cathedral before it, we must continue our work and must not even consider stopping until the work is completed. And I am able to report to you and to all our army of workers that the work is going forward most encouragingly. The interest is not waning—it is waxing—and the campaign is being pushed more strongly than at any time since it began.

"We shall, I am sure, be able to make an inspiring report of the progress made during this week and we shall go on to still greater progress next week."

Subscriptions and pledges amounting to $16,377.61 were reported as follows:

Bill to Prevent Park Grabs Without Vote Of Citizens Is Offered by Senator Straus

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—Senator Straus, Democrat, of New York City, introduced a bill today directed against repeated attempts to encroach upon park areas in New York City. The latest notable move in that direction was made by the Hylan Administration, having for its object the setting aside of a section of Central Park, bordering on Fifty-ninth Street, as a site for a muncipal art centre.

That project was defeated, but it has been urged that with home rule in effect there might be a revival, if not of this, of other proposals involving an invasion of the city's parks.

Senator Straus, who has been active in the work at the Capitol which now is culminating in the expenditure of millions for the acquisition of park lands by the State and a coordination of the management of parks under the State Council of Parks, provides in his bill that no park space in New York City shall be taken for other purposes until after the proposal has been sanctioned by the voters.

In a clause which is made a new subdivision in the referendum section of the Home Rule Enabling act, the bill provides that a referendum shall be prerequisite to the enactment of any law by the Municipal Assembly which "involves the alienation or leasing of park property or land within any park, or the erection or use of any building or structure therein, unless essential to park uses."

"I do not believe," Senator Straus said in explanation of his bill, "that buildings should be erected in city parks without an affirmative vote of all the people of the city. The purpose of my amendment to the Home Rule law is to make it impossible to erect any building in a city park, except with the approval of the majority of the people of the city.

"The few breathing spots in the more congested areas of our larger cities are subject to constant attacks, often by well-meaning persons. The more crowded the neighborhood in which the park lies, the more subject is that park to the pressure of encroachments. Just those parks which are most needed are most in danger. If this bill becomes a law, it will not be possible to erect any building on any park property without the consent of the people of the city."

Army Deserter Gets Pardon After Ten Years, Which He Spent Disguised in Woman's Garb.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The recently voted amnesty bill pardoning certain categories of French army deserters have had one unexpected consequence about which the populous Paris district of Batignolles is all agog today.

Mlle. Suzanne Langlard, widely popular during the last ten years and better known to her many friends by the sobriquet of "La Garçonne," discarding her pretty frocks and donning drab male attire marched to a police station and announced:

Then he told the strange story of his life during recent years under the disguise of a woman. Wounded in the hand in November, 1914; accused of self infliction of the injury, court-martialed and acquitted, Corporal Grappe, nevertheless, was broken from his rank and ordered to change his regiment. He could not stand this and deserted.

He came to Paris, where he hid in his wife's apartment for two years. During that time he cultivated a falsetto voice, removed his mustache by electricity and let his hair grow. He also learned dressmaking and attained skill in dress designing.

Finally he ventured forth, passing for a friend of his wife. His bobbed hair gave "Suzanne" a boyish air, earning the name of "Garçonne." For several years he had been working in a dressmaking establishment, his fellow-workers never suspecting anything.

"I was glad when I found my case included in the amnesty bill, as I was tired of wearing women's clothes," he told the police—but he was so used to the subterfuge that he continued to talk in the soprano voice which he had adopted. "I am glad I am again a free man," he concluded.

PROPHET DEFERS END OF WORLD ONE WEEK

Will Only Begin Tonight, Says Reidt, for Saints on Other Planets Must Be Mobilized.

SEES 7 DAYS OF WONDERS

The end of the world will not take place at midnight tonight. It will be only the beginning of the end.

Robert Reidt of East Patchogue, L. I., who has been preparing himself, his family and thirteen devout disciples for an ascension at midnight, made a new interpretation last night and it now looks as if the world had another week to go. There's no certainty about it—this business of another week—but that is the way it looked to Reidt.

Meantime, Brother Downs of Yaphank, a farmer who is the most earnest of Reidt's adherents in the sect of Seventh Day Reformed Adventists, put a price of $5 on his last possession, a bicycle, and announced the line of flight of the 144,000 "Brides of the Lamb" who are to survive on a California hilltop near San Diego.

And marked uncertainty—rather a grave thing where a world's end is concerned—developed among the other Reformed Seventh Day Adventists throughout the country. Some were busy starching their ascension robes last night; others, like Reidt, were just resting on their prospective wings, while the bona fide Seventh Day Adventists who have steadfastly frowned on the pretensions of the little band, continued to scoff at their predictions. In fact, the Rev. A. G. Daniels, General Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, said that the doomsday followers of Mrs. Margaret Rowen, who set Feb. 6 midnight as the end of things, were "honest, but very stupid."

A Stream of Motorists.

Attracted by the widespread publicity given to Reidt's announcement that this earth would cease to exist at midnight on Feb. 6, hundreds of persons motored out to East Patchogue last night and wended their way to the tumble-down shack outside the village to which Reidt, wife and two children moved when he sold his home and belongings. The narrow dirt road leading to the house was chocked with machines and Reidt finally emerged.

As he stepped into the glare of a headlight, Reidt's face showed the strain—not of the nearness of doom, but of talking all day and being photographed in a score of poses. In his soft voice there was a hint of irritation as though he wished the whole thing was over with.

"No," he said, "the world will not end in a flash at midnight tomorrow night. It will take seven days for that to happen. At midnight we—myself and my followers—will face the east. There will appear a cloud in the sky. It will be no larger than a man's hand. That will be Christ on his way from Heaven to earth. It will be the signal of the beginning of the end.

"It will take seven days for Him to reach us—"

Brother Downs, tall, angular and bent at the shoulders, moved forward. A sonorous "Amen" rumbled through his exceptionally heavy whiskers.

"Seven days, seven days," he rumbled.

"It will require," continued Reidt, "seven days for Him to reach us. He has stops to make on the way. One of these stops will be on the planet nearest Heaven. There arrangements will be made to feed those saints whom Christ will take back with Him. The journey back will take seven days and there will be stops at various planets to gather in more saints.

Invisible to Scoffers.

"Now, as to the cloud which we shall see tomorrow night: It will not be visible to the unbelievers. We shall see it, however, and it will be the first signal to us who are to be saved. Later, during the week other signs will come to me. They will come even if I am asleep, or eating or doing my chores. When the second signs come they shall be lifted up to journey in the care of angels to the mountain near San Diego."

It developed that music will play a part in the lifting up. In fact, music will be played all the way across the country. Reidt said that he had the instrument, an old zither, and that he would play the music for the celestial caravan. Mr. Reidt played the zither to demonstrate. It was not so good.

"When we have entered the gates I shall know how to play my golden harp," he said earnestly. "We shall all know how to play."

MORE POISON FOUND IN COLLEGE MYSTERY

ABNORMAL PERSON SOUGHT

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 5.—Discovery of a strange bottle of strychnine in the Ohio State University dispensary unlike the regular receptacles, finding of a second all-strychnine capsule and questioning of thirty-four of sixty-four students who worked in the dispensary, concerning the possible presence of an abnormal personality among them, were the outstanding developments today in the inquiry into the poisoned medicine which cost the lives of two students and made many others ill.

Dean Clair D. Dye of the College of Pharmacy found the new bottle of strychnine. It contained 300 grains of poison, he said, and might have been in the room for months.

On the bottle was a label bearing the word "strychnine," printed in ink. Across the top and bottom were two smaller labels, with "poison" printed upon them. All three might have been obtained from student supplies kept in the dispensary.

M. N. Ford, Secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy, has assigned inspectors to check up retail and wholesale druggists in Columbus in an effort to determine where the bottle came from. They face a difficult task, as retail druggists rarely carry more than a dram of strychnine in stock.

In the event of theft it would be difficult to trace the drug. All druggists are required by law to make note of the amount of strychnine sold, but in many instances no record of purchases is kept.

Second Poison Capsule Revealed.

While no one came under suspicion, another poison capsule was found during the afternoon. It was among those given to David I. Puskin of Canton, who died Sunday. Analysis made by Dr. Clayton S. Smith, of the College of Medicine of the capsule found in Puskin's room after his death by Dr. W. H. Humphrey showed that it contained four grains of the poison, enough to kill four persons.

The only other capsule, out of perhaps 300 in the dispensary's bottle, and analyzed chemically by university officials, found to contain poison was one turned in by Timothy J. McCarthy of Fremont, the first to be taken violently ill. But it is believed that still another capsule from this bottle was responsible for the poisoning of Charles H. Huls of Logan, the first student to die.

In the face of the difficulties of tracing the strychnine, the investigators, who now include, besides Prosecutor Chester, City Detectives Cox, Carsen and Archer and County Detective Jones, are placing their main reliance on testimony of students yet to be examined.

"I am still positive we are not dealing with an accident," Prosecutor Chester said tonight. "Nor do I see how a student with a normal mind could have been responsible."

None of the thirty-four students questioned today was able to throw any light on the mystery, except to exclude the theory that an outsider might have been responsible. All declared that the dispensary was never left unguarded, even if students were late to their classes.

Seek "Abnormal Personality."

The line of questioning, however, sought to develop a basis for the theory that an abnormal personality, a type of "super-intellectual" among the dispensary workers, had conceived and executed a diabolical "experiment."

Each student was asked whether he had ever noticed any member of the pharmacy class whose actions were unusual. Negative replies were received in every instance. But this angle of the inquiry will be pressed further when the examination of the other thirty students is taken up tomorrow.

Another question upon which emphasis was laid related to employment in drug stores during leisure hours. Perhaps one-third of the thirty-four students examined today declared that they have had such employment at one time or another.

With one exception the students testified that they never were permitted to dispense any kind of medicine without the sanction of an instructor actually in the dispensary. The one student, a girl, said that she had dispensed the "R. & W." ("Red and White") for quinine and aspirin capsules so many times in the last two years that of late she had not troubled to consult

Head of Yeast Firm, Stricken in Saddle, Dismounts and Falls Dead of Heart Disease.

TEAMMATES RUSH TO HIM

But Reach His Side Too Late to Aid—Body to Be Sent North in Private Car.

TWICE MAYOR OF CINCINNATI

Special to The New York Times.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5.—Julius Fleischmann, President of the Fleischmann Yeast Company, prominent in financial, philanthropic, social and sporting activities, fell dead here today on the Nautilus Polo Field while engaged in a game of polo. He was in his fifty-third year.

Seized by an attack of heart disease or apoplexy in the fourth chukker, undoubtedly brought on by the excitement and strenuousness of the match, Mr. Fleischmann suddenly got off his horse, and, while the other players were still battling for the ball, reclined on the ground.

For a moment or so he lay on the ground with his hand over his heart. When the other players became aware of Mr. Fleischmann's absence they rushed to his side, but he was already dead.

Captain H. C. C. Tippett, polo manager at the Flamingo Polo Club, where the Talbott polo tourney was in progress, announced that the game would be discontinued as a result of the misfortune and there will be no more polo here until further notice. While Captain Tippett said polo might be resumed next week, it is considered that the big program arranged for the season may be canceled entirely.

Doubtful About Joining Game.

Early today Mr. Fleischmann went to the office of Carl G. Fisher, developer of Miami Beach, and head of the Indianapolis Speedway. Both appeared frequently on the same team. During the conference between the two there was some doubt in Mr. Fleischmann's mind whether he should engage in the afternoon contest.

The game scheduled was the first of a series in a tournament for the prize offered by Harvey Talbott, Dayton, banker and a leader among polo players here. Mr. Fleischmann made up his mind at luncheon that he would play in number 1 position, instead of Mr. Fisher, and it was also decided that Mr. Fleischmann should be replaced some time during the game. It was his first contest since his recent arrival from Europe.

At 3 o'clock Mr. Fleischmann, J. C. Cooley, Earl Hopping and Arthur Cooley rode upon the Nautilus Fields under the colors of the Pastimers. They were opposed by the Rovers, made up of H. A. Prout, F. Bontecou and Lieutenant P. A. Rhodes and Major L. A. Beard of the Army Polo team.

At the end of the second chukker, or after fifteen minutes of play, Mr. Fleischmann was noticeably wearied, but at the beginning of the third period he rode on to the field laughing and joking with his teammates, and extended to all those engaged in the game an invitation to join him after the contest in a party at his new home on the bay front.

Asked for Drink of Water.

He rode during the first half of the game of eight chukkers, and the brief interval of ten minutes between the fourth and fifth chukkers appeared to rest him completely. Soon after riding onto the field to begin a new period of play, however, he stopped his pony, dismounted and sat upon the grass. Arthur Cooley, nearest Mr. Fleischmann at the time, dismounted and went to the latter's side.

Mr. Fleischmann asked for water, and in an instant sank to the grass. He was unconscious when Mr. Cooley raised his head.

Dr. Augustus J. Mitchell of Newark, a spectator at the game, rushed on the field and endeavored to administer first aid. Dr. Mitchell announced that death had come and that it was due to heart disease or apoplexy.

The body was later removed from the Miami Beach Winter home to Miami for

CONNECTICUT CELL NOW HOLDS CHAPMAN

SILENT THROUGH JOURNEY

Accomplice Will Testify Against Him When Case Comes Before Court in March.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 5.—Gerald Chapman, the notorious bandit, wanted for the murder of James Skelly, a New Britain policeman, last Oct. 12, arrived at the State prison at Wethersfield this afternoon in the custody of two officers from the Atlanta Penitentiary and will remain there until a writ of habeas corpus releases him from Federal jurisdiction to the State of Connecticut.

His trial for first degree murder, for which an indictment has already been returned, will begin in the Hartford County Superior Court March 3, or soon afterward.

State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, who went to Washington in a successful effort to have the Department of Justice agree to Chapman's removal here after his recapture in Indiana, is confident Chapman will be convicted on the evidence in hand and that he will be hanged in the prison where he is tonight.

Probably the chief witness against him will be his partner, Walter Shean, a young business man of Springfield, who was caught when Chapman escaped after killing Skelly and who has been held in jail ever since on a charge of murder.

From the time he was taken from the Atlanta Penitentiary at 8 o'clock yesterday morning until he arrived here about 2:30 this afternoon Chapman spoke not one word, according to Deputy Warden George C. Hughes, to whom the tall, lanky prisoner was handcuffed, and S. M. Leisell, a guard, who completed the party.

They arrived at Pennsylvania Station, in New York City, about 9 o'clock this morning and walked casually out of the main entrance to a taxi, which took them to the Grand Central Station. There they remained for nearly two hours without being observed, waiting for a train which left New York at 11 o'clock.

On arrival at the Hartford railroad station, the guards bundled their prisoner past a small crowd of curious people into a taxicab, which quickly took them the four miles to the prison, in Wethersfield. Warden Henry K. W. Scott then notified the State's Attorney's office in this city. This was the first intimation that Mr. Alcorn or his assistants had that Chapman had even been ordered transferred to Wethersfield by the Department of Justice.

At the prison serial number 11,167 was assigned to Chapman and he was locked in a cell in a general section with several hundred other prisoners. No work will be given him tomorrow, and it is possible he may not be assigned to prison labor because of the court ordeal ahead of him.

State's Attorney Alcorn said tonight he would make no move in the case this week, but probably next week he would file a motion of habeas corpus for Chapman. It will be heard not in the United States court but in a State court in this city, with the United States Government represented by District Attorney John Buckley, who, under instructions from Washington, will not oppose Mr. Alcorn's demand for Chapman.

Chapman, although being held along with other prisoners, is to be carefully watched and guarded and positively no chances will be taken with him, according to County Detective Edward J. Hickey, who is gathering evidence and summoning witnesses for Mr. Alcorn. Besides Shean, many detectives and policemen who have had contact with Chapman will be called as witnesses and for the specific New Britain crime the New Britain witnesses will be Police Chief Williiam Hart, Detective Sergeant William P. McCue and Policemen John Leibert and William Atwater.

Opera Singers Guests at the Wrong Home; Tea With Mrs. Carnegie Instead of Otto Kahn

Two opera singers sailing yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner Albert Ballin told for the first time how they had been entertained by mistake at the home of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie several days ago instead of at the home Otto H. Kahn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The mistake was due to confusion of the two names by a taxicab driver, who did not understand the imperfect English of Frederick Schorr, a singer of the Metropolitan Opera.

Mr. Schorr and his wife, Mrs. Anna Scheffler Schorr, soprano of the Berlin State Opera, were invited by Mr. and Mrs. Kahn to a musical tea at the Kahn residence, 1,100 Fifth Avenue. Mr. Schorr gave the taxicab driver the name and address, but the driver thought he said Mrs. Carnegie.

When they were set down at the door of the Carnegie residence at Ninety-first Street and Fifth Avenue they did not discover the error. Mr. Schorr tells this story:

"As we stepped out of the car and entered the foyer of the beautiful home an attendant took our wraps, and we were escorted into the music salon. We were asked to be seated, as an organ number was being played, and when the selection was over a gentleman came over and bowed, asking our names.

"We told him the names and he looked very much puzzled. He went over to a woman who we thought was Mrs. Kahn, and she bowed toward us with equal bewilderment.

"When tea was served to us, and as no one seemed to know definitely who we were and why we were there, we began to be a little worried. It was not until almost half an hour had passed that we learned we were in the wrong house. We made our apologies to our unexpected hostess and hurried over to the Kahn residence, where the tea had already grown cold because of our delay."

75 MEN DRIVE SHAFT TOWARD CAVE VICTIM AS LAST RESCUE HOPE

15 FEET PROGRESS IN DAY

But Workers Fear That They Cannot Reach Explorer in Less Than Three Days.

GOVERNMENT EXPERTS AID

Special to The New York Times.

CAVE CITY, Feb. 5.—As a last hope of reaching Floyd Collins, imprisoned since Friday, seventy-five men started concentrated work today on a direct shaft from the hillside to the now sealed part of the cavern where the explorer is thought to be. Whether Collins, with his foot gripped by an eight-ton boulder and cut off from rescue through the cavern passage, is dead or alive is not known. It is generally thought he is no longer living.

It has been impossible to enter the cave since early this morning, when at least part of the floor of the passageway thrust itself upward to the roof, resulting in an impassable suture. This followed a new slide that barred the passage near the pinioned man.

Acting in this situation, the military authorities refused to permit further attempts on the part of men to enter the cavern, and work was begun on a shaft from the outside of the hill at a point hastily cleared of trees and brush.

There was talk tonight of using a dog to carry water to Collins if it developed that there was room for the animal to squeeze through anywhere, which is very doubtful.

Early to-morrow morning Joe Wheeler, a famous bloodhound, may be sent into the cave with a canteen hanging from his neck. It is just another of the last hope expedients being tried to sustain any spark of life that may exist in the imprisoned man.

But even if the dog did reach the captive the rescue workers doubt if Collins could take the water. He has little use of his arms and would probably be too weak to move to reach the canteen.

Tonight, before the black pit of the cave, grotesque machines of the most modern type were massed in the last effort to save the explorer. At midnight, with fifteen feet sunk, it was estimated there were still sixty to seventy that must be passed before the cavern containing Collins is reached.

Doctor Thinks Collins Will Die.

It was the consensus here tonight that the tiny crevice, blocked now from outside entrance through its tunnel, has proved the tomb of the man who has spent a third of his life in the subterranean channels of Central Kentucky.

Dr. William Haslett of Chicago said that the shock of realization that he was cut off from the outside world would be followed by pneumonia, which would bring death by 10 o'clock tomorrow.

And if Floyd Collins is not dead, it is possible his mind will have been affected by the experience. His chum, John Geralds, caveman of the same type as Collins, left him gibbering at dawn today when he slowly drew away for the last time from his lifelong friend.

Two minutes later an avalanche of rock sealed the narrow tunnel.

"Get me out, Johnny, old pal," Collins cried. "For God's sake, get me out and you and Oscar Logston take me back to Cave City. My God, Johnny, we were boys together. Don't fail me now."

"I'll be back, Floyd, don't worry, old man," Johnny answered.

Lieut. Gov. H. H. Denhart, who was sent here as the personal representative of Governor Fields to preserve order, gathered about him the best engineers of Kentucky as well as practical men from the coal mines of the South.

"We've ended all hope of reaching Collins by the easier method—through the cave's mouth," he said. "It is now up to you men to drill through the ground directly to Collins's side. Spare no expense. The purse-strings of Kentucky are open. Ask what you want."

And in a few minutes they started asking for men, more men.

100 Section Hands Join Crew.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad promptly shipped in one hundred section hands to augment the local volunteers. By noon a steady stream of machines and men was moving over the clay road from Cave City, 30 miles away—great caterpillar tractors, giant drum drills, hoisting derricks, wheelbarrows by the scores, and shovels and pickaxes. The Pan-American flier brought a gas engine on its observation platform. Huge trucks careened through the mud and plunged over the water-filled road in a long procession.

In the meantime, the more important work was done with a stubby lead pencil. The engineers foremost in this case, were measuring the earth and distances. Geologists aged in Kentucky's college service figured the strata of rock and earth between Collins and life, or burial. It took them hours to decide. Finally they were unanimous and a point only ten feet in front of the mouth of the cave was chosen as the most likely spot to mark where he lies under the surface.

Then down they started after the cave man who has been imprisoned by a falling boulder for 158 hours at midnight tonight, and who has not had a morsel to eat or drink for forty-eight hours.

In the bottom of this great natural amphitheatre wooden runways were constructed from the point of excavation to a dumping place 100 feet away. Then the diggers started down through four of five feet of muck until the hard rock was reached and the monotonous procession of drawn-faced men and their barrows started for the dump. Dynamite is being used to crack the rock. The experts are making the charge as light as possible, but they admit there is serious danger that the first charge was shook enough to loosen an avalanche of the shale ceiling on top of the victim.

"It's the only thing we can do," said R. T. Carmichael, mining expert in charge. "If we don't hurry he'll die anyway. If he's not already dead we have some chance that the dynamite will not tear the rock loose over him."

Through the night Dr. Haslett and his force of assistants kept vigil beside the torchlit pit. Through the murky smoke and splashing in the muck they cared for the exhausted workers as they toppled over, guarding against diphtheria and pneumonia.

Adrenalin will be used on Collins, even if life seems to be extinct, Dr. Haslett asserted. No means will be spared to save the man for whom the light of six long days and nights has focussed the eyes of the nation upon this little hamlet of the hills.

Government Lends Experts.

Today saw amateurs and good-hearted Kentuckians of this region cleared out of the pit. With the arrival of Lieut. Gov. Denhart and his staff, the military authorities were put in complete charge. None but laborers, officials, engineers and newspaper men was allowed in the pit proper.

It will take at least thirty-six hours, perhaps forty-eight hours, to reach the body of the man sought. By that time, they are convinced, Collins will be dead. A small hope keeps them driving.

Tragic romance entered the picture today. In a log cabin behind Floyd Collins's prison, a mountain woman waits for him. No roads run to her home and muleback is the only transportation. The girl, Miss Alma Clark, was his sweetheart, and they planned to wed, his friends said, as soon as Floyd had won his fortune by his cave discoveries.

Geralds Seeks a New Entrance.

CAVE CITY, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—John Geralds, one of Floyd Collins's chums who has led rescue parties into Sand Cave repeatedly since Saturday, set out this afternoon to find another entrance to the cave.

"Collins had often expressed the belief that there was another passage to the cavern," he said, "and while the others are putting down the shaft I am going to do all I can to find another entrance."

Military authorities in command at the cave entrance and supervising the mine project warned Geralds not to enter Sand Cave again. They will not prohibit him from entering any other crevices or sink holes he may find, it was understood, but told him to use his own judgment.

Lee Collins, father of the victim, surveyed the situation today with sorrow. His money was gone—gone for food and corralls for the volunteer workers who have been into the cave again and again since last Saturday.

An appeal for financial aid was made today by Ray Turner, Magistrate, and A. C. Young in behalf of the rescuers and Cave City residents. S. D. Caldwell, President of the People's Bank, was designated treasurer of the fund.

Electricity is still being fed into the cave through a wire which was attached to heat pads placed around Collins. If the prisoner lives and the wire was not severed by today's uplift there may be heat and light for the prisoner.

At 2:30 this morning he repeatedly mumbled, "I am covered with dirt," and called for his mother, who is dead, and his brothers. An hour and a half later a worker reported having heard Collins call:

"Oh, God, help me!"

The excavation now under way, while extremely hazardous to Collins's safety, is by no means without peril to miners, who may strike the huge cavern Collins said he found and instantly plunge eighty feet or more into the depths of its darkness.

Suspend Diggers in Hammocks.

Seventy-five men were in the crew which started the shaft. An automatic air compressor and drill, brought to Cave City Monday by Lieutenant Burden of the Louisville Fire Department for use in the cave, will be brought into play when miners hit the expected solid rock.

Two steam drills reached Sand Cave this afternoon and will be placed in operation when the rock strata in the shaft become too solid to be moved with crowbars or picks. Plans to blast also were discussed with the understanding that only small charges of powder could be used without danger of vibration jarring down boulders within the cavern.

Fear of dropping into the huge underground hall, which Collins told his rescuers he had found a short distance behind where he was caught, has been offset somewhat by a scheme evolved to meet the situation. Miners working in the shaft will be placed in hammocks and cradles, suspended from above, to protect them in case the bottom of the mine drops into a cavern of unknown depth.

HORSE RELAYS SAVE FARMER

PENN YAN, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Harry Cole, a farmer of Crosby, on Keuka Lake, is in a Penn Yan hospital today with a chance for his life after having spent nine hours with a bullet in his back and making an eight-mile trip through snowdrifts to this village in a vehicle drawn by relays of sixteen horses.

Cole's thirteen-year-old son yesterday afternoon was cleaning a rifle which he thought was not loaded. A cartridge exploded, the bullet striking Cole, who was near by. A wide leather belt worn by the farmer is believed to have saved his life. The bullet passed through the belt, causing immediate paralysis below the waist.

Snow here is three feet deep on a level and drifted over the highways.

TAFT DROPS YALE POST.

Will Not Accept Renomination to Corporation or as Trustee.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 5.—William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, has declined to serve again as a member of the Yale Corporation or Trustee Board. His term expires in June and he has written Secretary Robert M. Hutchins of the university stating that he will not accept renomination, but giving no reason for his decision.

He was a member of the board before said to have been President, coming from Washington regularly to attend the corporation meetings. After the expiration of his term as President he resigned from the corporation because the Yale Law Faculty as Law School professor. He was re-elected to the corporation six years ago on leaving the Law School Faculty.

In an announcement of Mr. Taft's refusal to accept renomination Secretary Hutchins urged a large number of candidates to compete for the vacancy. Nominations will be filed until March 15 and the voting for the candidates nominated will take place at the commencement exercises in June.

TRIBUTE TO DR. ALEXANDER

The Rev. Dr. George Alexander, who has lately resigned as President of the Presbyterian Church Board of Foreign Missions, was the guest of the board at a dinner at the Hotel Astor last evening. He served as President for twenty-one years and has been a member for forty-one years. He is succeeded by the Rev. J. C. R. Ewing, who has served for a number of years as missionary in India and holds the honorary title of Knight Commander of the Indian Empire.

Alfred E. Marling, a member of the board, praised the venerable minister for his devotion and told him of the [illegible] in which he is held. Other speakers included Robert E. Speer and William T. Ellis. Dr. E. E. Cobb presided. The Presbyterian Board has 1,000 missionaries in fifteen countries.

NOME HEALTH BOARD IS ANGRY AT BONE

TOO HAZARDOUS, HE SAYS

Mayor Blames Bureau Red Tape—Diphtheria Cases Now Total Thirty, Deaths Six.

NOME, Alaska, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Nome tonight had thirty cases definitely diagnosed as diphtheria in the epidemic that began ten days ago. The deaths reached six last night.

Following a meeting of the Board of Health, at which a telegram from Governor Bone, stating that the "situation does not warrant immediate use of airplanes" to bring diphtheria antitoxin here from Nenana was considered, Mayor G. S. Maynard issued a statement saying:

"This is a matter of life and death, not dollars and cents. With the fifty-eight varieties of Government bureaus with headquarters in Washington that have dominance over Alaska, it is the same old story of one bureau treading on another's toes."

"A large supply of serum will not reach Nenana (referring to one million units sent from Seattle yesterday on the steamship Admiral Watson) until Tuesday," said the Governor's message. "Three hundred thousand units of serum will be sent from Nenana. I will be governed by developments until Tuesday. Please advise Dr. Curtis Welch."

Dr. Welch informed the Board of Health that he had used 87,000 of 300,000 units of serum received Monday by the dog teams. He said 38,000 units were used the first day and 43,000 Tuesday. The Board of Health pointed out that if Governor Bone's program was longer than the executive expected, the town would be without antitoxin for a longer period than at the start of the epidemic.

The board and Dr. Welch emphasized in a statement that 1,100,000 units of serum, due in Nenana Tuesday from Seattle, should be divided and 600,000 units be sent on by airplane and the balance by regular rail schedule. Dr. Welch said that if his program was adhered to a regular supply of serum would be assured the city until the opening of the navigation season in the Spring. Conditions are favorable here for flying.

"If the people of Nome are compelled to wait until Governor Bone can make up his mind that conditions are really serious and conditions warrant sending serum by airplane, we might as well constitute the Governor the head of Nome's Health Board, administering orders by long distance government, which may be likened to the distance between Seattle and New York, not by mail connection but by dog team service across the continent," Mayor Maynard informed the board.

Leonard Seppala, one of the mushers who helped in delivering 300,000 units of serum here Monday, returned today. He made light of his exploits, saying that Gunnar Casson, who ran the last relay in a blizzard in which he missed a relief driver and covered two stages, was the man to be lauded.

Seppala reported that along the coast of Norton Sound, east and south of here, Eskimo villages were quarantining themselves against diphtheria from Nome.

Funeral services are to be held tomorrow for Mrs. R. C. McDowell, who died last night. Her husband, who is correspondent for a press association, and her baby have diphtheria. The father showed some improvement today.

Bone Advises Against Plane.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Governor Bone of Alaska notified Secretary Work today that the Territorial Government was able at the present time to handle the diphtheria emergency at Nome.

Asserting the supply of antitoxin sent by dog team to Nome was adequate for at least ten days, Governor Bone informed the Secretary of the Interior that another consignment of antitoxin would soon be on its way for regular delivery by dog team. He advised against the use of an airplane to transport serum except in most extreme emergency. He said such an attempt would be a most hazardous undertaking because the present flying equipment in Alaska was inadequate and only unskilled fliers were available.

"Larger consignments of antitoxin from the Public Health Service and the American Red Cross are due at Nenana on the 10th of February," Governor Bone added. "The situation is improving at Nome.

SMITH'S RESIGNATION EXPECTED IN HUNGARY

Commissioner Is Declared to Think League Program Impossible of Success.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Feb. 5.—According to reliable information gathered in diplomatic circles, it is quite likely that Jeremiah Smith will resign his post as Commissioner General of Hungary in the near future.

Mr. Smith has recovered from a nervous breakdown caused by the stupendous task of bringing order in Hungarian finance, but feels it impossible to make a success of the League reconstruction scheme in Hungary. It is improbable that Mr. Smith will openly state this, but will find a plausible excuse for resignation either during the financial conference at Geneva or after returning to Budapest.

One complaint Mr. Smith makes is that he does not money to the different Ministries, but does not know how it is spent. Practically every Ministry is spending as much as in pre-war days. This even applies to the Ministry of War, when the army has been officially reduced to a minimum. According to one item of the budget, each soldier receives four newspapers daily.

Every one in Budapest feels there is a mystery in the Hungarian situation. The revenues from taxes are enormous, but it is difficult to trace expenditures. The Interallied Military Control should have disbanded long ago, but they also are faced by uncertainty and are convinced that preparations for war are being carried on, although it is impossible to trace any serious signs.

Some people are convinced that preparations are going on outside of the country and that there are perhaps even arrangements with the Soviets. Soviet commissions arrive frequently in Budapest on vague pretexts.

The League is likely to have its hands full at the next Council meeting in March, as the Austrian Government will then confess its inability to keep the pledges made at the last Council meeting by Chancellor Seipel and must ask for the raising of a so-called normal budget. The situation, in fact, is considered critical, although the loan is believed perfectly safe.

WILL BAN TROTSKYITES IN RED ARMY AND NAVY

Soviet Orders Expulsion of Active Adherents and Transfers Trotsky's Sympathizers.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—All the adherents of Trotsky in the Soviet army and navy are to be deprived of their posts by the Soviet Central Committee, according to an order in a recent copy of the Soviet official organ Pravda just received here. This committee is the highest Soviet organization, including in its membership Stalin, Kameneff and Zinovieff. The order is to be carried out by the Control Commission, a body standing above even the Cheka.

All active Trotskyites in the army and navy are to be discharged and exiled, while those not actively supporting Trotsky but merely sympathizing with his views will be transferred to posts whence they can exert little influence.

Reports received here from Russia state that in Orel Province there are now 40 per cent. fewer schools than a year ago. Fifty-eight thousand children of school age in the rural districts of Orel Province and 27,000 in the cities there cannot go to school. Only 15 per cent. of the Orel provincial budget is devoted to education.

Speeches were made by the departing Ambassador and by Mr. Kahn, the banker's remarks embodying the wishes for continued progress by Italy as expressed by those present. The group consisted of leading Americans in the fields of banking, railroad and industrial life.

SAYS STOKES AGENT APPROACHED JURORS

Judge Hears of Talk With a Man on the Panel, and Warns Both Sides.

MRS. STOKES CAN'T TESTIFY

Barred by Law in Trial of Her Husband for Conspiracy—Mother Will Replace Her.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—After only three jurors had been chosen today in the trial of W. E. D. Stokes and others, accused of conspiracy to defame Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, Judge William N. Gemmill called counsel to the bench and said he had been informed of efforts to communicate with prospective jurymen by an investigator in Stokes's employ.

Turning to Jacob Manassee, employed by Stokes, Judge Gemmill said:

"I am informed that you were talking to prospective jurymen. I warn you if anything like that is proved here you will be heavily punished. Every precaution must be taken against jury tampering."

Stokes's investigator was quick to assert his denials, and Stokes's attorney, Charles F. Rathbun, angrily blamed the State's attorneys, Milton D. Smith and W. W. Smith, for the accusation.

Judge Gemmill said that while he knew nothing of what Manassee might have said to the veniremen, and had no direct evidence that he had approached any, yet the thing had been reported to him and he wanted to deliver an unmistakable warning. The warning included the investigator for the State as well, Judge Gemmill said.

Venireman Recalled Everleigh Club.

The venireman said to have been approached by the Stokes investigator had told on examination that the trial "brought back recollections, particularly of the Everleigh Club." He was a decorator, he said.

"I didn't talk to him until after he was disqualified as a juror and excused," Manassee said. "Then I wanted to find out if he decorated the Everleigh Club walls."

Stokes is said to have a picture of his young wife, with a peculiar kind of wall fixture in the background, and it is believed he seeks to prove that paper was used in the Everleigh Club.

Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes of Denver, who successfully defended her name and obtained a divorce suit in New York, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Arthur Scott Miller.

Though Mrs. Stokes is the State's principal aid, she probably will not take the stand, it was announced during the day. The law prohibits a wife from testifying against her husband.

It was at first thought Mrs. Stokes's testimony might be used as applying against her husband's three codefendants, his former attorney, Daniel F. Nugent, and two colored persons, Mrs. Hattie Johnson and Robert H. Lee. But Supreme Court decisions discourage this procedure, it was said, and Mrs. Stokes a fight against her accuser must be a silent one.

The jurymen were asked today if the slight of a pretty woman, perhaps a weeping woman, in the courtroom would affect their judgment. They had to assert their immunity to womanly charms and tears before they were accepted.

Mother to Tell Mrs. Stokes's Story.

The State's prosecutors say they have another witness who will tell the same story that Mrs. Stokes would have told to refute her husband's charges of immorality. The witness is Mrs. Miller, her mother. She is expected to tell that during the time Stokes charged his wife was in an immoral resort in Chicago Mrs. Stokes was with her in Denver and in other cities.

VATICAN-QUIRINAL ROW CONTRADICTED IN ROME

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Feb. 5.—A reported dispute involving the Vatican and the Quirinal, arising out of the visit of the Chilean President here, is without foundation. The story was printed in foreign newspapers.

At the request of President Alessandri, both the Vatican and the Quirinal have issued statements to the effect that they regarded the Chilean Executive's visit as entirely private, as he is traveling incognito; therefore the question of precedence has not arisen, as it would in the case of a foreign chief of State traveling officially.

The story was probably suggested by the fact that the Osservatore Romano, official Vatican organ, printed a report of Señor Alessandri's visit to the Vatican and laid stress on the fact that he visited the Pope before visiting the King, while, as a matter of fact, the contrary is the truth.

At that time Señor Alessandri intended to go to Florence for a couple of days, afterward returning to Rome in his official capacity as a guest of the King. In that case he would have followed the etiquette which prescribes that heads of Catholic States must visit the Pope within twenty-four hours of their arrival in Rome, starting from the embassy accredited to the Holy See, not from the Quirinal.

As President Alessandri suddenly decided to leave for Chile sooner than expected, this plan was abandoned.

THREAT BY BARMAT TO INVOLVE OTHERS

Financier Said to Have Startling Revelations—Letter Names Ex-Chancellor Bauer.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—Julius Barmat, one of the four brothers arrested recently in connection with the Prussian State Bank credits case—which vies with the Ruhr credits case as Germany's sensation of the hour—has threatened to make startling revelations against some of those involved in the case, it is reported on reliable authority. Barmat is said to have been moved toward taking this step by failure in his efforts to regain his liberty. It is reported he has damaging evidence against ex-Minister of Posts Hoofie and Reichstag Member Lange-Hegermann, which he will use if driven to it.

Another sensation is sprung in the Barmat case this afternoon by the Lokal-Anzeiger, which publishes a letter alleged to have been written in 1923 from a concern headed by the Barmats to the prominent Socialist leader Bauer, formerly German Chancellor, which is intended to show he derived pecuniary benefit from his association with the Barmats though he denied having so benefited when questioned by the legislative committee investigating the Barmat case. Incidentally, activities of this committee are being criticized as hindering the State Attorney investigation into the case. It is pointed out that those arrested daily read the evidence of witnesses before the legislative investigating committee and shape their answers to the State's Attorney, according to this evidence.

The Barmat case is still filling columns in the papers and being exploited politically by the Right parties against the Socialists, but so far has not yielded much that is definite, though it may easily develop into a first-class financial scandal.

IMITATE CATHOLICS, DR. SOCKMAN SAYS

DEPLORES CLASS TENDENCY

Protestants would do well to emulate the Catholics in locating their churches proper distances apart. They would also do well to imitate the Roman Catholic Church in the use of silence and symbols, architecture and order of service, the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of the Madison Avenue Methodist Church, declared yesterday in the Metropolitan Methodist Temple. He spoke before the Council of Cities, which opened a two-days' session under the auspices of the Methodist Board of Home Missions and Church Extension.

"The fact that there are so many denominational submarine minds, is one reason so many of our city churches have been sunk," said Dr. Sockman. "The Protestant Church would be turning its back on the lesson in efficiency taught us by our great sister communion, the Roman Catholic, if we were to think we could meet the city situation merely by individually successful pastors. The systematic extension and strategic location of the Roman churches is made possible by organization and generalship. In Baltimore last week a minister informed me that over 500 Protestant churches were ministering to a membership no larger numerically than that served by sixty-nine Roman Catholic churches. Such figures indicate the need of more efficient parish arrangement on the part of Protestants.

"We need church statesmen, spiritually tall enough to see over denominational fences. The church must hold strategic downtown centres. When the people for whom a church was built move away from a section, the church should not take up its bed and walk. True leadership will see that some downtown centres are held.

"In New York City the most significant pulpits are in the downtown sections. It is there that the church best touches the stream of life which moves through our metropolis to the ends of the earth. The suburbs and residential sections of the city should aid in maintaining strong pulpits and parishes at the centres of our cities. With the increasing exodus of city people over the week ends, it is becoming more and more necessary for the church to enlarge its ministry during the week days. Especially is this true of the downtown church.

"The typical city parish with its varied elements demands a diversified ministry. When it includes some members paying $25,000 a year rent for their apartments and others living two to a room in a dingy tenement, there is a diversity of need which cannot be treated in a wholesale way. It is utterly impossible for one man to serve a parish of any size efficiently in the city.

"A popular preacher may collect a crowd through publicity. But the collecting of a congregation is not the building of a church. And cities will not be saved by gathering receptive listeners around popular preachers.

"It is deplorable when a church becomes the organ of any one economic or social group in a community. When certain churches become known as 'rich men's churches' or others as 'poor men's churches,' we are defeating the ends of democracy and of spirituality.

"The Protestant Church should give more attention to its worship. We exalt too much the human voice of the preacher. One has described our Protestant Church services as articulation without punctuation. We might well learn some lessons from the ritual of the Roman Catholic Church which do appeal to the masses. More use of silence and of symbol; more worshipful architecture, more dignified orders of service—all these would be potent factors in strengthening the Churches message."

Leaves $50,000 to Aid Son in Firm.

The will of Charles Hathaway, head of Hathaway, Smith, Folds & Co., filed for probate yesterday, leaves $50,000 to his son, Stewart S. Hathaway, "to more easily finance himself in connection with membership in my firm." Cora S. Hathaway, the widow, of 580 West End Avenue, receives all personal effects and the income from the residue of the estate, after an annuity of $1,200 is provided for a sister, Ann H. Buckley. The value of the estate is not disclosed.

27 MORE PROMOTIONS ARE MADE BY ENRIGHT

Deputy Kelly to Become an Inspector and Two Lieutenants Will Be Raised to Captains.

Police Commissioner Enright last night notified Deputy Inspector Michael H. Kelly, Lieutenant John W. Donnelly and Lieutenant Edward M. Shelvey and eight sergeants, and sixteen patrolmen, whose names were not announced, to report to him this morning for promotion.

Deputy Inspector Kelly has been stationed with Inspector Byron R. Sackett, commanding the Fifth Division and will be promoted to the rank of inspector. Lieutenant Donnelly, who has been acting captain at the Oak Street station, will be made a captain. Lieutenant Shelvey has been acting captain at the Brooklyn Avenue station, Brooklyn, and will be promoted to captain.

The promotions will entail a number of other changes, which will probably be announced today. Commissioner Enright, also, in a special order, announced that First Grade Detective James J. Donlin had been reduced to the rank of patrolman. Donlin has been at the East Twenty-second Street station for a number of years and is well known on the east side. No reason for his demotion was made public. Donlin will be assigned to the Snyder Avenue station, Brooklyn.

PRUSSIAN PREMIER QUITS.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—Prussian Premier Braun notified the President of the Diet this afternoon that he was unable to form a Cabinet. His step followed the decision of the People's Party that it would have nothing to do with any Cabinet headed by a Premier from the Left or with any Cabinet along the so-called Weimar lines—Socialists, Centre and Democrats.

It appears probable that the next attempt to form a Prussian Government will be undertaken by the Centrist Horion, who is Chairman of the Provincial Diet in the Rhineland. The formation of a Government is rendered extremely difficult by the fact that, whereas a majority of a quorum in the Diet can elect a Premier, his Cabinet requires a vote of confidence of a majority of the whole body, which the Centre, Democrats and Socialists do not possess. It is freely predicted that the only way out of the difficulty must be dissolution of the Diet and new elections. In any event it is already practically certain that the Socialists, who heretofore have possessed the most important posts in the Prussian Cabinet, Premier and Minister of the Interior, will have much less influence in any Cabinet which can be formed.

A new Premier is to be elected on Tuesday.

DOLAN DENIES HE WILL SUE.

Says He Has Been Exonerated and Will Ask Reinstatement.

Cozy Dolan, former coach of the Giants baseball team, denied yesterday a statement attributed to his lawyer, William J. Fallon, that he was considering suing for damages and for reinstatement by Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, High Commissioner of Baseball. Dolan made the denial in the office of the National Exhibition Company, 15 West Forty-fourth Street, which owns the Giants. A few minutes before he talked with Frank Frisch, captain of the Giants, who, with Dolan and other Giant and Philadelphia players, had testified in the recent investigation of the baseball scandal held by Assistant District Attorney George N. Brothers.

Dolan said he considered the report by Mr. Brothers to District Attorney Joab H. Banton an exoneration of the charge attributed to Jimmy O'Connell that Dolan had instigated O'Connell's offering a $500 bribe to Heinie Sand, the Philadelphia shortstop, to "throw" a game.

"I'm going to await the return of Judge Landis from Panama," said Dolan, "and then I shall ask him to reinstate me to baseball in good standing on the basis of Mr. Brothers's report."

Those white shining teeth
Are they safe?

LOVELY, white teeth are safe from loss only if the gums are kept firm and healthy. If pyorrhea attacks your gums, an X-Ray reveals how quickly infection spreads to the root sockets which support the teeth. Your teeth fall out or must be pulled—unless pyorrhea is checked.

Tender, bleeding gums warn you of pyorrhea's attack. DENTAL clinics since 1908 have proved that Pyorrhocide Powder in a most effective dentifrice for checking, as well as preventing pyorrhea. It corrects bleeding gums, strengthens tender gums, hardens soft gums. It keeps the teeth white and clean.

Use Pyorrhocide Powder daily—see your dentist regularly—and you can avoid pyorrhea. The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists.

STONE IS CONFIRMED BY SENATE, 71 TO 6

been living in a department permeated with the "mephitic" atmosphere of Daugherty and he called attention to the fact that a number of Daugherty appointees remained in the department, and that John T. Pratt, an appointee of Daugherty and the man who presented the evidence against Senator Wheeler in Montana, had been assigned as special prosecutor in the case now being put before the District Grand Jury.

Senator Walsh was followed by Senator Heflin of Alabama, who for more than two hours leveled his oral guns on Mr. Stone for the part he played as counsel for the heirs of the late J. P. Morgan in the Ownbey case. Mr. Heflin contended that Mr. Stone appeared before the Supreme Court and argued that the courts of Delaware had been prostituted within their constitutional rights in refusing to hear evidence of Colonel James A. Ownbey of Boulder, Col., who had been sued by the Morgan estate because Colonel Ownbey could not put up $200,000 in special bail provided for under what is known as the custom of London compact.

Most of the argument against Mr. Stone in connection with the Ownbey case was made by Senator Heflin, who also said he would like to know why no prosecution had been brought against the United Gas and Improvement Company, mentioning that E. T. Stotesbury, of J. P. Morgan & Co., was interested in the corporation. Senator Heflin declared that it was brought out before a Senate committee that Mr. Stotesbury had contributed $5,000 to the Coolidge campaign fund and had collected an additional $50,000. Senator Heflin also wanted information about the attitude of Mr. Stone toward the Government's case against the Bethlehem Steel Company, controlled by Charles M. Schwab involving a recovery of about $13,000,000 alleged to be due on ship contracts in the World War.

Senator Heflin said he understood that lawyers for Mr. Schwab had been permitted to see the compaint, had objected to certain information contained in it and that the information was to be stricken out.

Senator Bruce, Democrat, of Maryland, announced that he would vote for Mr. Stone's confirmation, but believed that the Attorney General had made a serious mistake of judgment in bringing the proceedings for a second indictment against Senator Wheeler in the District of Columbia instead of in Montana. Had the charges been brought against himself, Senator Bruce said, he certainly would have expected trial in his home city, Baltimore, although it was but a short distance from the District. Only in that way, argued Mr. Bruce, could a defendant be assured of a fair trial, and it was his right to have the trial in the community where he lived and had won either the esteem or condemnation of his fellow-men.

Sees No Great Courage Needed.

"I have the very highest esteem for the Attorney General," said Senator Walsh. "The very excellent opinion I formed of him by reason of my connection with him, brief as it was, before this time, was confirmed by his demeanor before the Committee on the Judiciary; but in what respect did he display 'marvelous courage'?"

Senator Walsh said that the plan to seek an indictment against Senator Wheeler had been formed by Mr. Stone and it was "impossible for him to recede." Charges that any Senator had believed that the indictment proceedings could or would be dropped as a result of the opposition which had been developed to the nomination, said Senator Walsh, were unworthy of consideration.

"The Attorney General," continued Senator Walsh, "came before us and made his statement—a very plain, straightforward statement—but, as I believe, not stating all the material facts. What was I to do? Being in possession of the information, was I to remain dumb?

"I may also say that the impression is also carried from the newspaper reports to which I have adverted that in some way or other I was instrumental in bringing the Attorney General before the committee and subjecting him to the humiliation of being examined.

"I do not remember that any salt or crocodile tears were shed when day after day for a week or more people came before the Judiciary committee in open session and testified against the confirmation of the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis for a place upon the Supreme Court bench. I do not remember that there was any great grief exhibited over the humiliation either of Mr. Brandeis or of the Supreme Court in connection with the matter."

Says It Left False Impression.

Senator Walsh said that it had not been disclosed who went to Mr. Stone and asked him to appear before the Judiciary Committee, but that he had appeared and submitted a prepared statement. This statement, said Senator Walsh, was entirely accurate as far as it went, but did not state all the facts, and left, as I thought, a very mistaken impression.

For instance, Senator Walsh said the "statement by Mr. Stone left the impression that whatever delays had occurred in the trial of the case on the indictment found against Senator Wheeler in Montana were attributable to Senator Wheeler. Senator Walsh said his questioning had brought out further testimony, including a letter from Senator Wheeler to Mr. Stone on May 17, 1924, asking for a speedy trial, the reply by Mr. Stone and also a communication from the United States Attorney, John L. Slattery, at Great Falls, Mont. In the latter Slattery said that another investigation was being made and probably would take at least thirty days.

"He (Mr. Stone) is told that an investigation of Senator Wheeler is in progress, and that it will not be advisable to try the case against Senator Wheeler until that investigation is completed," said Senator Walsh.

"What does that mean? That means that there was an investigation of Senator Wheeler, of course, before the indictment was found, but they were quite well satisfied that they could not get a conviction against Senator Wheeler upon the testimony which they then had, and they were prosecuting another investigation to see whether they could not get enough to lead him, and they did not want to try him until that investigation was completed.

"The significant part of this matter is that the Attorney General, having received this answer from the District Attorney out in Montana, never communicated to Senator Wheeler upon the subject thereafter."

Moreover, continued Senator Walsh, "the Attorney General told us in his letter which he read that the proceedings in the District of Columbia were for an entirely different crime from the one charged against Senator Wheeler in the indictment pending in the court of Montana. But upon inquiry of the Attorney General with respect to that matter which I conducted it was disclosed that although the proceedings in the District of Columbia were for an entirely different crime, that ended the whole proposition. The whole question, the whole case against Mr. Stone absolutely fell under the plain statement that it was a different crime. There is no reference in the editorial to the fact, as I have stated, that the transaction is one and the same. I want to call particular attention to the concluding paragraph of the editorial as follows:

"Mr. Stone's calm and clear explanations leave Senator Walsh in a very embarrassing situation. He is counsel for Senator Wheeler. But he is also the great defender of the oil lands owned by the Government against all corporators. It would be cruel to place him in the position of preventing as a lawyer the fullest inquiry into an oil scandal of the sort which he, as Senator, had proclaimed to be the crime of the ages.

"Well, Mr. President," added Senator Walsh, "THE NEW YORK TIMES in its editorial columns has never had any sympathy whatever with the inquiry into the leases of naval oil reserves. It has in that respect been at war constantly as between its editorial page and its news columns. But Senator Walsh, notwithstanding the statement of THE TIMES, suffers no embarrassment whatsoever. Indeed, I feel that I am engaged in this matter in exactly the same work that I was a year ago.

"Moreover, I can entertain no doubt that the distrust and suspicion engendered in the public mind concerning the condition of affairs in the official life of Washington that was aroused by the revelations made by the Public Lands Committee in connection with the investigation of naval oil reserves was responsible for the action of the Senate upon the reason of my colleagues urging an inquiry into the Department of Justice.

"While he was prosecuting that inquiry and bringing to life the iniquities, the rascalities that characterized that transaction, and I am sure for the purpose of arresting these proceedings and bringing to bear upon them an adverse public opinion, he was indicted in the District Court of Montana and indicted there and now attempt to try there when another indictment against him in the District of Columbia is sought.

Lists Five Investigations.

"My colleague (Senator Wheeler) has been well investigated. He must have been investigated before the indictment was found against him in Montana. I have just read a letter that thereupon the District Attorney out in Montana undertook a further investigation of him. In the meanwhile there was investigation by a committee of the Senate, the third investigation. The Attorney General told us that when he went into office he consulted with the investigator for Senator Wheeler and that a report upon that investigation was submitted to him the first of August last. Apparently there was not yet enough evidence gathered together to warrant them in going into trial against Senator Wheeler and the matter was turned over to his assistant, Mr. Donovan, who conducted a fifth investigation of Senator Wheeler.

"It would seem that if Senator Wheeler is innocent he has nothing to fear from a jury in the District of Columbia. Well, has he or has he not anything to fear? Senator Wheeler agreed to do certain work for Mr. Caudwell for which he was to have a fee of $10,000. According to his story, and I have no doubt in the world that it is true, that service was to be rendered exclusively before the courts in the State of Montana before which Mr. Campbell had pending a large amount of litigation. Senator Wheeler actually entered upon that work and did the work there and he asserts that he had nothing whatever to do with anything pending in the District of Columbia or to arise there.

"Presumably there is something to be said upon the other side of it, some facts, some circumstances may be adduced in evidence tending to indicate that perhaps it did include work in the District of Columbia, and the question will be as between Senator Wheeler, who devised the matter on the one side, and such facts and circumstances as may be adduced in support of the other theory, and the question is to be determined by a jury as to which theory is to be believed, and that is what we complain about.

"We complain that a jury impaneled in the District of Columbia under the circumstances presumably would not be so impartial and fair in the matter as it ought to be. But some facts and circumstances brought to my attention, Mr. President, lead me to be cautious—particularly as five times of late they have tried to get evidence against Senator Wheeler—for perjured testimony in this case. Accordingly a question of veracity may arise as between Senator Wheeler on the one side and a witness or witnesses upon the other side. I want to have that case tried before a jury free from the influences to which I have adverted that obtain here in the District of Columbia.

Sees Many Daugherty Appointees.

"Mr. President, the Attorney General enjoys a deserved reputation for justice, for probity, and for high character. I would not have any one understand that I question that in any particular, but it will be observed that the Attorney General does not go out into the State of Montana or into the State of California or any other places in order to gather up the evidence which is laid before him. That is all done by his subordinates.

"The investigations in bringing forward the testimony which comes before the Attorney General are all conducted by the Bureau of Investigation. The head of the bureau of investigation is a man who held that place all through the Burns régime and during the complete term of the Daugherty administration of that office.

"More than that, Mr. President, there still remains in the Department of Justice a whole group of appointees brought there by Mr. Daugherty, his friends and political backers. There is Rush L. Holland, who came from the State of Colorado and, as I am informed, was a boyhood friend of Daugherty in the State of Ohio. There is a man by the name of Martin, there who occupies a position next to the Attorney General. One goes through his office in order to get into the office of the Attorney General. There is a man there by the name of Johnson, brought there by Daugherty; there is another man by the name of Strong, another by the name of Galloway. All of these are hold-overs.

"More than that, Mr. President, the newspapers within the last day or two announced that the prosecution before the Grand Jury in the District of Columbia is to be under the direction of John T. Pratt, who is special prosecutor in the case.

"Mr. Pratt is an appointee of

WORLD COURT HOPES DIE IN COMMITTEE

After Long Wrangle Swanson Says He Sees No Chance for Action at This Session.

THREE PROPOSALS DEBATED

Prospect of Hard Fight Discourages Any Attempt to Take Up Question of American Membership.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The World Court proposal virtually was laid on the shelf today by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee so far as this Congress is concerned.

A two hours' discussion got the committee nowhere and afterward Senator Swanson of Virginia, the ranking Democrat on the committee, said he saw no reason for pressing his court membership proposal as there was no possibility of action before March 4.

Several members took the view that since the Pepper resolution for American adherence had been reported to the Senate, further action by the committee is unnecessary. This resolution which would divorce the court completely from the League of Nations, was approved by the committee at the last session over the Swanson resolution for adherence with the Harding-Hughes reservations.

A third proposal has been put forward by Senator Willis, Republican, Ohio. It embodies the Harding-Hughes reservations with additions.

It has been pointed out by some Committee members that even should the Committee take action, with only little more than three weeks remaining of the present session, there would be little prospect of the Senate being able to dispose of the question. Long debates are certain when such a measure is taken up, and the measure was omitted when Senate leaders several days ago made up their program for the remainder of the session.

A resolution which would put the House on record as favoring American adherence to the court was reported several days ago by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, but no place has been fixed for it on the House calendar.

Both the Senate and House Foreign Relations Committee have heard voluminous arguments during the present session from church and other organizations favoring American participation in the court, and delegations have also been received by President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes.

The Senate will meet in extra sessions on March 4 after the inauguration to confirm nominations. This session is ordinarily for the day only, but President Coolidge has made it known that he would not object to that body considering the World Court before it adjourns. He made it clear, however, that he would call no extra session, and no other move in this direction has been made.

Chamber for Court Membership.

Resolutions urging the President and Congress to adopt necessary legislation for the United States to become a party to the Permanent Court of International Justice, "so created that it will not involve the nations participating in any association beyond the judicial settlement of international disputes" were unanimously adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York yesterday. The resolutions were presented to the Chamber, at its monthly luncheon, by William L. De Bost, Chairman of the Executive Committee. They empowered Frederick H. Ecker, President of the Chamber, and other officers to take such steps as to make this movement effective.

J. Barstow Smull, former Vice President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and Chairman of the Chamber's Committee on Harbor and Shipping, presented a report advocating that Articles 9 and 11 of the commercial treaty with Germany, now before the Senate, be amended so as not to give Germany the same advantages that would accrue to the American ships.

After the introduction of Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, the new Commander of the Second Corps Area, President Ecker presented the Hon. J. A. M. Elder, the Australian Trade Commissioner, who spoke on the possibility of trade with his country.

He stated that in a cable he received yesterday from the Prime Minister he had been informed that the export figures of Australia during the last six months of 1924 were $380,000,000, an increase of 30 per cent. over the preceding six months. He listed the products which the United States might well purchase from Australia.

TO PROMOTE WORLD FLIERS.

House Committee Approves Proposal for All of Squadron.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—A bill recommending promotions for the Army world fliers was reported today by the House Military Committee.

The measure, sponsored by Representative Hill, Republican, of Maryland carries a promotion of 1,000 files for Lieutenant Smith, commander of the squadron.

Lieutenants Nelson and Wade would receive a promotion of 500 files each, and Lieutenants Ogden, Harding and Arnold, permanent commissions as second lieutenants. The latter three served under reserve commissions during the flight.

All members of the squadron would obtain the Distinguished Service Medal and permission to receive decorations from foreign nations.

World's Cotton Output Increases.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—World cotton production may total 24,000,000 bales this crop year, the Department of Agriculture estimated today, on the basis of revised reports from abroad. Last year's crop was 19,500,000 bales. The United States and countries reporting to the department produced 88 per cent. of the world total last year. Their crop to date is 23,366,000 bales. The American crop is estimated at 13,153,000.

HOUSE JAM KILLS MANY LATE MEASURES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Very little legislation out of the ordinary will be passed by the House of Representatives in the four remaining weeks of this Congress, Mr. Longworth, the Republican floor leader, announced this afternoon.

It is the hope, however, of Mr. Longworth that at least two pieces of farm legislation will be handled. One of these is a bill by Representative Purnell to develop agricultural experiment stations, this being a recommendation specifically endorsed by the President's Agricultural Commission.

The other bill is one just handed out by the Banking and Currency Committee allowing agricultural credit banks to rediscount paper with the intermediate credit banks, also requested by the Agricultural Commission. This bill was reported out yesterday and at the same time Chairman McFadden of the committee asked for a special rule to expedite its consideration.

Representative Snell of New York, Chairman of the Rules Committee, called on President Coolidge today and told the Executive he was sure some farm relief would be afforded. But with the Senate Agricultural Committee showing no enthusiasm over the matter, the crowded legislative situation in the Senate and other circumstances it does not seem probable that anything will be done for the farmers except action on the two bills alluded to. President Coolidge has been anxious that farm legislation should be enacted, but having sent the report of his special commission to Congress he feels that his part in the matter is ended.

Another thing the President would like to see handled by this Congress is the bill for a reorganization of the Government departments, but there is little hope of this desire being realized. There is tremendous opposition to this bill, particularly to that portion creating a Department of Education and Welfare—so much opposition in fact that Mr. Longworth evidently does not believe the bill would survive attacks against it unless it were put before Congress with the indicated section left in abeyance for the time being.

There is every belief that the conference report on Muscle Shoals will be disposed of under a special rule, perhaps next week. Two legislative bills yet remain to be passed, but one is now under consideration.

When asked today if there was any chance of the Stalker bill, proposing jail penalties for offenders against the Volstead law, being passed, leaders in the House answered: "It's in a legislative jam."

BECK SEES A CRISIS FOR SUPREME COURT

5,000,000 Voters Favored Party Asking Review of Decisions, He Tells Bar Association.

James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States, speaking last night before the Bar Association, discussed the future of the Supreme Court of the United States and the suggestion he made last December that in exceptional cases the Court be invited by joint resolution of Congress to advise in advance of a law's enforcement as to its constitutionality instead of giving opinions only in litigated cases.

Recalling that 5,000,000 voters had supported the political party advocating Congressional review of Supreme Court decisions he said that a great crisis was approaching the country.

"The Supreme Court," he declared, "must either bend to the storm or like the Senators of Rome, stand firm, let the results be what they may. If the Supreme Court will decide the case in respect to its merits it will rally behind it that intelligent public opinion which in the last analysis is its moral strength."

Explaining that the Adamson law, granting an increase in wages to railroad workers, was passed on the theory of emergency, Mr. Beck asserted that the emergency theory might "yet be the Trojan horse by which the citadel of the constitution is entered."

There could be greater cooperation between the judicial and the two other branches of the Government, he argued. To expound the law justly through litigated cases, he said, was not necessarily the best thing always. Difficulties arose, if as in the case of the Adamson law, the act had been enforced for several years, and affected millions. He believed the Court might with particular advantage determine the question of the constitutionality of a law before its enforcement, where the question involved the relative powers of the three branches of the Government, or was a matter of international law affecting the nation's foreign relations.

Discussing the doctrine of the court that a law ought not to be declared unconstitutional unless its invalidity was beyond dispute, the Solicitor General asserted that this resulted in the validation of many doubtful laws. Each of these, he argued, became a precedent for further exercise of governmental power, and thus there was a steady erosion of the Constitution.

NEW PLAN FOR ST. PAUL'S.

John Todd, London Surveyor, Would Rebuild Foundation on Clay.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—An unusual plan for the reconstructing of St. Paul's at a cost of £2,000,000, which would mean closing the cathedral for twelve years, was put forward today by John Todd, District Surveyor to the City Corporation.

It was Mr. Todd who surprised the dean and the chapter on Christmas Eve by bidding them remove the cathedral as a "dangerous structure," and he himself describes his scheme as "another labor for Hercules, a job for giants."

Without removing the dome, Mr. Todd would provide St. Paul's with an entirely new foundation and piers, and while they were under construction he would keep the dome supported by temporary brick work.

Discussing the foundations, Mr. Todd pointed out that the London clay on which the cathedral rests, provides a sounder foundation than many kinds of rock. He would drive tubes right through it to the quicksand beneath and then grout them up, and he would then construct a slab of concrete under the entire crypt of the cathedral, six feet thick. On this concrete floor he would build brick walls around each of the piers, strengthened by concrete beams inside each of the arches. As these were finished to the top of the piers they would take the stress off the dome.

His next step would be to reconstruct the piers with reinforced concrete, substituted for the original rubble in their interiors, but their external cases rebuilt would be of stones when completed.

Then would come the job of transferring the dome from its temporary support to its new, permanent piers.

Todd declared it would necessitate the lowering of the entire weighty mass by a trifle, perhaps a three-thousandth part of an inch, or the thickness of a line drawn by a very fine pen. He said it would require very gentle handling, but could be done and the dome then would be safe for a thousand years.

POILLON SISTER IN COURT.

Charges Antique Dealer Withholds Her Model of Auto Device.

Charlotte Poillon, one of the Poillon sisters whose activities have received much publicity, appeared in the West Side Court yesterday against a man who said he was Sadatis Chait, a dealer in antiques at 19 West Fifty-sixth Street.

She charged him with withholding the model of an automobile device which she said she lent him for a business purpose. He said the model was his own. He was granted an adjournment until Tuesday.

MAKE PLANS TO RUSH POSTAL PAY BILL

House Republicans Purpose to Pass the Measure Tuesday Under Suspension of Rules.

$61,222,768 RATE INCREASE

Committee Says New Schedules Will Make Department's Receipts and Expenditures Balance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The new Postal Pay and Rate Increase bill reported to the House yesterday by the Post Office Committee will be taken up Tuesday under a special rule that will insure its quick passage and a speedy conference with the Senate.

Announcement was made by the Committee that the final estimates of the Post Office Department show that the proposed postage rate schedules would yield $61,222,768, as follows:

First class	$10,000,000
Second class (publishers)	2,998,252
Transient	1,000,000
Third class	15,000,000
Fourth class	13,800,000
25-cent special service (par. post)	3,000,000
Insured service (3d and 4th)	3,353,147
C. O. D. service (3d and 4th)	1,103,879
Money orders	3,582,490
Registry service	3,980,000
Special delivery service	900,000
Total	$61,222,768

"This revenue," said the report of the committee, issued this afternoon, "is almost sufficient to meet the entire cost of the compensation to postal workers. It must be remembered also that the natural growth of the postal business means a gain of approximately $14,000,000 a year. The Post Office Department estimates there will be a surplus under present conditions in 1926, so that the passage of this measure will, for all practical purposes, make postal revenues balance expenditures."

The bill, the committee declared, "provides the best balanced and fairest reclassification of postal salaries in the history of the postal service. It provides an increase of $300 per year for post office clerks and city letter carriers, with proportionate increases in salaries or allowances for all other postal employes. This has had the practically unanimous endorsement of Congress and is supported by strong public sentiment."

Explaining the fact that the bill makes the salaries retroactive to Jan. 1, 1925, instead of July 1, 1924, as in the Senate bill, the committee says that this is "a just provision."

Republican members of the House Rules Committee held a meeting this afternoon with Representative Longworth, the floor leader, to arrange for hurrying the bill through to passage next week. After the conference, Mr. Longworth stated that the rule probably would be made up by the Rules Committee Saturday, and that the arrangement doubtless would provide that there would be an hour's debate on the adoption of the rule itself and forty minutes additional debate on a motion to suspend the rules of the House and pass the bill. Thus the legislation would be cleared up in less than two hours, and the bill started on its way to the Senate.

Mr. Longworth assumed that the Senate would move to strike out the House Bill and substitute its own, in this way leaving the final compromise up to the conference committee between the two houses.

KLEIN WOULD SAVE ALL HELIUM FOR WAR

Los Angeles Commander Says Hydrogen Should Be Used for Airships in Peace.

On account of the excessive scarcity of helium, Commander J. H. Klein Jr. of the navy dirigible Los Angeles, told an audience at the Lotos Club last night that he believed it should all be stored for war purposes and hydrogen used for peace-time airship manoeuvres.

"I, for one, am willing to take my chances with hydrogen," said Commander Klein. "There is altogether less than 10,000,000 feet of helium in captivity. We have a little more than 3,000,000 feet at Lakehurst. The army is supposed to have an equal amount. Practically 5,000,000 feet would be necessary for the Los Angeles and the Shenandoah, and helium is non-inflammable and therefore more nearly safe, the Government has ordered its regular use in our dirigibles.

"We have a monopoly of the known sources of helium," said Commander Klein. "Traces of it are found in France, but not in workable quantities. We are allowing helium of great value to go to waste in the Nokomis field, near Fort Worth, Texas, because Congress refuses to appropriate money for the building of a forty-mile pipe line."

Asked the approximate cost of building this pipe line, Commander Klein said that he did not know the amount, but that he did not believe it would exceed the value of the helium lost in this field over a period of three months.

'HOPELESS' BABY IS SAVED.

Skull Opened So Brain Could Grow —Case Caused Euthanusia Talk.

As a result of an operation—opening the skull in order to permit the normal growth of the brain—the daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Friedman at the Hunts Point Hospital, the Bronx, last September, and pronounced by physicians at its birth, hopeless imbecile, is no wdeclared to be perfectly normal.

Dr. Oscar A. Spier of 51 East Ninety-sixth Street, the attending physician, has sent a statement to the baby parents saying that the child had been discharged from the hospital apparently cured and was now in Bellevue for observation.

"I positively state that the boby is absolutely normal in every respect," Dr. Spier said.

At the time of its birth there was a discussion whether the child should be allowed to live. It was even erroneously reported that it had been allowed to die for humanitarian reasons. District Attorney McGeehan of the Bronx conducted an investigation which disclosed that the child had been removed to another hospital for treatment.

The operation just disclosed consisted of opening the skull and wedging it apart, thus providing greater capacity for brain development. The breach, physicians say, will be gradually closed by the natural growth of the skull.

instructors when that particular prescription was presented.

The two kinds of capsules, she explained, were already made up; the two bottles containing them always stood together in the same place and there was no danger of error.

The College of Pharmacy was completely exonerated of blame in a statement at the close of the day's investigation. The Prosecutor declared that questioning so far had convinced him that there was no possibility of contributory negligence on the part of university officials.

The only possible occasion for criticism, he added, lay in the fact that in prescriptions for non-toxic medicine such as quinine and aspirin, it was not the dispensary practice to keep a record of the person to whom the medicine went and who filled the prescription.

The prosecutor was sure tonight that murder ultimately is to be shown. He and his aides will question in particular students who worked in the dispensary last Thursday and Friday when the deadly drug was distributed.

SHOALS BILL CHANGED TO ATTRACT FORD

Draft of House and Senate Conferees' Report Is Laid Before the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—House and Senate conferees on the Muscle Shoals bill are understod to have amended the bill in such a fashion that the lease of the property is likely to be very attractive to Henry Ford, and it is further believed that President Coolidge is inclined to wish that Mr. Ford would make an offer.

The first draft of the conference report was taken to the White House today by Senator Keyes of New Hampshire and Representative McKenzie, and later it was said in quarters thought to be reliable that the President, as well as Secretaries Weeks of the War Department and Hoover of the Commerce Department, although not yet able to make an intensive study of the scheme, were well pleased with what they saw in a cursory survey.

An amendment substituted by Senator George of Georgia and accepted by the Senate provided that water power should be available for distribution throughout the South after the amount necessary for fertilizer production had been emplaced. It is now understood that this amendment has been changed by the conferees to read that the distribution of the surplus water power would be made after the amount necessary for fertilizer "and other products" had been made use of.

The inclusion of "and other products" would have the effect of confining nearly all of the power to North Alabama; that is keeping it in the main intermediate region of Muscle Shoals, where it could be used for the output of a large factory, such as Mr. Ford might put into operation.

It was also the understanding that whereas the Senate bill charged 4 per cent. interest on the $45,000,000 cost of the Wilson Dam, the conferees have so changed the bill that allowances would be made for that part of the dam which controls water for navigation.

Advocates of this idea argue that it would not be equitable to charge a lessee of the plant interest on a portion of the dam which merely controls the water used for navigation and not for power purposes.

CONGRESSMAN IS ARRESTED

Wolff of Missouri, Accused of Abusing Negro, Is Later Released.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 5.—Joseph Scott Wolff of Festus, Mo., Democratic member of Congress, was arrested yesterday on a charge of disturbing the peace after Robert Smith, a negro bellboy at the Madison Hotel, complained that Wolff used abusive language toward him.

Mr. Wolff's explanation that the boy had given him change for a two-dollar bill instead of a ten-dollar bill was substantiated by Mrs. Wolff. The charge then was withdrawn, and he did not press one against Smith.

SUN'S MEN QUIT CONFERENCE

Declare His Plan for Action by the People Has Been Ignored.

PEKING, Feb. 5 (Associated Press)—A misunderstanding in the unification conference was revealed today when the adherents of Dr. Sun Yat-sen issued a manifesto in the name of the Kuomingtang (People's Party), declining to participate because it had not taken Dr. Sun's plan for a "people's conference" as a basis for the reorganization of the Government.

Dr. Sun's plan proposed that the "people's conference" should be held after a preliminary meeting of Chinese leaders in Peking. The manifesto recalled that Dr. Sun had accepted the invitation to the conference on condition that his plan be adopted. This condition, although accepted by the Provisional Government, has not been carried out, the manifesto recites.

While Dr. Sun's South China delegation will not support the reorganization plan of the Provisional Government, it will maintain a conciliatory spirit toward the Conference, the announcement said.

HONGKONG, Feb. 5.—General Chen Chiung-ming today launched his long-awaited attack upon Canton and is trying to capture the important key position of Fumoon Fort in East Canton. He has 70,000 men, but they are mercenaries from different provinces and lack cohesion.

Negotiations are proceeding which may ultimately result in an arrangement to control the platinum output in the same way as diamonds.

the litters. "The objective of the committee is to do the best it can for the air service. I believe General Mitchell is willing to sacrifice himself, if necessary, to bring before the American people the importance of aviation as a weapon of defense, and for the development of commercial aviation, just as he was willing to sacrifice himself over the lines in France.

"Air defense is the biggest thing before the American people today, bigger than men or things. Officers of the army and navy, in my opinion, who have air defense under their control, are honest and conscientious men, doing the best they can. Perhaps, however, they have not sensed the full importance of this new branch of the service. The inquiry has gone far enough to make it certain that the American people will no longer be contented with the slight attention that has been devoted to the development of aviation in the past."

Mr. Perkins added that the committee's report could not go in on Feb. 15, but would be delayed at least a week because of these new developments.

McClintic Charges Deception.

Although the Select Committee examined no witnesses today, the air policy controversy figured partly in debate in the House when Representative McClintic of Oklahoma charged that the Navy Department had failed to give the country complete and accurate information as to the vulnerability of battleships when confronted with adequate airplane bombing attack. Mr. McClintic, who is a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, charged that the department had deliberately misled the people into the impression that airplanes had been unsuccessful in the sinking of the Washington. No airplanes carrying "live" bombs were used in the Washington attacks. No bombs were dropped. Explosive depth charges simulating bombs were used, but not dropped from planes.

The technical results of the tests have not been disclosed. They are still held confidential and secret by the Navy Department. Mr. McClintic is a supporter of the opinion held by General Mitchell that if the army Air Service had been given freedom of attack the battleship Washington could have been sunk by airplane bombing quite as easily as was the former German dreadnought Ostfriesland off the Virginia Capes several years ago, as well as the American battleships Virginia and New Jersey.

"The last word from the Navy Department," said Mr. McClintic, "is that no bombs were dropped on the Washington that contained explosives. Yet the report was allowed to circulate that the battleship was so constructed as to be impregnable, that bombs were dropped and that the battleship withstood the attack."

Mr. McClintic referred to certain reports which he said were sanctioned by high naval authorities after the attacks on the Washington, to the effect that the test was a distinct success. He characterized these reports as "camouflage" and insisted that they were misleading.

Representative LaGuardia of New York, a former army air officer, invited the attention of the House to testimony given by Secretary Wilbur before the House Naval Affairs Committee to the effect that the idea of bombing aircraft being able to sink battleships was "untenable" and "ridiculous." Mr. LaGuardia said that this statement had been disproved when the Ostfriesland, Virginia and New Jersey were sunk by bombs in attacks by army planes. He said that perhaps Secretary Wilbur himself had been deceived by subordinates concerning the real character of the Washington tests. He asserted that Secretary Wilbur, in his opinion, should call upon the officer who told him that battleships were impregnable against airplane bombing attack to substantiate his statement by facts.

"The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. McClintic) is exactly correct in the stand he is taking as to the attitude of the Navy Department in failing to give accurate information concerning the vulnerability of battleships as against aero bombing," said Mr. LaGuardia, who added:

"I want to call attention to the hearings before the Committee on Naval Affairs of Jan. 8, 1925, which carries the statement of Secretary Wilbur. In the same hearings General Mitchell said: 'One of the great bombs hitting a battleship will completely destroy it.'"

"Does the gentleman contend that Secretary Wilbur has any expert or technical knowledge on the subject which he discussed?" asked Representative Lozier of Missouri.

"I am coming to that," replied Mr. LaGuardia. "I believe the Secretary was misinformed when he made that statement. He would not have made it otherwise, and what I am contending for, and what I think the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. McClintic) is trying to get, is accurate information. We are entitled to know that."

Thinks Ton of TNT Would Do Harm.

"I am going to put in the record the balance of the Secretary's testimony; and if it is true, as he says, that 2,000 pounds of TNT dropped on the deck of a ship would cause no damage and would not disarrange the machinery, we are entitled to know that. If, on the other hand, his statement is not correct, and I believe that it is not correct because we had the experiment in the sinking of the German ships and also in the sinking of the United States ships Virginia and New Jersey and the actual performance in those cases; we ought to know that.

"I believe, in the face of our experience of sinking those ships, that Secretary Wilbur is not justified in making that statement. Therefore, the situation boils itself down to this one proposition. This is not something that is to be ascertained, this is something we know, something that has been tried, and Secretary Wilbur ought to call upon his informants who gave him the information upon which he based this opinion, and also give the Congress the benefit of the accurate information."

Secretary Wilbur's letter to the Chairman of the House Select Committee was as follows:

Feb. 5, 1925.

My dear Mr. Chairman:

There is a statement in the public press that certain naval officers have come to a member of your committee requesting that they be not examined by your committee because their views were not in accord with those of the Department and that they would be disciplined if they gave their testimony.

I wish to assure you and the members of your committee that the fears of these officers as thus expressed are entirely unfounded. Naval officers are constantly appearing before committees of Congress and are fully advised as to their duty to testify fully and completely to the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth in response to the questions of Congressional committees or members thereof. Of course, naval officers, like lawyers and doctors, have confided to them certain confidential information which cannot be released by them without violating a fundamental duty of their confidential position, unless such information is given with the consent of the department.

If officers are asked their own personal opinions as to matters connected with the service they are perfectly at liberty to state those opinions, even though they be at variance with the plans of the department. It is important in such cases, however, that it be made clear by the witness that he is not giving the judgment of the department but his own opinion, and this not because of any obligation on his part to maintain the same opinions as those held by his superior officers, but because he ought not even inferentially to deceive the committee by leaving the impression that views he is expressing are the views of the service.

If your committee is interested in the testimony of these officers or desires to ascertain their opinion upon the questions involved in your investigation, I wish to assure you and such officers through you that they are perfectly free to state fully and fairly all the facts within their knowledge not of a confidential or secret character, and to fully express their opinions on any matters into which your committee desires to inquire.

Sincerely yours,
CURTIS D. WILBUR.

The letter of Admiral Moffett to the Chairman of the Select Committee, stated:

"Since my testimony was given before your Committee I understand that testimony has been given to the general effect that younger officers in the Naval Air Service have been intimidated in one way or another and are not allowed to express their views with regard to a single air service.

"I desire to state most emphatically that to the best of my knowledge and belief there is absolutely no foundation for such a statement. As Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics I can assure you that neither by word or deed have I in any way interfered with the fullest expression of opinion of the officers of the Naval Air Service with regard to any matters whatsoever. Furthermore, to the best of my knowledge and belief, no officer of the United States Navy has at any time in any way intimidated or repressed the expression of opinion of any officer of the Naval Air Service."

SEES A TRADE WAR IN PULPWOOD TAX

Senator Moses Calls Canadian Embargo an Attempt to Control Our Paper Market.

CONGRESS ASKED TO ACT

American Paper and Pulp Association Adopts a Resolution of Protest.

Warning that the threat of "a disastrous trade war" between the United States and Canada exists in the proposed Canadian export tax or embargo on pulpwood was delivered last night by Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, speaking at the dinner of the American Paper & Pulp Association which concluded its four-day annual convention at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria.

Senator Moses devoted his entire speech to this subject. His remarks had been preceded by the submission to the diners of a resolution denouncing the Canadian proposal, characterizing it as an attempt to get control of the American paper market and calling on Congress to take action necessary "to protect the interests of the pulp and paper industry in the United States."

The resolution was adopted by a rising vote of the diners, who applauded it liberally.

"There cannot at any stage of the proceedings that produced the present crisis have been anything but a selfish purpose to dominate the American market," said Senator Moses. "In the face of that stands the dominant American policy to hold this market, the best in the world, and extend it to the foreign markets on a basis of honest competition.

"If it can be there are those of our neighbors forgetful of the century of peaceful and amicable relations that has prevailed, surely no one here will forget the pride with which the United States hailed the negotiation of the Rush-Bagot Treaty, and no one here, looking back on the century or more of unruffled peace, can now fail to remember that the first gesture in what may prove to be a disastrous trade war was made not by Columbia but by the Lady of the Snows.

"We are speaking now as Americans, as business men, as friends of peace, when we try to point out the course on which she seems to be embarking, urged by a group that forms a noisy, aggressive and insolent minority motivated by self-interest. It cannot be our neighbor will give heed to such cry and will attempt to do its urging against a great-hearted friend who wishes none but good to Canada.

"We cannot forget that within our generation a great golden stream of American capital has gone into the northlands to help build up its communities and that many of our people have gone there.

"But if the cooperation we have extended seems now about to be repulsed, let it be known of all men it is not we who have taken the aggressive part and let it be known that if it comes to us we are not unready.

"Our tariff laws give us ample protection against discriminating and unfair competition. Do not forget that there happens to be in the United States several thousand miles of Canadian railroads on which we may lay regulation, if not embargo.

"Do not forget that we control many of the raw products that are necessities of life and industry in Canada, especially in the paper industry. An embargo on coal or on sulphur, each of which lies within a stroke of the pen of the President of the United States, would be sufficient protection. Those who speak for you at Washington will be neither dumb nor inept in the event that the menace of tonight shall become the reality of tomorrow."

Other addresses were made by Judge Harold B. Wells of New Jersey and the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of New York. Henry W. Stokes, President of the organization, was the toastmaster. The resolution denouncing the tax embargo proposition had been adopted at a smaller meeting during the day, and President Stokes said that in bringing it forward again at the dinner, where seven or eight hundred members were present, he desired to accentuate its status as the unanimous expression of the organization's sentiment.

QUESTION PULP EMBARGO.

Canadian Lumbermen Advise the Government to Go Slow.

Special to The New York Times.

QUEBEC, Feb. 5.—The proposed embargo on the export of pulpwood should not be declared until after the most careful consideration of its effects upon the rights of all those interested and upon Canadian interests generally, the Canadian Lumbermen's Association declared in a resolution adopted at their annual convention in the Chateau Frontenac today.

Other clauses in the resolution deprecated the imposition of an embargo without due consideration of existing property rights and characterized the proposal as an economically unsound method of conserving the timber resources of the country.

Edward Beck of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association said opponents of the embargo had been invited to attend the Eastern Townships Associated Board's convention at Sherbrooke on Feb. 17 and stated heir respective cases.

CANADA REGISTERS TREATY WITH LEAGUE

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Canadian Government has presented for registration with the Secretariat of the League of Nations its fisheries treaty with the United States, the so-called Halibut Treaty signed at Washington in March, 1923. Its importance in the history of the development of the foreign relations of the Dominions lies in the fact that it is signed by the Canadian Plenipotentiary and that the British Ambassador in Washington did not sign it. At the time, this fact gave rise to questions in the House of Commons, but the Government has not seen its way to lay on the table its correspondence with the Governor General of Canada on the subject.

GENEVA, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Canada's act in registering with the League of Nations her fisheries convention has created unusual interest here.

League opinion here is inclined to view the act as a manifestation of Canadian independence in international relations and it is being compared to Ireland's registration of the Anglo-Irish treaty, against which Great Britain protested.

CARAWAY AND HEFLIN DEBATE THEIR MERITS

Former Wins Tilt in Senate by Reference to the Latter's Regalia.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Their respective qualifications to speak for the "people" by virtue of severe training in youth prpvoked a spirited argument on the floor today between Senators Caraway of Arkansas and Heflin of Alabama, both Democrats.

"I was born and reared in a two-room house with a dirt floor in the front and I don't know what in the other," Senator Caraway replied when Senator Heflin brought up the question of speaking for the people. "I worked on the farms for $3 a month, and when older I worked as a railroad hand until I was fired for talking more than I worked."

"Why, when the Senator was just growing," Senator Heflin retorted, "I was cutting cotton on the farm, and I worked on the farm until I was 19 years old. I love the farmers and speak for them."

"Well, the farmers I knew didn't wear long-tailed coats and white vests," Senator Caraway returned, and the roar of the galleries and fellow-Senators broke up the argument.

NEW FARMERS' PARTY IS FORMED IN CANADA

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—Reciprocity between Canada and the United States and free trade in raw materials is to be the political plank of a new Farmers' Party of the Province of Quebec if success attends the plans of a group of delegates who today quit the convention of the United Farmers of Quebec being held here and decided on direct political action on their own account.

The United Farmers as an organization is supposed to be non-political. The seceders say that surreptitiously it is leaning toward the Liberal Party, which is in power at Ottawa and at Quebec and which favors a low tariff. The rebels do not like that policy. Neither do they want anything to do with the Opposition policy of a high tariff.

JAPAN NOW EXPECTS NEW ARMS PARLEY

HER NAVAL EXPERTS READY

By WILFRID FLEISCHER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—News that the Senate has passed the amendment to the Naval bill requesting President Coolidge to summon another disarmament conference is regarded in official circles here as bringing a conference one step closer, and it is felt that it is only a matter of time until a formal call is issued.

An invitation to a second disarmament conference will find Japan well prepared. Naval experts here have been laying their plans in anticipation of a new conference for the last eleven months, or ever since a similar resolution was passed by Congress last March, and it seems certain that the Japanese delegation will arrive at the conference table with a definite project of its own.

Japan wishes to avoid being taken unawares, as she was at the last conference by the astounding Hughes proposal on the opening day, and being forced into an agreement. Its plan is intended either to forestall other proposals or to be presented as a counter-measure.

It is possible that Baron Shidehara, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, might himself head the delegation, depending upon the political developments here in the meantime, and that Admiral Takarabe, Minister of the Navy, would be a delegate, while Ambassador Matsudaira would certainly be included in the make-up of the delegation.

Naval Authorities Prepare Plans.

While the naval authorities are maintaining strict secrecy, it seems probable that Japan's pla will be based on measures to render future naval aggression technically impossible, while insisting on the maintenance of the necessary forces for defensive purposes. With this object in view, Japan may propose a further limitation of capital ships, as a means of eliminating units of aggression, and limitation of the size of submarines so as to unfit them for aggressive purposes, while maintaining them for coast defense.

For defensive purposes, it seems likely that Japan will oppose the application of the 5-5-3 ratio to auxiliary craft, on the ground such a ratio is below her requirements and insufficient for the protection of her coast line as an insular power. This country is certain to voice her opposition to the enlargement of Great Britain's naval base at Singapore, which, in her opinion, constitutes a menace to peace in the Pacific. It has been the object of severe criticism here ever since the project was first taken up.

It is expected here that other questions to be discussed will include the limitation of aircraft, ratification of the treaties concluded at the first Washington conference remaining unratified, and the question of gun elevation. In a statement issued today on the occasion of the third anniversary of the signing of the Washington Treaty, Baron Shidehara gives an official indication that Japan is prepared to accept an invitation to a second disarmament conference, when, after praising the work of the last conference, he adds:

"We have only to go forward in the same sensible frame of mind to secure still greater advantages and economies in international relations."

Baron Shidehara said that the Washington conference always would hold a high place in history because of the new spirit which it introduced to the world. He expressed the hope that the Nine Power treaty regarding China, which remains unratified by some of the powers, would be ratified soon and brought into effect.

Baron Shidehara's Statement.

TOKIO, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Presumably replying to the recent criticisms heard at home and abroad concerning Japan's foreign policies and relations, Baron Shidehara, Minister for Foreign Affairs, answered his opponents today on the third anniversary of the Washington Arms Conference.

"The Washington conference," he said, "put an end to competition between nations in the building of capital ships. Had the building of these ships continued unchecked until now, a disagreeable international situation would have developed.

"The conference also has removed the unfounded suspicions at one time current regarding the intentions of Japan in China and elsewhere, and her sincerity has been made manifest to the most captious critic.

"In the Pacific, the clouds of unrest which had gathered at one time have given way to an atmosphere of peace, friendship and mutual cooperation. The nine power treaty relating to China, through force of circumstance, has failed of ratification thus far by some signatories, but the basic principles have been actually accepted and followed by Japan, and doubtless by other nations interested."

REPORTS MASSACRE OF REDS BY PEASANTS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, Feb. 5.—In the last week peasants of the villages of Pustinska and Liekhovichi, near Orsha, enraged by measures adopted to force them to sell their grain at low prices in order to pay taxes, assembled in great numbers armed with scythes, pitchforks, axes, shotguns and other weapons of the sort, marched on the offices of the local executive committee, demolished them and killed all Communists in the village, the press reporters and the members of the Communist League of Youth.

Detachments of militia, which appeared on the scene vainly endeavored to disperse the rioters who killed two militiamen. Finally special detachments of secret political police arrived and having restored order meted out Soviet justice in the usual manner. Only a brief official report of these disorders has been published locally, but this report lends color to other unconfirmed reports of similar outbursts in various parts of Russia which singly have only local importance, but taken collectively afford an explanation of the appeals made by the Moscow leaders with increasing frequency to the rural Communists to exercise moderation in their dealings with the peasantry.

OLD TREASURES FOUND IN TOMBS NEAR SIDON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—By mail comes word that next in importance to the recent discoveries at Byblus are those just made in the necropolis of Ruessieh, near Kafr Jerrah, eight miles east of Sidon. In 1914 and 1920 Dr. Contenean found a number of scarabs and specimens of pottery here which dated from the second millennium B. C. These were then the oldest to have been discovered in Phoenicia and caused further searches to be made.

The results have surpassed all expectations. Try pits sunk on top of a plateau revealed at a depth of five feet two unopened tombs, oven-shaped, like so many of the Canaanite tombs that have been found in Palestine. The bodies lay flat on the ground, the head lying on a stone. The funerary furniture consisted chiefly of terra cotta vases of which forty were intact, some being decorated with superimposed horizontal circles painted in red or yellow.

There were besides a score of bronze weapons, hatchets of two different models, dagger blades, arrow heads and spear heads, several scarabs of the Hyksos period and a tiny seal cylinder of lapis lazuli, which seems to date back to the first Babylonian period about the end of the third or the beginning of the second millenium.

A second attempt led to the discovery of ten more tombs, several of which were those of children 10 to 12 years old. One of them contained a large quantity of terra cotta vases and a sacrificial knife of bronze. Another contained Cyprian vases of a kind called bilbils, with a white covering and black decoration, many scarabs in Hyksos style and an amethyst scarab. Yet another yielded besides Cyprian vases, some bronze hatchets and dagger blades, thirty-five Hyksos scarabs and a fine cylinder of hematite.

One of these tombs was not oven-shaped like the rest. This was a spacious cave hewn in a straight wall in sections and contained three skeletons stretched on the ground. At the head of the first two facing south there was an alabaster vase and by the side a spear head and a dagger with a short blade. The third skeleton had a round amethyst necklace and on the finger an amethyst scarab set in silver. At the side lay a dagger and a vase of blue faience of the same shape as the obsidian perfume vase found in 1922 in the Hypogeum at Byblus.

AMERICAN DECISION ON OPIUM AWAITED

Porter Indicates He Will State Today Whether He Will Sign Convention.

GENEVA, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—What will the United States do was the question on which there was anxious speculation in Geneva today in all circles connected with the International Opium Conference.

There were indications tonight that tomorrow would bring forth an answer to the query as to whether Representative Stephen G. Porter, head of the American delegation, will or will not sign the anti-narcotic convention, which has been drafted in final form for submission to a plenary session of the conference.

All the delegates went ahead with their clerical work rather apathetically because of apprehension in some quarters that America's signature will be lacking.

With Mr. Porter noncommittal, the only new feature of a listless day was the interview which Lord Cecil gave to the American correspondents, in which he defended the anti-narcotic convention as a considerable improvement over the provisions of the present Hague convention and laid special emphasis on what he called the splendid services of the American delegation.

Lord Cecil affirmed that failure of the Americans to sign would constitute a moral blow to the achievements of the conference, but remarked in conclusion that whether the United States subscribed or not he believed the other powers would complete their work and attach their signatures to the convention.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Additional credits of 5,000,000 francs which he asked for to counter the danger to the French in Morocco from the revolt against the Spaniards in the Riff region were today granted to Marshal Lyautey by the Chamber.

The Resident General made his demand some time ago, but in view of the state of the budget the Government found it difficult to comply with his request. It was feared also that the Socialists might not approve of further expenditure of money in Morocco. To the Treasury, however, there came a fortunate windfall in the shape of 5,000,000 francs offered by the Government of Syria for the upkeep of French troops in that country. This gift enabled War Minister Nollet to meet Marshal Lyautey's request for both men and money.

Instead of being spent in Syria, the 5,000,000 francs will be devoted to North Africa, and from Syria have been drafted to North Africa the troops on whose behalf the money was furnished. General Nollet himself announced this decision in the Chamber today when the credits were voted.

Speaking against a proposal to reduce expenditures the War Minister said the situation in Morocco made a reduction of credits impossible at present. There were still several districts where disorder existed, and since last year the situation in the Riff had made it necessary to establish a line of outposts in the Ouergha Valley within the French frontier line. "Danger exists there and it must be foreseen if worse is to be prevented," said General Nollet.

Because of the financial situation of the country he had consented to cut expenditures to the minimum, but in Morocco the effectives must be kept at full strength. Marshal Lyautes had asked for reinforcements and a supplementary credit of 5,000,000 francs for the establishment of a line on the north. With the consent of the Finance Commission of the Chamber the Government had utilized the Syrian offer to provide the necessary funds.

The reinforcements which were being sent were, he assured the Chamber, intended solely for defensive purposes and he hoped the mere announcement of their arrival would make their employment unnecessary. The Government's instructions to the Resident General were that the troops were "only for energetic defensive action in the eventuality of need and not for any operation which might have for result the crossing of the limits of the Spanish zone."

Only the Communists opposed this use of the Syrian gift.

AIRMEN REACH DAKAR.

May Try to Return to Paris in a Non-Stop Flight.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The French flyers Lemaitre and Arrachard, after being forced to land 600 kilometers from their goal on the attempted Paris-Dakar nonstop flight, finally arrived at Dakar this evening. Exhaustion of the supply of gasoline made a landing at the Spanish colony of Rio de Oro imperative and prevented the Frenchmen breaking the world record for a nonstop flight.

News from Dakar, however, indicates the aviators may make another try to capture the record in a return flight from Dakar to Paris. Before departure from Paris the flyers declared if adverse conditions forced them to land before reaching Dakar, they wouldn't be discouraged but would attempt the 2,500-mile return flight without a stop.

Sulgrave Leaders Talk to Sailors.

An entertainment was held last night at the New York Port Society Building, 106 Eleventh Avenue, where the work of the George Washington-Sulgrave Institution was reviewed and a musical program given. Mrs. Charles R. Scarborough, Chairman of the Women's Auxiliary of the Port Society, introduced as speakers John A. Stewart, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the institution; Judge Alton B. Parker, Chancellor, and Mrs. Henry Mottet. The institution cooperated in the entertainment. Most of the guests were sailors. The Port Society, founded 106 years ago, was said to be the oldest organization in the America to help seamen.

ABD-EL-KRIM WEDS RAISULI'S DAUGHTER

Copyright, 1925, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

TANGIER, Feb. 5.—The marriage of Abd-el-Krim and Raisuli's youngest daughter, uniting two powerful Riffian rulers, is the latest development in the conflict which began with defiance and ended with the capture of Tazarut and the submission of Raisuli.

It is stated that Raisuli himself suggested this means of ending the conflict after he was made prisoner, and Abd-el-Krim was quick to accept the alliance as a means of extending his influence.

Another important development is a report that a Spanish airplane carrying 400,000 pesetas in gold, which originally was believed to be intended to aid Raisuli in his resistance, was delivered into the hands of Abd-el-Krim, who has been created Governor of the Moroccan mountain district by Spain in order to secure the submission of the native tribes. Thus, Spain hopes to establish a kind of home rule under Abd-el-Krim in territory recently evacuated, it is said.

The details of the civil strife between Abd-el-Krim and Raisuli now indicate that Tazarut was captured through the treachery of former Sheik Bakali, who joined Raisuli ostensibly as an ally and then aided Abd-el-Krim's access to the city.

Immediately after Abd-el-Krim's capture of Tetuan, when the Spanish withdrew, Abd-el-Krim sent Raisuli a message demanding his surrender and allegiance, to which Raisuli sent an insulting answer, telling Abd-el-Krim in native vulgar dialect to "go eat onions." Krim's forces immediately advanced, entering Tazarut, and engaged in battle, Raisuli's adherents suffering severe losses. The chieftain's son and nephew, Muley Ali, were among the wounded.

Even after this victory a long and difficult siege would have been necessary to capture Tazarut but for Bakall's desertion with arms and munitions to Abd-el-Krim, while the former Governor of Tetuan, also allied with Raisuli, cooperated with the assailants in opening the way to the city.

Raisuli, at the mercy of the conquerer, proposed the wedding as a means of continuing his subdued authority. Rumors have reached Tangier that Raisuli since has died, but these are not confirmed.

FETHI DENIES TURKEY ASSAILS GREEK CHURCH

Says Nation Will Join to Repel Aggressor if Its Rights Are Violated.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 5.—Although the terms of the Turkish reply have not been published the rejection of the Greek note has been obvious from the outset and the main point of yesterday's speech of Fethi Bey, Prime Minister, in the Grand National Assembly, was a preliminary warning to Greece that Turkey refused to be intimidated.

The speech itself, generally moderate in tone, recapitulated the history of the present crisis and developed at length the Turkish thesis that the patriarchate is a purely internal affair and the Greek note of protest had in consequence been regarded by the Cabinet as unfriendly.

The Prime Minister protested strongly against the accusation that the Turks had attacked the whole Orthodox Church and deprecated the attempts being made to incite Christendom against Turkey.

Fethi concluded by declaring that if any attempt was made to violate its natural rights and independence the whole nation would join to repel the aggressor, but he hoped the agitation in Greece would soon die down.

PARIS STYLE SHOWS CONFIRM NEW LINES

PASTEL SHADES DOMINATE

Handkerchief Frocks for Young Girls Are Among the Most Attractive of the Exhibits.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—With the opening of more of the big fashion creating establishments, it becomes merely clearly confirmed that the Summer season will see a distinct change of line. There will be nothing violently new, but here and there a subtle evolution has begun. Thus, the waistline has begun to climb upward. Both coats and skirts are fuller, usually, in the latter case, by the use of godets. Jackets are either very long or very short, with a crossover fastening in the former case and a single button in the latter case.

At Jean Patou's show tonight there were some becoming boleros. This last attempt, M. Patou admits, is a "shy" one, but it has obtained universal approval.

All the couturiers declare that they are satisfying a demand for greater elaborateness in cut than has been common during the last few years. The season's frocks, however, are very wearable. Lanlet is one of those who adhered to the straight, severe line, and does not use any front trimming. But even he has added some fullness to the cut. One of his specialties is the use of choker collars on coats and costumes, even on afternoon gowns. They are cut in a piece with the material used, and are not sewed on. In his costumes, as in others, a great deal of freedom is given. Tightness has disappeared everywhere, even when the straight appearance is kept.

A sensation was caused at Lanlet's exhibition by the appearance of baggy trousers underneath the tunics, both on afternoon and evening frocks. Their use is obviously designed to conceal the generous display of stocking which the shortness of the frocks allows when sitting.

Patou seems to have derived a good deal of his inspiration from the American mannequins whom he brought over. His walking and afternoon frocks showed especially well on the slim figures of the American girls.

Bright colors have been abandoned for the moment, and there is a general predominance of pastel blue among the displays. Patou has an interesting shade of pale periwinkle, with the least suggestion of mauve in it which has won applause. Other colors, rosy beige and rosewood, challenge its supremacy.

Handkerchief trimming on some of these pastel frocks for young girls has given one of the prettiest fashions seen for several years. Either hanging from the waist or attached knee-height, or hung from the shoulder, these "handkerchiefs" give a grace of movement.

Plain materials are being used, but the dominant note of the Summer season will include printed chiffons, crêpes georgette and crêpes de chine. For wear there is much mousseline de soir and embroidered Romans. Patou's latest noveilty, which is used in several daring evening gowns, is crêpe romain, in which are combined the shaded effects of three different colors. Among combinations which he showed were two of green and mauve, which were unusual, but the greatest success, however, seems likely to lie in the delicacy of the contrasted shades which he uses in some of his pastels.

PARIS, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Six American dress models brought to Europe as an experiment made their début at Jean Patou's Summer style opening tonight and justified themselves before the Paris fashion world.

"I am enchanted with them," said M. Patou. "I made them keep their flapper slouch, instead of assuming the traditional French mannequin walk. The girls are a success and I am going to continue to have American models. They wear their clothes wonderfully well."

FRANCE PLANS TO HALT RISE IN BREAD PRICES

Bill Will Allow Government to Seize All Wheat Stocks in Country.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The Government introduced a bill in the Chamber of Deputies today calling for the obligatory declaration of all stocks of wheat in France. The bill provides for the requisitioning of these stocks, if necessary, to fight the ever-increasing price of bread, which tomorrow will cost 1 franc 55 centimes a kilogram—a price unheard of since the siege of Paris in 1870.

The measure demands a credit of 100,000,000 francs for the purchase of foreign wheat for establishing opposition to speculation. The bakery shops will be closed one day each week, under the provisions of the bill, and the percentage of substitutes which are now added to wheat flour will be increased from eight to twelve. Severe penalties are provided for millers and bakers who fail to comply with the existing laws.

Premier Herriot last evening presided at a conference attended by the Ministers of Justice, Interior, Finance and Agriculture, together with a number of leading Senators and Deputies, at which the subject was discussed from every aspect. Later he summoned the Cabinet, and the terms of a bill embodying the conclusions reached at the conference were agreed upon. It is hoped that the bill, if it does not completely check the upward movement, will at least serve to keep the price of bread within reasonable bounds.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Herbert H. Asquith, it is authoritatively announced tonight, will take the title of Earl of Oxford and Asquith.

This will relieve him and his heirs of any embarrassment in the unlikely case if any of the descendants of the two families of Devers and Harley, who formerly held the Earldom of Oxford, should seek to revive ancestral claims.

Mr. Asquith's grandson, the son of Raymond Asquith, who was killed in the war, will be his heir and bear the courtesy title of Viscount Asquith of Morley.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The conviction of General von Nathusius, the Germany army officer, by a Lille court-martial last November on the charge of misappropriating property when he had his headquarters in France during the war, must stand on the records of the French courts.

This decision was handed down today by the Court of Cassation which rejected the General's appeal.

FLEISCHMANN DIES AT POLO IN MIAMI

shipment in Mr. Fleischmann's private car tomorrow to Cincinnati for burial.

Four weeks ago Mr. Fleischmann came to Miami Beach, brought a large string of ponies and authorized the erection of a $100,000 Winter home on the bay front. The first unit, the servant quarters, has just been completed, and it was there that Fleischmann spent most of his time, although his chartered houseboat, the Pastime, was tied up at a dock nearby. His guests included his cousin, W. M. Fleischmann, and Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Miller of New York.

Cincinnati in Mourning.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 5.—News of the sudden death at Miami, Fla., of Julius Fleischmann, manufacturer and sportsman and former Mayor of Cincinnati, was received with many expressions of regret here late today by city officials, business men and others who had known Mr. Fleischmann before he moved to New York ten years ago.

Charles Fleischmann, a son of the deceased, was killed during the World War while making a flight in an airplane in preparation for war service.

Colonel Max Fleischmann, brother of Julius, is in the heart of Africa on a big game hunting expedition with his wife. Messages may not reach him for a considerable time.

Julius Fleischmann Jr., his son, who left Cincinnati late today for New York, was intercepted en route when news of his father's death was received here. Mrs. H. C. Yieser Jr., daughter of the late "yeast king," today gave birth to a baby boy at a Cincinnati hospital.

Career in Business and Politics.

Julius Fleischmann, banker, manufacturer, philanthropist, sportsman, twice Mayor of Cincinnati, was born in that city on June 8, 1872 a son of the late Charles Fleischmann, founder of the Fleischmann Company, which is said to be the largest producer of compressed yeast in the world. After attending local schools he entered his father's business, starting as a clerk and spending a brief apprenticeship in each department. He learned the work so rapidly and displayed such an unmistakable executive gift that when only twenty-three years old he was made general manager of the company.

Having joined the Republican Party on coming of age, he had given it in the local field such support as a busy man could when, in 1900, entirely unsought by him, the Republican leaders in Cincinnati thrust upon him the nomination for Mayor. He was elected easily, the youngest Mayor of an important municipality in the United States, and proceeded to give the city an administration so satisfying to the voters that three years later he was again nominated and this time his victory was gained by a majority three times as large as before. The number of his votes was double the amount ever previously received in the history of Cincinnati. A third time he was asked to run for Mayor, but he declined in order to devote himself to business.

Nominated Longworth for Congress.

The only other public office he held in his birthplace was that of Park Commissioner, from 1908 to 1912. He had, however, been an aide-de-camp on the staffs of three Governors, McKinley, Bushnell and Nash, succeeding his father in that post. He was a delegate to the Republican National Conventions of 1904, 1908 and 1912. He made the nominating speech for Nicholas Longworth in the latter's first two campaigns for Congress.

Interests and activities of Mr. Fleischmann in Cincinnati that had a public or semi-public character were his part ownership of the local National League Baseball club, which he sold in 1922 his establishment, while Mayor, of bread lines for the needy in various sections of the city, and his support of the College of Music of Cincinnati, of which he had been President and director. This was a endowed school for the development of young musicians, and Mr. Fleischmann's financial and personal aid was one instance of his desire to help promising artists. The bread line that he started in Cincinnati was much like the famous institution of the sort established in New York many years ago by Henry Fleischmann, a cousin of his father.

About ten years ago Mr. Fleischmann found that he could better attend to his affairs by moving to this city. Latterly he had resided at the Hotel Plaza, and had a large estate at Sands Point, L. I. He was twice married and twice divorced. His first wife, who was Lily Ackerland of Cincinnati, obtained a decree there on Jan. 21, 1920. Two days later he married Mrs. Laura G. Hemingway, who had divorced Lewis Hemingway in 1919. Last July the second Mrs. Fleischmann obtained a divorce in Paris.

Following each of Mr. Fleischmann's divorces mention was made of large sums paid by him as settlements. In the first instance the amounts reported were an annuity of $25,000 a year, and $2,000,000 outright. The ending of the second action was said to have been accompanied by the payment of $5,000,000. Two children of the first marriage survive, a son, Julius Fleischmann Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. H. G. Yeiser Jr., both living in Cincinnati. Another son, Charles, died in 1917, while in the aviation service in England.

In addition to holding the Presidency of the Fleischmann Company, Mr. Fleischmann was also at the head of the Fleischmann Melting Company of Chicago and the American Diamalt Company and Reliance Coal and Coke Company, both of Cincinnati. His brother, Major Max Fleischmann, is Vice President and chief executive officer of the Fleischmann Company.

For two generations the large Fleischmann distillery at Riverside, near Cincinnati, had been a valuable family property. Mr. Fleischmann closed the plant in July, 1917, and gave each of the 100 employes a life pension of $30 a month.

With polo and horse racing, yachting shared Mr. Fleischmann's sporting enthusiasm. Only a fortnight ago he was re-elected Commodore of the Port Washington Yacht Club. He also belonged to the New York and Atlantic Yacht Clubs, and his other social affiliations included memberships in the Lotos, Lambs and Army and Navy Clubs of this city, the Cincinnati Country Club, and the Overland Club of Pasadena. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Shriner, an Elk, and a Knight of Pythias.

Intended to Enter Racing Season.

Mr. Fleischmann had intended to race a string of thoroughbreds extensively during the coming season under the nom de course of the Middle Neck Farm Stable, his colors of white with red and blue cross sashes having been registered for life with The Jockey Club.

In his stable were thirty horses, most of them steeplechasers, and they were in the hands of Thomas McCreery at Aiken, S. C., where they were being schooled for the opening of the cross-country season in the East. Mr. McCreery was in New York last week making arrangements for the transportation of the Fleischmann string to Belmont Park for training.

While Mr. Fleischmann had not been connected with racing in this country for many years, he was at one time very active on the turf. He and his father raced an extensive stable a generation ago, both in Kentucky and on the tracks in this State, in charge of Robert Tucker, a famous trainer in his time.

Among the good horses that carried the Fleischmann silks was Halma, afterward taken to France by the late William K. Vanderbilt, where he established a great name for himself as a sire. Other good winners in their colors were Lehman, Domingo, St. Maxim and Irish Reel.

After the death of his father Julius Fleischmann continued racing in his own name, with Thomas Welch as trainer. Their colt, Dr. Eighberg, was second to Martimas in the Futurity of 1898. Tod Sloan was their chief rider, and many notable victories were scored by Blues, Bonnibert, Nosey and Africander. The last named, however, was sold before he reached the top of his form.

and Brother Downs it became apparent that already preparations for personal appearance were under way. The chubby Apostle of Gloom had carefully pressed his trousers and the week's growth of stubble had been shaved. Brother Downs was the cynosure of all eyes, what with a resplendent new blue necktie. Mrs. Reidt moved about in a brown silk dress.

While the apostle, tired from continually explaining how it all was going to happen, paused for a rest, Brother Downs took up the task. In reverberating tones he explained how the "Brides of the Lamb" were to take off on the journey to salvation.

Wondrous Things for the Good.

"At midnight," he said, "Jesus will start for the earth, mounted on a cloud. He shall come out of the east, escorted by the herald angels and the angel Gabriel. Seven days shall he be on the journey and the eyes and ears of the good in heart will be filled with wondrous things. Angels with feet of fire shall march on the earth and music no man hath ever heard before will fill the corners of the universe."

Brother Downs of Yaphank said he wanted to make it clear that all this wasn't going to happen tonight, but would come along in due order.

"The stars of the heavens will fall upon the earth and the mountains and rocks will fall. The wicked will seek to hide in the mountains and in those mountains they will be buried. We shall keep our eyes and ears open tomorrow night for the first manifestation, but none shall move until the arm of the Lord shows in the light from the hills of San Diego.

"When the Lord shall have destroyed all living things that are not to be saved, the birds of the air, the fish in the sea and the iniquitous among men, seven days shall have passed and the ascension will begin. Music will lead the way, music will fill the air as we follow the Lord and the angels to our homes on the streets of gold.

"And behind the heavenly host will be the chosen 144,000, the Brides of the Lamb, and behind these will be the hosts of the risen from the dead, those who have gone to earthly graves with the word of God on their lips and in their hearts."

Joined by a Negro Parson.

Mr. Reidt admitted that all who visited him were not friendly. On Tuesday night, for instance, five men whose "looks were pregnant with malicious significance" paid him a call. They did not say anything, said the fat little prophet, but when they left they cast evil glances at him. Then there was Pasquale Di Vito of the Italian settlement of Hagerman. Di Vito's wife is a recent convert to Reidt's band. Di Vito, too, failed to say anything but he also failed to be jolly during his call.

Yet another caller was the Rev. M. J. Devine, negro parson, who dropped in with his wife and four followers. The Rev. Devine brought a cheerful face and kind words.

"If Jesus does not come," he said solemnly, "you may find rest with me. You may come to our rest in Sayville and stay as long as you may need a home."

When the negro preacher was asked how he expected his home in Sayville to hold the entire band he was not stumped.

"The home will stretch," he said simply.

After all were gone, photographers descended en masse on Reidt's shack. They wanted to be sure, in case the world did end, to have a picture for the papers next day. As late as 10 o'clock the chubby Apostle was outside his shack, raising a megaphone to his lips and shouting, rather wearily, "Gabriel! Gabriel!" while the flashlights were taken.

"He is talking himself into the grave," whispered a woman, as Reidt turned to go into his house. He heard the remark and turned. He looked sadly at the speaker and then went in, without replying.

Attacks the Watchers.

The Rev. Mr. Daniels, who made a statement yesterday at the Hotel St. George in Brooklyn, said that Reidt and other followers of Mrs. Rowen, the Los Angeles doom prophet, had been expelled from the Seventh Day Adventist Church because of their conviction that midnight tonight would hear the crack of doom. He declared that not more than 100 of the Adventists' enrollment of 120,000 were "reformed" Adventists or disciples of Mrs. Rowen.

Reports from Lincoln, Neb., Middletown, N. Y., Los Angeles and other points where the Adventists have many communicants disclosed that only a few of the members of that creed were following Mrs. Rowen's prediction. They, like Reidt, however, also were getting ready for quick transit to San Diego.

Conditions, in fact, were not quite like those which attended the end of the world predicted to take place in April, 1843. On that day the doomsday believers were followed by Alexander Miller. Meade Minnigerode, in his book called "The Fabulous Forties," a study of the period from 1840 to 1850, described the Millerite ascension day thus:

"In 1842 Millerites, as his followers were called, were eagerly preparing for the event in almost every town in the Middle and Eastern States. Meetings were held everywhere, while thousands assembled in the enormous tents which his preachers carried with them from city to city. People began to close their shops and to dispose of their belongings. The excitement increased until in March, 1843, husbands were murdering their wives for refusing to become converts, mothers were poisoning their children, men and women were committing suicide and going insane.

"The great day came and passed, as days will."

Miller, however, found an error in his calculations and set another day. This passed also and shopkeepers who had been advertising "Muslin for Ascension Robes" found the demand suddenly ended.

CARNEGIE HALL SALE IS NOW COMPLETE

TENANTS ARE REASSURED

Properties Reported to Have Been Held at $3,000,000—Price Is Not Announced.

Contracts for the sale of Carnegie Hall, Fifty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue, which was reported last week as being sold to Robert E. Simon, a real estate operator, by the executor of the estate of the late Andrew Carnegie, were signed, sealed and delivered yesterday afternoon.

The sale involves Carnegie Hall and the Rembrandt apartment adjoining the hall in Fifty-seventh Street which have been sold by the estate of Andrew Carnegie and the stables and buildings at 155, 157 and 159 West Fifty-sixth street which were sold by Mrs. Andrew Carnegie.

It was reported that the properties were held at about $3,000,000, but just what Mr. Simon paid for them has not been revealed.

As the result of a purchase closed just before the Carnegie Hall sale Mr. Simon controls a frontage of sixty-five feet on Fifty-seventh Street and 100 feet on Fifty-sixth Street. This in conjunction with the Carnegie Hall property purchase makes a combined plot of about 57,000 square feet under one control.

The following notice was sent to the tenants of Carnegie Hall yesterday by Mr. Simon:

"You will have read in the newspapers of the sale to me of Carnegie Hall. While I am not yet in possession of the actual title to the property and shall not become your landlord in fact for thirty or sixty days, I wish to take this opportunity of assuring you that you may with tranquility disregard any talk on the part of real estate agents trying to induce you to move to the various office studio buildings in the neighborhood.

"The tradition of Carnegie Hall and its studios will be maintained by me in the future as in the past. Mr. Smith will continue to act, and any new leases which you may wish to discuss at this time can be taken up by him on my behalf even in advance of the passing of title.

"As to the report that the building may be torn down at the end of five years, or sooner if a suitable music hall is elsewhere erected, I have absolutely no plans with respect to this, nor any intentions to demolish the present buildings. If the income proves sufficient (and there is no reason why it should not) to warrant the maintenance of these buildings, I see no reason why they should not remain as they are indefinitely."

When it became known last week that Carnegie Hall was being sold, Robert A. Franks, executor of the Carnegie estate and President of the Home Trust Company, issued a statement in which he said:

"The executor and Mrs. Carnegie, as residuary legatees, have been anxious that no inconvenience might result to the lovers of music in New York City. To this end the contract will provide for the continued operation of the auditorium of Carnegie Hall for five years, unless another hall, capable of taking its place, is sooner constructed.

"Mr. Simon contemplates no changes which will affect any of the present leases."

C. R. Miller of Ladd & Nichols was the broker in the sale. Root, Clark, Buckner & Howland were the attorneys for the estate of Andrew Carnegie, and Gleason, McLanahan, Merritt & Ingraham represented Mr. Simon.

These properties occupy the entire block front of 200 feet on the east side of Seventh Avenue from Fifty-sixth to Fifty-seventh Street, 200 feet on the south side of Fifty-seventh Street and 200 feet on the north side of Fifty-sixth Street, forming a plot of 40,000 square feet.

CLAIM CROKER ESTATE WHEN SALE IS REFUSED

J. B. McDonald and Palm Beach Estates File Suit After Seeking to Buy Property.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 5.—As a climax to negotiations said to have been conducted with Mrs. Bula Croker, widow of the late Tammany Hall chieftain, for the purchase of a part of the estate now in her possession in Palm Beach County, attorneys for J. B. McDonald and the Palm Beach Estates have filed a suit in Federal court here, claiming a right to the property.

Title to the Croker homestead, willed by Richard Croker to his wife, is sought by the Croker children in a suit now pending in Federal court.

A notice filed yesterday by attorneys for Ethel and Richard Croker set forth that a portion of the Croker homestead in Palm Beach County is subject to a judgment of $220,000 obtained in New York State, and to such other liens as may be established by other crediors.

Previous petitions sought to have Richard Croker declared the head of the family and the property vested in the heirs at law.

CLEARED OF FATAL HOLD-UP

Newark Slayer Jumped Fence, Police Say, and Accused Was Paralytic

Samuel Migdal, 40 years old, of 309 South Fourth Street, Brooklyn, was honorably discharged in the Tombs Court yesterday when a telegram from Chief of Police Long of Newark was read to Magistrate Edgar V. Frothingham. It said Migdal was not the man suspected of holding up and killing Meyer Rosenberg, a watchman in the National Oil and Supply Company's plant there, several weeks ago.

Detectives who arrested Migdal at Chief Long's request had told the Magistrate on his first arraignment Wednesday they believed a mistake had been made. The slayer of Rosenberg had vaulted a high fence in escaping, and Migdal has been a paralytic several years.

Migdal then volunteered to accompany a detective to Newark, and was placed in a line-up of twenty-four men at Police Headquarters there. Thomas North, 19 years old, of 246 Mulberry Street, Newark, who had confessed to a part in the Rosenberg killing, the police alleged, declared Migdal was not involved. According to the Newark police he had identified a picture of Migdal in the Rogues' Gallery as that of an accomplice. The Newark police apologized to Migdal for his arrest.

meeting of the Building Trades Council, in Beethoven Hall, 210 East Fifth Street, where he heard what labor was doing for the drive.

The Rev. Craon H. Adye Prichard, Acting Dean of the cathedral, spoke last night from Station WFBH, the radio broadcasting plant of the Hotel Majestic.

"Everyone who reads the newspapers," he said, "must have seen something about the great campaign that is being pushed at the present time for the completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. That cathedral has been standing but one-fourth finished on Morningside Heights for the last twelve years. It has accommodated in that time thousands and thousands of worshipers; in fact, it is estimated that 200,000 people come every year to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and on many occasions every year it is filled to capacity, so that those who wish to worship cannot squeeze inside the doors.

"There is a great demand for a magnificent universal Church of God, where people of all nations and languages and points of view may join in the expression of prayer and praise.

Seven Beautiful Chapels.

"The crown of the cathedral at present is its seven beautiful chapels, each one dedicated to the use of some group of nations. There is, for instance, the Italian Chapel, St. Ambrose's, the architecture and fittings of which are in the true Italian style. Here may be held Italian services; and the same is true of the French Chapel, the Spanish Chapel, the Oriental Chapel and the German Chapel. Last night there was a Swedish service, conducted in three different languages, and every seat in the entire Chapel of St. Ansgarius, dedicated to the Scandinavian peoples, was taken, and some persons had to remain standing.

"In one corner of the cathedral is being built a niche to hold the Golden Book, and in the Golden Book will be inscribed, when the time comes, the name of every man, woman, boy and girl who has contributed anything at all to the building fund. I am sure that we all wish our names to be inscribed there in an everlasting record. Our children's children for generations to come will then be able to take courage and pride in the fact that their forefathers saw the opportunity that lay before them and did not withhold their contribution to God's glory."

There were no Manhattan report meetings yesterday, but today two luncheons will be held. At the Hotel Astor the women's division will report and Ed Wynn, star of "The Grab Bag," will auction tickets for the matinee of the show to be held Feb. 16 at the Globe Theatre in aid of the campaign. The downtown meeting, to be in the Chamber of Commerce, 65 Liberty Street, will afford opportunity for the business men's division and allied groups to report.

Scattering contributions were announced through Bishop Manning and through the offices of the fund in the old Synod Hall. The Bishop received this letter:

My Dear Bishop Manning:

On behalf of Troop No. 8, Staten Island, Girl Scouts of America, it gives me great pleasure to enclose herewith money order for $12, donation to the building fund. This amount constitutes 25 per cent. of our troop treasury, and our one regret is that it is not many times larger.

We are taking a lively interest in watching the growth of your fund and wish you every success.

Sincerely yours,

LOUISE B. INDERMUHLE, Captain.

Geoffrey Tasker, 14 years old, of 2,955 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx, in a letter to the Bishop, in which he enclosed $2, said that he was giving his whole week's allowance to help build the great new Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Five Chinese Contribute.

Among the contributions were those of five Chinese, Lum Toy, Leung Pong, Chan On, Leung Yoke and Leung Fong, employed in the Shanghai Restaurant, 127 Broad Street, Elizabeth, N. J. Each man contributed $1.

The Rev. Hobart Whitney, rector of Trinity Church, Athens, N. Y., sent a donation with a letter saying that it was a great satisfaction to him to know that he happened to have had the privilege of holding the very first regular service in the cathedral.

A check from "S. R. W." toward the fund for the Children's Arch was sent in "the name of my great-grandson, John W. Wills, Taj Mahal, Bombay, India."

Miss M. M. Diedrich, visiting at 653 East Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, obtained pictures of the cathedral, and said that when she returned to her home in Geneva, Switzerland, she would place them on exhibition in the American church there.

"An old maid's mite" was the note accompanying a check for $5 from a Baltimore woman. George M. Greene sent a contribution with this message:

"I am glad, as a veteran musician and organist of sixty years' service in churches of many denominations, of this opportunity to add my modest contribution to the Cathedral's building fund."

Virginia Terhune Van de Water, author, contributed through her cousin, the Rev. Dr. George R. Van de Water. Mrs. Henry C. White of New Haven forwarded a contribution in memory of her brother, the Rev. Lawrence Henry Schwabonce. Mrs. S. H. Knight of Laramie, Wyo., sent $10 to the Children's Arch fund.

Two University of Virginia students, Robert du Bois Kemp of New York City and John Dumont Kay of Morristown, N. J., contributed. Mrs. L. Frederic Pease, Executive Secretary of the Church Mission of Help, 1,133 Broadway, sent $50 as "a small offering from the staff of the Church Mission of Help and from some of those who, through the Church Mission of Help, have come to the knowledge and love of God and who now wish to share in the building of this house in His praise."

"For the Children's Arch from the architect's grandson, Jerome D. Greene 2d, 6 Edgewood Place, Scarsdale, N. Y.," read a note with a contribution of $25. Mrs. Orlando B. Willcox of Englewood, N. J., donated $100 in memory of her brother, the late Robert Grier Cooke, who was chairman of the civic division in the campaign.

A Unitarian "who loves the Cathedral" was among yesterday's contributors, and two gifts from distant points were listed—one from Mrs. E. M. Wilson of Utah, the other from Mrs. Bernard Schulte of Omaha.

Among the patriotic societies reporting at the meeting of General Charles H. Sherrill's division at the Hotel Astor on Wednesday was the Society of the Second War With Great Britain, which, through Henry Harmon Noble, Secretary, contributed $100.

LABOR HELPS CATHEDRAL.

Trades Council Assures Bishop of Support and Reports Gifts.

John P. Coughlin, Secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council, assured Bishop William T. Manning last night, at a meeting of the council in Beethoven Hall, 210 Fifth Street, that organized labor would "remain on the job" and give its support toward the work of completing the Cathedral of St. John the Divine so long as the edifice was under construction.

The organization of letter carriers had contributed $100 through the council, said Mr. Coughlin, and promised to raise further contributions. Other contributions made through the council were $25 from the Jewish waiters Union, and $50 from Dominck D'Alessandro, President of the International Hod Carriers Union, Quincy, Mass. Mr. Coughlin said he expected the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, now in session in Miami, to adopt a resolution addressed to local unions in New York urging their support of the Cathedral project.

Thomas J. Curtis, Deputy Commissioner of the Workmen's Compensation Board, gave to Bishop Manning a $10 note contributed yesterday by four workmen whose compensation was awarded for accidental injury. The donation came from a Jew, an Italian, an Irishman and a negro, said Mr. Curtis.

Bishop Manning described the widespread response to the call for help toward the completion of the Cathedral, and thanked organized labor for its aid.

Dr. Copeland Says

In "The Health Book" by Royal S. Copeland, M. D., former Commissioner of Health, New York City, appears the following:

"A sick person has an appetite which must be coaxed. Pretty dishes and a flower on the tray will add to the happiness and promote the recovery of the sick one. Don't forget about the joys of tinkling ice in a palatable drink of some sort. A jaded appetite may be stimulated in this way."

Be sure that the ice you use—whether for the sickroom or for general purposes—is pure and safe. Knickerbocker Ice can always be relied upon. Made from carefully inspected, four-times-filtered drinking water.

SHUNS CITY COURTS IN BUCKETING CASES

State to Ask Indictment of Two Brokerage Firms in Suffolk, Nassau and Queens.

JUSTICE "TOO SLOW" HERE

Offices of J. F. Townsend & Co. and R. F. Nauman & Co. Dismantled and Records Impounded.

Attorney General Albert Ottinger announced yesterday that he would seek indictments for grand larceny against the stock brokerage firms of J. F. Townsend & Co. and R. F. Nauman & Co., both of 68 William Street, by the Grand Juries in Suffolk, Nassau and Queens Counties, following instructions by Supreme Court Justice Hagarty in Brooklyn to bring criminal proceedings. The firms are accused of bucketing orders.

Justice Hagarty issued an order continuing a temporary injunction restraining the two concerns, together with sixteen employes, from acting as stock brokers or issuing, selling, negotiating, advertising or distributing stocks, bonds or notes. The temporary injunction was issued by Justice Selah B. Strong after Assistant Attorney General Keys Winter had charged that the firms had taken money for the purchase of stocks which in fact were not purchased.

When Mr. Winter disclosed to Justice Hagarty his plan for asking for indictments in Suffolk, Nassau and Queens counties, the Court asked why the proceedings were not taken in New York County.

"New York justice moves too slowly," Mr. Winter told him.

Six Witnesses Allege Losses.

Assistant Attorney Generals Victor Kauffman and William Millholland also appeared in court yesterday with Mr. Winter. Besides representing the State, Mr. Winter also represents six principal witnesses, all of whom assert they have suffered losses through their dealings with the defendants. They are Harry Jones, William H. Jamonneau, William D. Purcell, Gene Spencer, Harry Wade and Morris J. Lane. Saul Gordon of 19 West Forty-fourth Streets, is counsel for the defendants.

It is alleged by Mr. Winter in his complaint that the defendants "are pretending to engage in the business of stock brokers by issuing, selling, negotiating, advertising and distributing stocks, bonds and notes. Between September, 1924, and January 14, 1925, many people ordered these concerns to purchase for them stock in the Radio Corporation of America, the Dryden Gold Corporation and the Mine Development Corporation of Canada."

It is alleged in the complaint that the defendants pretended to execute these orders without actually doing so, in violation of the General Business law, Articles 23A, Sections 352 and 353, "in that they are employing certain devices, schemes and artifices to obtain from the plaintiffs money belonging to the plaintiffs by means of false pretenses."

The employees named in the injunction order are Charles Greenhaus, Louis O. Manes, Edward Rosenberg, Sigmund Levy, Irving Meisel, Joseph C. Barron, Thomas Myson, Henry Fuchs, Louis Rosner, Manuel Warner, Samuel Blinken, John Raymon, Herbert Charles, Anna Howell, Harry Leder and William J. Weinstein.

Firms' Records Impounded.

The offices of the two firms were dismantled yesterday. Mr. Winter said that on orders of the court all their records had been impounded. Evidence is expected to go before the Grand Juries in the three counties selected for the prosecution when they are next in session in March. Mr. Winter pointed out that under the Martin act the Attorney General can institute these proceedings, either superseding the various District Attorneys or cooperating with them.

EQUIPMENT ORDERS HEAVY.

Locomotives, Rails and Cars Totaled $1,500,000 Yesterday.

Renewed activity was reported in the equipment and rail market yesterday, with orders announced yesterday estimated at close to $1,500,000.

Ten locomotives were ordered by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific from the American Locomotive Company. The Baldwin Locomotive Company booked five mountain-type locomotives for the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, five for the Canadian National Railways and three mikados for the Andes Copper Company.

An order for 2,000 tons of steel rail was placed by the Wheeling & Lake Erie with the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company. According to reports the Baltimore & Ohio is now in the market for 30,000 additional tons.

The Ford Motor Company has purchased fifty flat cars from the Standard Steel Car Company in addition to the 475 gondolas previously reported. The Palace Poultry Company purchased fifty poultry cars from the Illinois Car and Manufacturing Company.

New inquiries include 50 to 100 glass-lined tank cars for the Hershey Chocolate Company, 240 tank cars for the Quaker City Oil Line and ten to twenty tank cars for the Western Union Telegraph Company.

DIXIE HUNDRED ASKS AID.

Members Requested to Send Addresses to the New Secretary.

The Dixie Hundred is in a dire predicament. The Dixie Hundred is an organization of traveling men who work South out of New York. The last regular meeting was held at Long Beach in August. According to George W. Hanley, who was elected Secretary, the retiring Secretary, Charles Knox, omitted to list the names and addresses of the members, hence Mr. Hanley has been unable to notify the members that they are to dine on Wednesday evening, Feb. 18, at the Commodore.

"Knox forgot," Hanley said, "to give me their names or I forgot to write them down or they forgot to give them to either of us or—"

Anyway the Secretary wants the new members and the old members to send their reservations to him at once. For this purpose they should address themselves to:

CARDINAL HAYES SAILING.

Leaves Today on His Triennial Visit to the Bahamas.

Cardinal Hayes will sail today on the Munson liner, Munargo, on his triennial visit to Nassau. He will be accompanied by his secretary, Mgr. Stephen J. Donahue. Nassau is in the New York diocese and every three years the head of the diocese is required to visit the Bahamas.

A large number of passengers are booked to sail on the Munargo. The increase in bookings, according to the steamship company's announcement, is due to floods in the South which have blocked railroad traffic to and from Winter resorts in Florida. Many of the passengers on the Munargo will go to Nassau, and from there transhipp to Miami.

FIND JACK NUTTING MISSING FIVE DAYS

BOY CALLED ADVENTUROUS

Special to The New York Times.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Fb. 5.—Local police today found 12-year-old Jack Nutting, son of Mrs. William Washburn Nutting of New York, who had been missing for five days and whom his mother feared had been kidnapped.

The boy was located in the Alhambra Hotel here, with a man who gave his name to the police as S. Smith and his address as Zass Lake, Minn.

Smith denied that he had kidnapped the boy. He said he had merely been lodging the boy because Jack told him his mother had gone to Miami. Smith, however, was held for investigation.

The boy was taken back to his mother, who came here three weeks ago with her only son and daughter.

The boy's father, Commodore William Washburn Nutting of New York, was lost on an Arctic expedition last September.

Five days ago the boy failed to return from St. Joseph's Academy, which he was attending here, and yesterday Mrs. Nutting reported to the police that she saw him riding in an automobile with a mysterious stranger and three companions. The alarm was then sent out all over Florida, and police began a search of the hotels of this city.

Mother Tells of Stranger.

Mrs. Nutting, grief stricken over this second tragedy within a few months, appeared distracted when seen today before her son was found. She said the word "missing" struck terror to her.

"First it was my husband and now my boy," she sobbed.

"Ever since that dreadful night last September, when a message trickled out of the Arctic that the Leif Ericsson expedition, of which my husband was a member, was missing. I've feared to hear the word.

'Somehow, I've had a premonition that something would happen to Jack. He had the love of romance in his blood, the craving for adventure that gripped his father. It was largely because of this adventurous spirit that I warned him against strangers.

"Last Summer, while we were stopping at a hotel in New York, Jack became acquainted—I don't know just how—with an apparently wealthy man to whom he was attracted. They soon became fast friends, and this man entertained Jack quite a bit, taking him to theatres and other places of amusement.

"I did not give the matter any more thought until several days ago I saw this man on the streets of St. Augustine. At first I thought it was a coincidence. Then my son started going with him again and failed to show up at home on several occasions. I felt that an evil influence was being exerted over my boy, but was powerless to act.

"Then yesterday the climax came. I saw my boy with the same man and three others drive by in a costly looking automobile. I felt something was wrong. I ran out to the street and cried out, 'Jack, Jack!' The elderly man yelled out 'Step on it!' and the car sped away."

Boy Had Wanderlust.

Herbert L. Stone, editor of Yachting, who knew Commodore Nutting and his family well, said here yesterday that he was not worried about the disappearance of Jack, because he "inherited his father's wanderlust." It was not unusual, according to Mr. Stone, for the boy to leave his house and stay away all day, or for two days at a time.

"He was just like his father," said Mr. Stone, "and seemed to have a habit of running away. He apparently liked the adventure of it."

TWIN BROTHER STORY FAILS IN BIGAMY CASE

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—John H. Morgan was found guilty today in the Camden Criminal Court before Judge Shay of bigamy and carrying concealed weapons. Sentence was deferred pending a motion for a new trial.

Morgan made the defense that his twin brother married wife No. 1, then died, and that he merely took his brother's place in the household without apprising his sister-in-law of the real situation. Wife No. 2, Miss Josie Walsh, a nurse of Wood Crest, N. J., whom Morgan married in July, 1924, under the name of Robert Crofton, was not present today.

"The last time I saw my brother before I met him in Philadelphia in 1923," Morgan testified, "was when I was fighting with the Allies at Liege in 1914. My brother was in the German army. I saw him about twenty feet from me. I was shot in the head, and do not remember anything after that until I came to my senses in a restaurant in a New York railway station on Jan. 2, 1923."

Miss Betty K. Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Martin Williams, 2,016 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, took the witness stand against Morgan and identified him positively as the husband of Mrs. Morgan No. 1 who had been a nurse in her family.

Miss Williams and Mrs. Larkins, of Marion, Md., said they attended the wedding and identified the defendant as the man who had married Mrs. Morgan No. 1.

SLAIN MAN FOUND IN SNOW.

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT NECK, L. I., Feb. 5.—The body of a well-dressed man, apparently an Italian, was found today beside the motor parkway, about 1,000 feet from the Great Neck entrance, off the Lakeville Road. The man had been shot four times.

The police found blood spots on the snow along an automobile track extending a mile from the Bayside entrance to the parkway. They believe the victim was forced or enticed into the car in Jamaica or Bayside and then shot twice through the head. The murderers then, according to the police theory, sped out on Long Island to dispose of the body, but when they found that they were leaving a trail of blood threw it out in the parkway and fired two more bullets into it. One of the shots, at least, was fired from a rifle.

The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of C. G. Remsen, in Great Neck. The man was about 25 years old. He wore a brown overcoat, gray felt hat and a blue suit, a garnet ring and a stickpin. His silver belt buckle bore the initial "M."

ELLIS ISLAND ASKS COTILLO'S REMOVAL

URGE PROOF OR RETRACTION

Commissioner Curran to Join in Request—Cotillo Defiant, Says "We Have the Evidence."

The summary removal of Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo from office by the Legislature unless he retracts or proves charges that the Joint Legislative Committee on the Exploitation of Immigrants, of which he was Chairman, has evidence of wholesale graft by Government employes on Ellis Island, is demanded in resolutions adopted unanimously at a mass meeting held in the inspection hall on the island yesterday.

The resolutions were signed by more than 300 subordinate officials and will be forwarded to Albany after the remaining 200, who were off duty when the meeting was held, have an opportunity to sign. Commissioner of Immigration Henry H. Curran said that he was in "hearty accord" with the resolutions and that Justice Cotillo ought to be removed.

Justice Cotillo reiterated in a statement last night that the committee was in possession of evidence of graft by Ellis Island employes, and declared that they could "go as far as they like" in passing resolutions.

The Resolutions.

The resolutions, said to have been adopted without the knowledge of Commissioner Curran at a meeting held at 11:30 A. M., presided over by W. W. Brown, Chief of the Law Division, read:

To the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House, New York State Legislature, Albany, N. Y.:

Gentlemen: THE NEW YORK TIMES of Thursday, Feb. 5, 1925, publishes a statement alleged to have been made by Supreme Court Justice S. A. Cotillo, which reads in part as follows:

"We have records of graft on Ellis Island in thousands of cases involving millions of dollars—not by Commissioner Curran, but by his subordinates. The report only skims the surface, and I think everything in it can be substantiated by evidence. * * *"

The subordinate officials and employes in the Federal service at the United States Immigration Station at Ellis Island, N. Y., have in the past borne with patient endurance the numerous attacks upon their integrity appearing in the public press from time to time, and emanating from individuals hostile to the enforcement of the immigration laws and, therefore, antagonistic to officials who are charged with the enforcement of such laws, or from disappointed seekers, high or low, of favors which could not be properly granted by the immigration authorities.

Justice S. A. Cotillo has not submitted one scintilla of evidence that there is any foundation in fact for these charges. Be it therefore Resolved, That the undersigned Federal officials and employes in the Immigration Service at Ellis Island, who deny the charges as malicious and unfounded, call upon the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly of the State of New York to demand of Justice Cotillo that he either produce to the properly constituted Federal officials evidence of the charges which he has made or publicly retract the published statements which have been attributed to him, or, failing in this, that he be summarily removed from office.

Curran "in Hearty Accord."

"I am in hearty accord with the resolution," Commissioner Curran said, "and shall join in the request that the Legislature remove Cotillo from office, unless he retracts or gives evidence in support of his libelous attack on the 500 American men and women who do our Government's work here on Ellis Island. The attack is cowardly, as well as untrue, because, while Cotillo was careful to leave me personally out of it, he strikes over my shoulder at all the employes here, without mentioning any one of them by name or submitting a shred of evidence. This report dates back to a year ago. If he had any evidence he had it then, and it was his duty to submit it to me for action.

"It is time to put a stop to these attacks of foreign propaganda upon the decent people who do the work of Ellis Island. I do not care so much about attacks by foreigners, but an American who can say that 500 employes of our Government are guilty of millions of dollars of graft in thousands of cases is unfit to be a Judge, and unless he can back up his statements with facts he should be removed.

"In trying to squirm out of this Cotillo has put the blame for the accusation of short-changing immigrants on a man named Toxsi. He says Toxsi gave him the evidence upon which he founded the accusation. Well, where is that evidence? I should have had it a year ago, if Cotillo had it himself and had done his duty.

"As for this Toxsi, it is enough to say that he is in the steamship ticket business, and that he was an unsuccessful and disgruntled bidder himself for the money exchange concession at Ellis Island last Fall. James F. Roe, who made the best bid and got the contract, is an honest man. So is Joseph W. Sentner, the Ellis Island agent of all the trunk line railroads, who is accused by Cotillo."

Justice Is Defiant.

Justice Cotillo said last night:

"Personally, I don't care a snap about their resolutions. They can go as far as they like. I will substantiate every statement in the committee report, and I have had a conference with William F. McCormack and Robert Cummings, the lawyers who drew it and who are now in Albany. I'm not worried a bit about the whole situation. Commissioner Curran is trying to defend a railroad employe, and mention of him was incidental. I don't know anything about that situation.

"This is not the first time I have fought the large corporate interests—the steamships and railroads. I have only rendered a public service. The steamship and express companies, under a law passed in 1890, appoint thousands and thousands of agents, many of whom fleece immigrants through the credentials they possess.

"I have had the greatest opposition from the Italian press. During the war from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000 was lost by Italians who sought to send money home through private Italian bankers here. They are advertisers in the Italian papers. I have fought these interests at Albany for years.

"There is no reason for Commissioner Curran to demand an apology the way he has, as I made no personal charges against him. If he had sent me a letter calling attention to anything in the report which he challenged, and if a retraction had been necessary, no gentleman would refuse it. But it makes no difference. We have the evidence."

Justice Cotillo said that, being a constitutional officer, the only way in which he could be removed would be through charges filed in the Assembly and through impeachment by the Senate.

Commissioner Curran last night gave out a letter received by him from R. T. Kessemeier, agent of the North German Lloyd at 32 Broadway, in which Mr. Kessemeier said: "There is not one case of dishonesty or graft which has ever come to our knowledge, and we hardly think there is any Governmental department which can be more proud of its employes than the Immigration Service at Ellis Island."

SEEK TO BAR JUDGE ALLEGED TO BE 74

HIS ACTS ARE QUESTIONED

Decisions Involving Large Property Rights and Prison Sentences Involved.

The law firm of McLear & McLear of 141 Broadway has filed with Governor Alfred E. Smith a petition for the removal of Supreme Court Justice Henry V. Borst of Amsterdam on the ground that he has passed the age limit of 70 years. The petition submits records to prove that Justice Borst is 74 years old, instead of 68, as he says he is.

Doubt is alleged to attach to the validity of all judicial decisions by Justice Borst later than July 6, 1920, on which date his term of office is asserted to have automatically terminated by reason of his attainment of the age of 70 years. Not only large property rights but many prison sentences are alleged to be in question.

Justice Borst is the so-called "Prohibition Judge." He became well known in this city in 1921, when he was nominated by Governor Miller to preside over an extraordinary term of the Supreme Court which was called into session to clear a calendar clogged by thousands of liquor cases.

Presents Baptismal Record.

Asserting that Justice Borst was born at Cobleskill, N. Y., on July 6, 1850, the petition first presents an alleged copy of a baptismal record showing that Henry V. Borst was 6 years of age when he was baptized in 1856. The baptismal record was one of many bits of evidence accumulated during an extensive search by the petitioners for data regarding the age of Justice Borst. Other alleged proofs which they submit are copies of United States Census records showing that he was 10 years old in 1860 and 20 years old in 1870; records of the Brockport Normal School showing that in 1873 he was in his twenty-third year; records of Cornell University showing that he was 23 years old when he entered that university in 1873, and a law student's certificate on file in the office of the clerk of the Court of Appeals showing that he was upward of 23 years of age in 1874.

Ottinger Accused of Delay.

In a letter accompanying the petition, McLear & McLear complain of alleged unnecessary delay on the part of Attorney General Ottinger to bring to an issue charges which had been previously filed with the Attorney General's office.

H. G. McLear said yesterday that copies of the charges against Justice Borst had also been filed with the State Bar Association.

"The bench and bar of the State of New York," said the letter to the Governor which accompanied the petition, "are entitled to a prompt investigation of such grave charges as we have filed, and it is little short of a travesty to have action in such charges delayed in this manner.

"We are advised that a similar charge was made against Mr. Borst when Mr. Newton was Attorney General, but no action was taken thereon. The present application cannot be whitewashed, no matter how much influence may be brought to bear.

"The funds of the State have clearly been dissipated for over four years by payment of salary to Mr. Borst after he had passed the age limit. Nothing that we know of could bring the administration of justice into greater disrepute than to allow one to act as Justice of the Supreme Court for several years after the expiration of his term when the facts are fully known to the public officials whose duty it is to prevent such conduct.

"On Jan. 26 we suggested to Attorney General Ottinger that he might want to have the Controller hold up the January salary, but it is apparent that, due to inaction, such salary has been paid.

"We shall be very glad to appear before you at any time you may desire and produce the evidence to substantiate the charges in our petition, all of which evidence has long been in the possession of the Attorney General."

Investigation by Law Firm.

The McLears began their investigation of the age of Justice Borst in order to bring about the annulment of a judgment which he had rendered against one of their clients, the Sylvia Lake Company, Inc. McLear & McLear had sued to vacate an option for the sale of valuable zinc property on the ground that not all of the owners had signed the option. It was alleged that the option provided for the sale of the property for $10,000, whereas it was worth about $200,000. Justice Borst ruled that the option was binding. While appealing the case, the McLears heard rumors concerning the age of Justice Borst which caused their investigation.

H. G. McLear said yesterday that he would ask that the judgment in this case be set aside on the ground that having reached his seventieth year, the Justice's term of office was over before he decided this case and he was therefore without jurisdiction.

STUDENT IS KILLED IN A BOXING BOUT

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Stanton B. Stever of Waterford, N. Y., a sophomore at Syracuse University, died at 8:10 tonight from a fracture of the skull suffered during a practice boxing bout this afternoon at the university gymnasium.

The fatal injury was not a direct result of a blow, it was said, but resulted from Stever's fall during the bout, his head striking sharply against the floor. The student did not regain consciousness.

Stever was boxing Carl Hansen, a member of the Syracuse varsity football squad, at the time of the accident. He was rated as Hansen's superior, having knocked out Hansen two weeks ago during elimination tests in try-outs for the varsity boxing team, and was carrying the boxing to his opponent up to the time of the accident.

Hansen apparently landed a lucky blow which staggered Stever and the latter fell backward to the floor, his head snapping back and striking sharply on the floor. Emergency attempts to revive him failed, and he was taken to the university infirmary, where he died.

No formal statement was issued by Chancellor Charles W. Flint, but it was said unofficially the tragedy probably would result in an immediate discontinuance of boxing as a Syracuse University sport.

Stever met Hansen in an elimination contest in the welterweight class to decide which would represent Syracuse University in the dual glove meet with United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Saturday afternoon. The meet was canceled at once.

Pierre (S. D.) Bank Fails to Open.

PIERRE, S. D., Feb. 5.—The Pierre National Bank of Commerce failed to open today. Its President, A. W. Ewert, was dismissed yesterday by Governor Carl Gunderson from his post as Treasurer of the Rural Credits Board. He testified yesterday that his institution had paid up capital and surplus of $105,000 and that rural credits funds deposited in it approximated $100,000.

TO SAIL ON A HUNT FOR LIGHTED FISH

WILL CRUISE 13,000 MILES

Elaborate Apparatus to Be Used in a Scientific Expedition for Zoological Society.

The warbuilt wooden ship Arcturus, now converted into the greatest floating zoological laboratory in the world, will leave Tebo's slip at the foot of Twenty-third Street, Brooklyn, on Tuesday, under the command of William Beebe, for a 13,000 mile hunt for strange fish, especially the curious illuminated monsters which are said to haunt the depths under the Sargasso Sea.

The Arcturus carries a great armament of traps, hooks, nets and dredges for capturing inhabitants of the deep sea and the ocean bottom. The great depths under the Sargasso Sea are believed to be particularly rich in strange and little-known monsters.

The Sargasso Sea, which is about half way between Cuba and Africa, is supposed to be a vast green plain of seaweed becalmed by the meeting of various currents. The floating continent of vegetation is supposed to attract myriad forms of surface ocean life which, dying and sinking, is believed to support a vast undersea life. Many fish have been caught with remarkable electric lighting systems. Some are said to be lit up like the Albany night boat. Others carry lanterns and flashlights of red, green and yellow. It is believed that only a small proportion of the species of lighted fish have been caught, so the expedition will specialize in them. Spectroscopes for analyzing their light and laboratory apparatus for studying their radiant mechanism are carried by the Arcturus. Some fish are said to carry their own electrical plants; some are known to produce their light chemically, while others borrow light from colonies of luminous bacteria which make themselves at home in the fish. Octopuses, 100 feet in diameter, which inhabit the sea and are reported by legend as dragging down small ships, are also to be investigated.

The Arcturus will move slowly along the Equator, making long stops every few hundred miles, in order to investigate ocean life at various points. An intensive zoological study of a part of the coast of Africa near the Equator will also be made. Such a study has been made of the South American side of the Equator, and one of the purposes of the expedition is to compare land life on both sides of the Atlantic at the Equator in order to see how the evidence supports or damages the theory that South America and Africa once formed a single body of land which was torn in two parts by forces under the earth's crust and set drifting away from each other.

The expedition is supported by the Department of Tropical Research of the New York Zoological Society. Among the backers of the expedition are Marshall Field, Vincent Astor, Harrison Williams and Henry D. Whiton.

CONVICT CHAUFFEUR OF MANSLAUGHTER

Verdict in Girl's Death First of Its Kind Ever Returned in Richmond.

A jury in the Richmond County Court brought in a verdict of second degree manslaughter yesterday against Carmine Testa, a chauffeur, who has been on trial for several days charged with killing a thirteen-year-old schoolgirl with his automobile. It was the first manslaughter conviction in an automobile death case ever returned in a Richmond County Court. Judge J. Harry Kiernan released Testa in $5,000 bail for sentence a week from today. The maximum sentence is fifteen years.

Testa was charged with running down and instantly killing Catherine Smith of 121 Beacon Street, New Dorp, on Sept. 13, 1923. With her mother the girl was waiting at the corner of Richmond Road and Beacon Street for her father, who was going to take them to the theatre. As she stepped out to look up the road for her father an automobile, traveling at a high rate of speed, according to witnesses at the trial, struck her, knocked her into the gutter, and sped away.

The ownership of the automobile was traced to Testa through the license numbers. He did not take the stand, but his attorney produced testimony to support his contention that he was not in the car at the time. Several policemen testified that a short time after the event Testa called up the New Dorp police station and asked that a general alarm be sent out for his automobile, which, he said, had been stolen several hours earlier.

The prosecution, however, called witnesses who testified that they had seen Testa in the car both a short time before the girl was killed and a short time after. Policemen found the automobile in front of Testa's home at 31 Third Street, New Dorp.

District Attorney Albert C. Fach, who directed the prosecution, said he would ask that a heavy sentence be imposed on Testa.

It was brought out at the trial that the girl's mother died six weeks ago from an illness brought on by grief over her daughter's death.

MARTIN COLLAPSES AFTER KNOCKOUT

Vincent (Pepper) Martin, Brooklyn lightweight boxer, was removed to the Cumberland Street Hospital, Brooklyn, in a semi-conscious condition shortly before midnight last night following his bout with Mike Ballerino of Bayonne, N. J., in the Rink Sporting Club in Brooklyn. In the eleventh round of the bout, which was scheduled for twelve rounds, Martin was struck in the lower part of the body and fell to his knees claiming a foul. The referee refused to allow the claim and Martin was counted out after 1 minute, 10 seconds in the round.

The boxer was carried from the ring to the dressing room, where he was examined by Dr. Eugene J. Kenny and Dr. Arthur S. Katzenbogen, who stated that there was evidence that a low blow had been struck. Martin collapsed completely in the dressing room and was unconscious for half an hour. His condition became so alarming that the Rev. James J. Barr of the Queen of All Saints Church, Brooklyn, was summoned to administer the last rites.

The boxer partly regained consciousness and was removed to the hospital. He arrived there in a semi-conscious condition. Dr. M. Fishman, who attended him, declared after examining him that he was "clearing up" and that his condition was not regarded as dangerous. He stated that Martin had been struck in the groin. Asked how long the boxer would be confined to the hospital, Dr. Fishman stated that it was impossible to say exactly how long, that his confinement was indefinite.

According to the referee, Ballerino struck Martin with a right and left to the body. Dr. Kenny, who witnessed the bout from the ringside, declared, however, that before being struck in the body Martin also was hit behind the ear.

Ballerino received credit for a knockout victory. Martin weighed 132¼ pounds, Ballerino 129. In the semi-final bout Andy Tucker, 136, received the decision over Frank Maxwell, 135, who substituted for Sammy Aaronson.

COOLIDGE GETS GLOVES, FROM MICKEY WALKER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—On the advice of physicians, Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, did not participate in his scheduled eight-round exhibition tonight at the Congressional Country Club, but acted as referee in a bout between Jimmy Waterson of the Mayflower, and a boxer from a local athletic club.

It was explained that Walker got out of a sick bed to keep his engagement here, and in a ringside speech, he said his reception had not been surpassed in all his travels. He was especially pleased with his meeting today with President Coolidge. When presented by Walker with a pair of five-ounce boxing gloves, the President wanted to know what he should do with them.

"Use 'em on your next Congress," Mickey said he told the Executive, and drew a grin for reward.

MAROCZY IN BLINDFOLD PLAY

Loses One Out of Six Consultation Games at University Club.

Albert Jennings Gould, alone of some fifty chess players who took a hand, was able to wrest victory from Geza Maroczy, chess champion of Hungary, in the latter's exhibition of blindfold play at the University Club yesterday. Maroczy conducted six games without sight of boards and pieces and, officially, there were that many opponents. It had been agreed upon in advance, however, that discussion of the changing positions would be free to all. Among those to aid in the games were former Governor Whitman, Alrick H. Man, George S. Hornblower, James H. Hickey, Charles B. Kelley, George E. Roosevelt and H. B. Atkins, Colonel Beverly W. Dunn, A. P. Rogers, L. G. Bissell, R. B. Yerxa and J. G. Gleason were the five to conduct boards in addition to Gould. Frank J. Marshall, United States champion, acted as referee.

TIPLITZ REFUSES TO BOX.

Says Boston House is Too Small, Leaves Without Meeting Zivic.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Joe Tiplitz, Philadelphia lightweight, left the hall tonight before his scheduled ten-round bout with Jack Zivic of Pittsburgh. State Boxing Commissioner Eugene Buckley said afterward that club officials who overtook Tiplitz at the South Station were informed by the boxer that the house was too small to make the bout profitable on the arranged percentage.

New Philadelphia Stadium To Have Room for 250,000

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—An ordinance authorizing construction of the largest stadium in the world, to be located in South Philadelphia, on a tract adjacent to the League Island Navy Yard, was introduced in City Council today by Mayor Kendrick's office. The vast structure, designed to seat more than 100,000, with terraced standing room for 150,000 additional, is expected to be completed in time to be the main feature of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Construction of the stadium is to be under the general supervision of the Department of Public Works, and $2,000,000 has been appropriated to defray its expenses. The department is authorized in the ordinance introduced today to enter into contracts for the erection, construction and equipment of the stadium.

TERRIS WILL MEET MANDELL TONIGHT

A bout which is being regarded as the most important lightweight contest staged locally since Benny Leonard last defended the class title, and one which promises to provide a fitting prelude to the coming elimination tourney to determine Leonard's successor, will be held tonight in Madison Square Garden when Sid Terris, the east side contender, clashes with Sammy Mandell of Rockville, Ill. The rivals are scheduled to box twelve rounds and the bout promises to develop into one of the best exhibitions of boxing skill seen here this season.

Among many boxing followers, Terris and Mandell are regarded as the two outstanding lightweights in the game today and already qualified to meet for the championship of that division vacated by Leonard. Promoter Tex Rickard, in signing the bout, was of the same opinion and offered to put up a championship belt to be presented to the winner. Rickard, however, withdrew his offer when the State Athletic Commission launched its project of staging an elaborate elimination tournament in which all the leading lightweight contenders in the world are expected to take part.

Both Mandell and Terris have entered the elemination title tournament and, as tonight's bout was signed before the tourney was officially announced by the commission, the outcome will not affect the standing of either in the forthcoming title competition.

Despite the fact that this evening's match will have no direct bearing on the championship, the contest has aroused tremendous interest and Garden officials yesterday predicted that the arena will be filled to capacity.

While a hard-fought and evenly contested battle is generally expected, it is probable that Terris will enter the ring a favorite over the Illinois boxer. The meeting will be the second in which the two have engaged, the previous battle ending in a draw.

Both fighters wound up heavy training yesterday and each reported himself fit for the battle. Terris reported that the ankle which he wrenched in training Monday and which was quickly adjusted by prompt medical attention has not bothered him since and he stated he was ready and confident. At the conclusion of his workout Terris scaled 129½ pounds. He said he expected to reach about 131 when the two weigh in at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Manager Kane announced that he expected Mandell to scale at 125 pounds. This would give the Illinois fighter an advantage of about four pounds over his rival.

An attractive card of bouts has been arranged to precede the main event, a semi-final of twelve rounds bringing together two bantamweight contenders in Charley Goodman of the east side and Harold Smith, Chicago boxer. Nat Jinoux and Pete Gottuso will meet in one of the six-rounders, while the other will be between Murray Layton and Willie O'Connell. The opening four will see Sid Keppen and Red Cap Wilson in action.

BARBARIAN TO WITHDRAW.

Detroit Boxer Will Not Compete in Lightweight Title Tourney.

When members of the New York State Athletic Commission meet this afternoon to make the official drawing among the American boxers selected to compete in the coming lightweight elimination championship tournament the name of Sid Barbarian, Detroit boxer, will not be included in the list. This became known yesterday when Joe Jacobs, New York representative for Barbarian, announced that the Detroit boxer would be withdrawn from the tournament today. In explaining Barbarian's action Jacobs stated that the boxer was now on the Pacific Coast, where he had contracted for a number of important engagements, and therefore felt he could not come East at this time to compete in the tourney.

The withdrawal of Barbarian will make it necessary for the commission to call on one of the alternates to round out the field of sixteen which the board has set as the number to compete in the American section of the tournament.

BRITISH BOXERS DUE TODAY

Accompanied by Joe Bowker, former English bantamweight champion, the quartet of British amateur boxers who will invade this country in quest of international honors against the pick of the American simon pures is scheduled to arrive on the United States liner George Washington, which will dock this morning at Pier 4 in Hoboken. The English boxing team is composed of J. Elliott, middleweight; H. A. Mitchell, light heavyweight; P. O'Hanrahan, welterweight, and G. Gogay, lightweight.

The English battlers will make their début in this city in the international intercity amateur tournament, which will be held in Madison Square Garden on the nights of Feb. 17 and 18, and, according to a wireless message received yesterday by local A. A. U. officials, are reported in excellent condition.

NEW TERMS FOR MASCART.

Tex Rickard's terms to Edouard Mascart of France, European featherweight champion, for a bout against Louis (Kid) Kaplan of Meriden, recognized as the world featherweight champion by the State Athletic Commission, were forwarded to the French boxer yesterday and indications are that the contest will be staged in Madison Square Garden on March 20. Rickard gave his terms to Sparrow Robertson, who is acting as Mascart's representative in this country.

BIALIS TAKES LEAD FOR SKATING TITLE

ALLEN IS SECOND WITH 60

THE POINT SCORE.
Val Bialis	70	O'Neill Farrell	20
Francis Allen	60	Charles Gorman	20
Duke Donovan	50	W. Steinmetz	10
Leslie Boyd	30	Ross Robinson	10

Special to The New York Times.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Valentine Bialis, stocky Utican and member of the United States Olympic skating team of 1924, now representing Lake Placid, took the lead at the conclusion of the second day's racing in the international speed skating championships at the Pontiac Rink here this afternoon with 70 points to his credit. With the completion of the fifth event, Francis Allen of Chicago rested in second place with 60 points while Richard (Duke) Donovan, representing Saranac Lake, was in third position with 50 counters. Six other skaters trailed the three leaders, Joe Moore and Leslie Boyd, both of New York, being tied for fourth, each having 30 points.

Taking his second fall in as many days, Allen again wiped out his chances of obtaining a comfortable lead over the balance of the field. Yesterday the Chicagoan fell in the half-mile, when he was sure to place, while today he went to the ice on the bell lap of the two-mile, when it appeared that he had the race well in hand.

The distance event was prettily skated. O'Neill Farrell and Eddie Murphy, both of Chicago, set a fast pace for nine of the twelve laps. At this stage of the race Bialis took a hand and spurted into the lead with the field chasing at his heels. It appeared as though the Utican would be unable to stand the gaff, and Duke Donovan and Allen were looked upon the ultimate contenders.

Beginning the final lap Allen went down on the far turn, which left Bialis and Donovan to battle it out. They waged a bitter battle in the home stretch, with the former leading the way across the line by a foot. Ross Robinson of Toronto, springing out of the pack when Allen fell, took third place from Moore and Boyd. The winner's time was 5:54 2-5.

Allen went into the lead for the championship in the quarter mile, first senior final to be skated today, when he breasted the tape in the van of Bialis and Moore. With only the long distance races remaining on the program, the Chicago bladester was looked upon as the most logical choice for the title.

The five-mile race, which will decide the meet winner, will feature tomorrow's program. With only twenty points separating Bialis, Allen and Donovan, all acknowledged stars in the long distance game, a hard battle for the championship is expected to result.

Although he only captured a third place in the quarter-mile, Danny Van Nortwick of Saranac Lake still held the lead in the eighteen-year-old class with 60 points. Willie Logan of St. John is second with 50, while J. O'Connor, St. John, and Carl Parody, Lake Placid, have 30 each.

SHOEMAKER WINS AGAIN.

Scores Third Straight Victory in National Pocket Billiard Play.

J. Howard Shoemaker, national amateur pocket billiard champion, won his third successive game in the national title tournament at the New York Athletic Club yesterday afternoon when he defeated William Watson by the score of 125 to 23 in twenty-three innings. He made a high run of 23 on his first turn at the table and made runs of 15 in his last two innings. Watson was unable to find himself in the match and his best run was 8.

Two other games were played, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening. Vernon Whittle played in both, winning in the afternoon from A. Alexander at 125 to 68 and losing in the evening to Carl Vaughan at 125 to 84. The afternoon game went to thirty-two innings and the evening contest to thirty-four. Whittle made high runs of 11 and 12 in both games. Vaughan made runs of 17 and 15, while Alexander's best run was 10.

TABERSKI AVERAGES 25.

Frank Taberski, former national pocket billiard champion, representing New York in the National Championship Pocket Billiard League, established the record for the best game of the season yesterday afternoon when he defeated Joseph Concannon, representative of Brooklyn, at the Recreation Academy in Brooklyn by the score of 100 to 9. Taberski went out in four innings for an average of 25 and made a high run of 63. In the evening Taberski was again the winner, 100 to 39. He went out in twenty-five innings and had a high run of 27, ten better than Concannon's best run.

Concannon won the bank in the afternoon. Taberski made the break, ran 63 in his second inning, 21 in the third and went out with an unfinished run of 16. The third and fourth games will be played this afternoon and evening and the final two of the series of six tomorrow.

NEW YORK ENTERS PRO HOCKEY LEAGUE

GORMAN TO MANAGE TEAM

Famous Canadian Pilot Will Head Local Six—First Games Are to Be Played Next Winter.

Professional ice hockey will be inaugurated in New York City next Winter. This became definitely established yesterday when Tex Rickard, Madison Square Garden promoter, and Tom Duggin, Montreal promoter and sportsman, announced at the conclusion of a conference in the Garden that they had closed terms whereby a professional sextet will be put in the field next season. The team, which will be known as Tex Rickard's New York Hockey Club, will operate under a New York franchise in an international professional hockey league, which will be a ten-club affair, and will play its home games in the new Madison Square Garden to be erected at Fiftieth Street and Eighth Avenue.

The league will virtually be an enlargement of the present National Professional Hockey League of Canada, which became an international body this season with the entry of the Boston Bruins Hockey Club. Rickard became interested in professional hockey a year ago and at that time obtained a franchise to operate in the National League this season, but changed his plans when it became definitely decided that the present old Garden would be torn down. Rickard figured that the expense for installing an ice plant in his arena would be too great to warrant its construction for only a single season.

The present teams in the Canadian National League are, in addition to the Boston club, the Canadiens of Montreal, present world's champions; the Ottawa Senators, Montreal Hockey Club, Hamilton Tigers and St. Patricks of Toronto. These six clubs will remain in the circuit for next season, and the league already has been enlarged to nine clubs with the addition of the New York club and clubs to represent Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. A tenth club, it is understood, will be located either in Detroit or Cleveland.

It was also disclosed, after the conference between Rickard and Duggin, that the New York club will be managed by Tom Gorman, who recently sold his interest in controlling the Ottawa Senators. Gorman is generally recognized as one of the most successful managers in professional hockey, and during his leadership in Ottawa he piloted the Senators to four world's championships.

COCHRAN WINS BLOCK, HIS FIRST IN MATCH

Beats Cannefax by 63 to 60 in Evening Game After Losing in Afternoon, 60-45.

Welker Cochran of California won his first block in his special 600-point match at three-cushions with Robert L. Cannefax, world's three-cushion champion, last night when he captured the eighth block at 63 to 60. This game went to eighty-one innings and for the first time in the match thus far Cannefax's grand average for the total innings fell below 3. The score now stands 480 to 302 in the champion's favor and the total number of innings is 491.

In the afternoon game Cannefax was the winner at 60 to 45 in fifty-two innings. The feature was a run of 11, made by the champion in the thirty-fourth inning, the best in the match to date. He also made a run of 7 in the second inning, which gave him a four lead over Cochran. In the seventh inning Cochran made his high run, 6. Two innings later he made 5 and took the lead, holding it for a long stretch until Cannefax made his high run. At the end of the fifteenth inning Cochran led at 19 to 17, and at the end of the thirtieth he was ahead at 33 to 28. Cannefax's run of 11 put him ahead at 45 to 36 and he stayed there to the end.

In the evening Cannefax won the bank and ran 7. At the end of the fifteenth inning he had a total of 18 points to 1 for Cochran. At the end of the thirty-sixth inning both players had 36. From this point both fell off and neither was ever more than four points in the lead. In the seventy-third inning they were tied at 55 each. In the seventy-fifth Cochran made a run of 4 and took the lead at 59-57. He passed 60 with a run of 2 in the seventy-eighth, when Cannefax's total was 58, and continued on to 63 in the eighty-first inning, when Cannefax reached 60. The final two blocks will be played today.

WINTER CARNIVAL OPENS.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 5.—More than a thousand guests arrived here today for the Dartmouth Winter carnival of 1925. The carnival will be the most ambitious ever attempted since the first Winter party fifteen years ago. A large igloo has been built in the centre of the campus for Edward Clark of West Milan, New Hampshire, who lives there, clad in typical eskimo costumes and living as do the inhabants of the far north. Clark has a dog team of eight huskies which are used to take the guests for rides.

In two events of the meet being conducted in Hanover by the Intercollegiate Winter Sports Union, Dartmouth made 23 points and Williams 18. M. W. Cogan of Dartmouth won the half-mile speedy skating race and C. D. Harding of Williams won the fancy skating event.

In the seven-mile cross country ski race this afternoon, S. K. Platt of Williams, came in first in 1 hour and 1 minute, about a hundred yards ahead of T. A. Benson of McGill. The order of finish after these two was—W. B. Thompson of McGill, T. B. Farrell of Dartmouth, Gunnar Michelson of New Hampshire.

Nurmi, the Artist, May Appear As Headliner at Paris Opera

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Paavo Nurmi, the world's champion runner, may be a headliner at the Opera if negotiations now under way between the Sporting Club of France and the Ministry of Public Instruction, which controls the theatre, prove successful. The fleet Finn, however, would not be called upon to fill the place vacated by Caruso, but the Opera would be transformed for the occasion into a running arena with a 200-meter track for the flying feet of the champion. The Sporting Club, which is composed of personalities in the worlds of art, politics and sport, has pointed out to the Ministry the fact that moving pictures and private balls are permitted in the Opera and that a running exhibition by such a great artist as Nurmi would not be a desecration of France's temple of art. The exhibition would be for the benefit of war orphans and, should the Government approve, Paavo will be immediately invited to participate.

NURMI READY TO RUN RAY ANY DISTANCE

Accepts Challenge by Kankakee Star, but Will Not Meet Him in Wilco A. A. Games.

Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish athlete, is ready and willing to meet Joie Ray or anybody else who is eager to dispute his supremacy as the greatest runner in the world in a mile race or at any other distance within the range of middle distance or distance running, but he will not alter his program for the Wilco A. A. games in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory in Brooklyn tomorrow night, which calls for his appearance in a race in which he will try for world's records at 3,000 meters and two miles.

This was the answer conveyed to A. A. U. officials yesterday by Hugo Quist, Finnish-American A. C. official and Nurmi's adviser in this country, to a challenge to the Finn by Ray for a mile test at the Wilco meet. Ray had issued his challenge on Wednesday when, in a letter to Hugh Hirshon, Chairman of the Wilco Games Committee, he withdrew his entry from the two-mile event and stated he would start in the Wilco one-mile special, in which he will also try for the world's indoor mark at 1,500 meters. At the same time the Kankakee flier invited the Finn to meet him in this race and expressed confidence in his ability to take Nurmi's measure at the mile.

Quist stated yesterday that it would be practically impossible for Nurmi to make such a change in his plans at this late date. He said that the Finnish star had set his heart on smashing the world's indoor two-mile record and that all his preparations recently have been pointed for this supreme effort.

After Ray's Last Record.

The two-mile mark, incidentally, is the one lone record of Joie Ray that has so far escaped the flying Nurmi. It is 9 minutes 8 2-5 seconds and was made by Ray at the Wilco games two years ago. Under a schedule which Nurmi has carefully mapped out, Quist said, the Finn expects to set new records at the intermediate distances of a mile and three-quarters, 3,000 meters and a mile and seven-tenths, and come home at the two-mile mark in the unprecedented time of 9 minutes flat or better.

Nurmi, however, will not run without keen competition tomorrow night, for announcement also was made yesterday by Wilco officials that Willie Ritola of the Finnish-American A. C. has decided to cast his entry in the two-mile event against his illustrious countryman. Ritola, who has smashed thirteen records in his last five races, originally entered the meet only in a one-mile handicap event. On the strength of his splendid showing in the recent Morningside games, when he ran two miles in 9:10 2-5, Ritola decided yesterday that he had worked up sufficient speed to try conclusions again with Nurmi at this distance, and will be a starter in this event, as well as in the mile.

Frigerio in Exhibition.

Wilco officials stated yesterday that in order to accommodate Ritola they would hold the one-mile handicap, in which Ritola will start from scratch, at 8:30 o'clock and the two-mile event at 10 o'clock, thereby giving the Finnish-American star an hour and a half between races.

Another change was reported in the Wilco program yesterday when Ugo Frigerio, the Italian Olympic champion walker, announced to Wilco and A. A. U. officials yesterday that he would not meet Willie Plant, the American champion, in a race at any distance under four miles. Frigerio and Plant both had entered a special race at two miles but the Italian, who since his arrival here has suffered three defeats by Plant, withdrew his entry from this event. He asked that the Wilco officials extend the race to four miles, but this Chairman Hirshon refused to do. He invited the Italian, however, to walk in a special four-mile exhibition race, and Frigerio accepted the invitation. Plant will walk in the two-mile race, in which he will try for a world's mark both at this distance and at 3,000 meters. His foremost rival will be Philip Granville, the Canadian heel and toe star.

With such stars as Nurmi and Ritola meeting at two miles, Ray running in his present great form in the mile, Plant in the walk, Alan Helffrich in the 880-yard special and Jackson Scholz, Loren Murchison, Louis Clarke and Boots Lever competing in the special sprints, Wilco officials yesterday predicted that games in the Brooklyn Armory tomorrow would see eleven or possibly more world's indoor records broken.

MRS. STENZ BEATEN BY MRS. CORBIERE

VICTOR HAS A CLOSE CALL

Comes Within Two Points of Defeat —Tilden to Play Tomorrow in Conjunction With Finals.

Mrs. Bernard F. Stenz of this city, who defeated Mrs. Lillian Scharman Hester on Wednesday, was eliminated from the annual invitation indoor tennis tournament of the Heights Casino in Brooklyn yesterday in the semi-final round. Mrs. J. D. Corbiere of Boston, who ranks fifteenth in the national list, three places below that of Mrs. Stenz, triumphed over the New York woman after being within two points of defeat and after trailing at 2—5 in the third set. The score was 6—3, 3—6, 7—5.

Mrs. Corbiere gained a place in the final round and tomorrow will meet the winner of the match between Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, former national champion, and Miss Anna H. Fuller of Boston, who ranks sixth in the New England list. Mrs. Mallory reached the semi-finals by defeating Miss Helen Hooker of Greenwich, No. 10 in the national ranking last year. The New York woman was not inclined to be lenient and allowed her opponent only one game. The score was 6—0, 6—1. Miss Fuller advanced on Wednesday. Play in the doubles tournament reached the semi-final round, with two Boston teams left in the lower half. They are Mrs. Corbiere and Mrs. William Endicott and Miss Isabella Mumford and Mrs. Roger Griswold. The former pair defeated Mrs. H. Stuart Green of this city and Mrs. J. L. Bremer of Boston at 6—3, 6—3, while Miss Mumford and Mrs. Griswold advanced at the expense of Miss Fuller and Miss Marion Fenno of Boston after three bitterly contested sets at 8—6, 6—8, 6—4.

In the upper half of the doubles the survivors are Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., and Miss Marie Wagner of Yonkers, the metropolitan indoor champion, and Miss Hooker and Mrs. Ceres Sackett Baker. The former pair put out Mrs. Hester and her sister Miss Frida Scharman, 6—2, 6—3, and Miss Hooker and Mrs. Sackett defeated Mrs. J. Saunders Taylor and Miss Florence Baillin at 6—2, 6—4. This morning at 10 o'clock Mrs. Corbiere and Mrs. Endicott will play Miss Mumford and Mrs. Griswold. At 11 Mrs. Mallory and Miss Fuller will go on the courts and at 12:15 the other semi-final of the doubles will be contested.

In conjunction with the finals in both singles and doubles tomorrow, William T. Tilden 2d, the national champion, will play an exhibition match. It will be Tilden's first local appearance of the season. No announcement has been made yet of who is to be his opponent. The champion is scheduled to make his first tournament appearance on the 12th of this month when he will play in the invitation tournament at the Casino.

Mrs. Stenz met in Mrs. Corbiere a back court player who could hit the ball as hard and keep it in play as long as she could herself. From the first game to the last the rallies were all of the longest and marked by the keenest struggling. Mrs. Stenz, primed with confidence as a result of her victory over Mrs. Hester, attacked aggressively from the start and laid her powerful drives close along the lines, sticking them deep within the baseline corners. Mrs. Corbiere covered all sorts of territory to get them back, running from one side of the court to the other and making a hard get that kept the gallery applauding. The Boston woman sent over drives that carried equal length and pace in return except when she was forced to make a defensive stroke from up in court, but she did not judge her shots with quite the nicety of her opponent and hit out of court by inches repeatedly after long rallies.

Semi-final Round—Mrs. J. D. Corbiere defeated Mrs. Bernard F. Stenz, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5.

Doubles—Miss Martha Bayard and Miss Marie Wagner defeated Mrs. Lillian Scharman Hester and Miss Frida Scharman, 6—2, 6—1; Miss Helen Hooker and Mrs. Ceres Baker Sackett defeated Mrs. J. Saunders Taylor and Miss Florence Baillin, 6—2, 6—4; Mrs. J. D. Corbiere and Mrs. William Endicott defeated Mrs. H. Stuart Green and Mrs. J. L. Bremer, 6—3, 6—3; Miss Isabella Mumford and Mrs. Roger Griswold defeated Miss Anna Fuller and Miss Marion Fenno, 8—6, 6—8, 6—4.

QUIMET WINS MEDAL ON BERMUDA LINKS

Has Low Score of 74 in Qualifying Round of Annual Amateur Championship Play.

TUCKER'S TOWN, Bermuda, Feb. 5.—In the qualifying round for the Bermuda amateur golf championship played here today over the links of the Mid-Ocean Country Club, Francis Ouimet of the Woodland Club, Boston, was the medal winner. Ouimet had a battle for the medal with young Dick Jones of Westchester Hills, former Metropolitan Junior champion, who scored a 78 to Ouimet's 74.

Although Ouimet was out in 34, playing beautiful golf amid a high wind, he failed to get home in better than 40. Jones, on the other hand, had his hardest trip going out, scoring a 42. He was home in 36. Both stars were frequently in the rough, due to the wind. Jones was hampered by being in the lake at the fifth. On the tenth Ouimet's long drive was off to the right amid a clump of cedar trees. He executed a trick shot under the branches, however, and managed to reach the green. He got his par four.

On the fifteenth Ouimet pulled his shot to some bad territory at the left and on his third drive hit the trees and careened still further into trouble. He was nicely out and sank his fifth off the green. More trouble awaited the Boston star at the sixteenth. He hooked to some oleander trees, and although nicely out in two he failed to get better than a six. On the home hole he had a beautiful long drive and got a difficult par four.

Don M. Parker of Garden City, leader of the invading Americans, got into the bullrushes at the fifth and took five strokes to get out. He took three more getting out of a trap at the thirteenth.

Summary of the championship division:

She was a little thing and we remember she walked slowly.

They Came for 2 Weeks —and Stayed 20 Years!

WE won't tell you their name because it doesn't matter. But we remember that they came in the Spring of 1904. He was a big, strapping young fellow with a worried look in his steel-blue eyes. She was a pale little thing with a sad sort of smile and we remember that she walked slowly.

They had been married two years and had "put up home" near Columbia University. She was one of those overwilling, conscientious women, who delight in keeping the home spotless as a new pin. So she broke down and her adoring young husband suggested a rest where it was quiet and comfortable.

They came for two weeks. A month later they sublet their apartment. Six months later they sold the furniture. Today they are still at the St. George. Their girl is at a Southern seminary and their young son goes to school nearby.

That's one picture of the St. George. It is a friendly, companionable hotel. It has all the comforts of home with none of the drudgery. And so people stay.

When you first arrive you are amazed at the number of sumptuous lobbies and restful lounge rooms. The orchestra very likely will be entertaining. You will notice that people seem rested and contented.

When you see your room you will be amazed again. First at its unusual size. Second at its novelty, for here you get two rooms for the price of one—a beautiful living room by day and an equally delightful sleeping chamber by night. Furniture is of the finest and decorations are a pleasure to see.

When you dine you will be surprised once more. At the St. George you have the choice of three luxurious dining rooms. A delicious course dinner will cost you $1.00. Breakfast for as little as 40 cents. Lunch, 50 cents. Also a la carte.

So that's why people stay so long at the St. George. Accessibility, large "two-in-one" rooms, splendid food, delightful social atmosphere. And prices are reasonable—single combination bed-living rooms with tiled bath and large closet, $22 weekly and up; double combination rooms $28 weekly and up.

CLOISTER TRIUMPHS OVER MIAMI TRACK

NOE RIDES TWO WINNERS

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5.—The Coral Way Handicap, a gallop of a mile and a furlong for three-year-olds and upward, and the feature event on the program at Hialeah Park this afternoon, resulted in a thrilling finish, the issue being in doubt all through the stretch battle. At the end J. McGee's Cloister, the Shapoff Stable's Brunell and J. B. McGinn's Wrangler were closely lapped in that order. Parke had the mount on the winner, which was the second choice in the betting and paid $6.60 for a $2 ticket. Cloister carried top weight of 114 pounds and ran the distance to a new record for the track of 1:54 3-5, just a second faster than the former mark set last Saturday.

Cloister was Parke's only winner, Kenneth Noe again carrying off the riding honors with two victories. He won the first with Piedmont and repeated in the second on Star Girl. He was second once, third twice and once unplaced. Two favorites rewarded their followers.

Only four went to the post for the Coral Way Handicap, with J. A. Coburn's Aspiration the public choice. It was a ding-dong battle throughout the journey, and had the spectators in a fever of excitement. Cloister was the first to leave the barrier, Parke immediately taking him under wraps off the pace.

Finish Almost as a Team.

Ambrose quickly took Wrangler into the lead and he saved ground when the others went wide. Midway around the last turn Callahan rushed Aspiration into the lead, but Wrangle raced him down in the stretch drive and he finished last. When the field was straightening out in the stretch Parke sent Cloister up on the outside of Aspiration and took command, but the McGee colt was under a hard drive to gain the decision by a neck from Brunell. The latter nosed out Wrangler for the place, with Aspiration a length and a half back.

Tall Grass, O. Torrell' three-year-old colt, gained his second consecutive victory, when he nosed out the Miami Stable's Kellerman in the gallop of a mile and a sixteenth, which closed the afternoon's racing. The winner paid $18.60 for a $2 ticket. Nine went to the post, with Kellerman and the Hoosier Stable's Asaph the equal choices.

Third Victory for Piedmont.

Piedmont, the Shapoff Stable's consistent gelding, won his third victory in four starts here when he came home first in a field of seven in the claiming race for three-year-olds over the course of six furlongs.

Noe came right back with his second winner when he brought E. Lutz's filly Star Girl home at the head of a field of eight in the dash of five and a half furlongs restricted to the three-year-olds—her second straight victory. Noe held the chestnut daughter of Star Master and Courselles well in hand until entering the stretch.

PRINCE JAMES WINS AT FAIR GROUNDS

THUNDERING IS HOME FIRST

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 5.—Prince James, C. H. Thieriot's seven-year-old son of King James and Lacona, this afternoon captured the Cecil Purse, a gallop of a mile and seventy yards, that featured the card at the Fair Grounds. The winner carried top weight of 111 pounds and ran the distance in 1:45 over a fast track. C. Lang had the leg up and his mount was held at 9 to 2 in the wagering.

Seven paraded for the featured race, with H. L. Crain's Miss Meise the 13 to 5 favorite. The mare tired, however, after being well up with the leaders and finished out of the money. L. Kay's Fire Boy made the early running, but raced sluggishly and dropped back fast in the stretch to finish last.

Lang held Prince James under double wraps until reaching the last quarter pole, from which point he moved away from the others and won with the greatest ease. At the winning post he was three lengths in front of Phil Chinn's four-year-old filly Lady Belle, which was well out of the contention for the first half of the race, coming on fast thereafter and outstaying E. K. Bryson's Setting Sun, to take the place by the margin of a neck.

The Evergreen Purse, a six-furlong dash restricted to the three-year-olds, brought out a field of seven, the winner being Mrs. T. J. Regan's Thundering, which carried top weight of 113 pounds and come home a neck in front of the Idle Hour Stock Farm's Benedict Vow. These two were equal choices at 16 to 5. W. H. Whitehouse's Elsass was a length and a half back, to take third money. Elsass was the 9 to 5 favorite.

YOUNG AND JENNINGS SIGN WITH GIANTS

Outfielder and Coach Among Those to Come to Terms for 1925 Season.

Just a few hours before departing for Florida on a vacation, Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants came to bat yesterday with a freshly prepared list of athletes who have signed their 1925 contracts. Ross Young and Hugh Jennings are the only familiar names on the announcement, the others being recruits who have been picked up in minor league fields.

Frank Frisch, the captain of the National League champions, dropped in to talk over salary matters with McGraw before the latter shoved off for the South, but apparently the conference was productive of no immediate results. Frisch got a stipend of $17,000 last year and an additional sum of $500 for acting as field captain, but it is said that he wants a $2,000 boost over these figures. He asked $18,000 flat last year and got all but $1,000 of this amount. McGraw is reported to be ready to give him $18,500 for next season, but not a cent beyond this modest figure.

If the Fordham Flash decides to become a holdout, he will have to conduct negotiations at long range with McGraw, for the Giants' manager will not be back in this neck of the woods until April. However, Frisch can hardly be classed a holdout—not at this early stage, at least.

Recruits on List.

Young signed his contract while he was here the other day testifying at the District Attorney's investigation of the baseball scandal. Jennings was in New York Monday and Tuesday for the National League meeting and saw McGraw at that time. The other signers yesterday were:

Mickey Devine, the little catcher bought from Jersey City last Fall; Frank Fraser, outfielder from the Waterbury club of the Eastern League, and John Manners, pitcher, and Arthur Crump, outfielder, from the Portsmouth club of the Virginia League.

The above contracts are the first to be received by the Giants this year. The parchments were mailed out only five days ago, indicating that some of the boys lost no time in affixing their signatures.

Paul Florence, the former Georgetown University catcher, who was taken South last Spring for an inspection by McGraw, got the bad news yesterday. He has been released to Indianapolis, the Indianapolis club of the American Association. Florence needs seasoning, and McGraw knows of no better place for him to get it than Indianapolis.

Secretary Jim Tierney will be in sole charge of the Giants' sanctum sanctorum for the next few weeks. McGraw jumped aboard a 6 o'clock train for Florida last night and said goodbye to cold weather, holdouts, office routine and kindred afflictions. His plans are slightly indefinite. He will go to Sarasota for a while, then possibly travel across to Miami for a look at the horses. His visit to Sarasota will be partly in the nature of a precaution, to make sure that hotel accommodations are O. K. and that no one has run away with the ball park.

Ruppert Not Going.

One of those not present at the American League meeting in St. Louis next Tuesday will be Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees. The Colonel has been in ill health since the last baseball meetings and sees no reason why the league can't ratify the schedule without his assistance. As a member of the American League Peace Committee which paved the way for Ban Johnson's demotion from the higher flights of baseball administration, it was expected that Colonel Ruppert would attend the meeting—the first since the famous stormy session at Chicago. Johnson, it is understood, will have a few remarks to deliver when he gets his club owners behind locked doors.

Secretary Ed Barrow and Manager Miller Huggins will represent the local club—Barrow to vote on league questions and Huggins to keep an eagle eye peeled for trades, of which there probably will be none.

Irvin S. Cobb and Bugs Baer, both well-known humorists, will be among the speakers at the annual dinner of the New York baseball writers Feb. 15, it was announced yesterday. Cobb has promised a few choice observations on baseball from the point of view of the layman and Baer will speak as one writer to another. The dinner will be held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Roosevelt.

The signed contract of Catcher Hank DeBerry has been received by President Charley Ebbets in Clearwater, Fla., the Brooklyn club made known yesterday.

RILEY ALSO TAKES AWARD

Over the tanbark of the Riding Club at 7 East Fifty-eighth Street yesterday came the sounds of baying hounds, hard on the trail of the elusive fox, the sound of the hunting horn and other noises that are familiar sounds to huntsmen, but which sounded strangely unfamiliar in the enclosure. The occasion was the Riding Club's first Foxhound Show, held under the auspices of the Masters of Foxhounds Association of America, said to be the first indoor exhibition of its kind ever staged in the United States or Canada.

With the huntsmen in livery, the M. F. H.'s in their scarlet hunting coats and white breeches, the hunting calls ringing clear and echoing against the walls, and the baying of the hounds, the scene was one to thrill the throng that packed the gallery and watched the judging with the keenest sort of interest. Everyone present who has ever followed a hunt across country was stirred by the scene presented yesterday, and those who had not must have felt some of the thrill.

Hounds were shown from nineteen recognized packs, with entries from such distant points as Burlington, Vt.; Pittsburgh and Middleburg, Va. Among the hunts which had entires in the show were the Shelburne Foxhounds, with J. Watson Webb, M. F. H., and Val Street, huntsman, in charge; the Rolling Rock Hunt, of which R. K. Mellon is M. F. H. and Frank Smith huntsman; Mr. Jeffords's Hounds, W. M. Jeffords, master; Rose Tree Foxhunting Club, of which W. M. Jeffords also is master and Abner Garrett huntsman; Genesee Valley Hunt, with Winthrop Chanler, M. F. H., and Harry Andrews huntsman; Meadow Brook Club, of which Harry T. Peters is master and Thomas Allison huntsman; Monmouth County Hunt, of which Rufus C. Pinch is master and Edward Harrison is huntsman; Cheshire Foxhounds, W. Plunkett Stewart, M. F. H., and Frank Dare huntsman; Myopia Hunt Club, J. W. Appleton, M. F. H. and huntsman; Groton Hunt, E. E. Danielson, M. F. H. and Fred Armstrong huntsman; Norfolk Hunt Club, Harry G. Vaughan, M. F. H. and huntsman; Middleburg Hunt, D. C. Sands, M. F. H., and Robert Maddox huntsman; Suffolk Hunt, Richard Newton, M. F. H. and M. J. Aylward huntsman; Fairfield and Westchester Hounds, L. P. Yandell, M. F. H. and huntsman; the Elkridge Hounds, Howard Bruce and T. C. Jenkins, joint masters, and Jules F. Dillon huntsman; Essex Foxhounds, J. Fillmore Hyde masters, and Jules F. Dillon huntsman; Smithtown Foxhounds, E. H. Carle, master and huntsman; Green Spring Valley, Janon Fisher Jr., M. F. H., and Patrick Reilly, huntsman.

The hounds were divided into three classes, English, American and Half-bred. The honors were fairly well divided between several hunts that entered English packs, with the Cheshire Foxhounds' comical, a splendid combination which held the admiration of all, gaining the award for the best English Foxhound in the show. The Monmouth County Hunt's Frantic received the reserve award, by the hounds entered by the Fairfield and Westchester Hounds carried off the major honors in the American bred class, their Riley being judged the best hound shown and their Storm Cloud receiving the reserve award.

ENGLISH TEAM WINS IN RACQUETS PLAY

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—Teams from England and New York advanced to the semi-final round of the national racquets doubles championship tournament which opened today at the Racquet Club. The English team, composed of J. C. F. Simpson and R. C. O. Williams, disposed of one Philadelphia pair, Ted Edwards and Dan Newhall, in three straight sets, 15—8, 15—10, 16—13.

C. C. Pell and Stanley Mortimer of New York, the present national champions, then eliminated C. M. Bromley and W. F. Kurtz, another Philadelphia team, in straight sets, 15—2, 15—4, 15—13.

The British pair, who recently won the Canadian doubles championship, displayed splendid team work and went right after their opponents. It was not until the third set that the Philadelphia team really extended the English stars and at one time was leading 13—6.

Pell and Mortimer had things their own way the first two sets, but in the third, when they were leading 14—4, Kurtz scored nine points in succession, seven on aces, but the New Yorkers soon ran out the set and match.

The British team will meet Pell and Mortimer in one semi-final tomorrow, and Jay Gould and Stanley W. Pearson of the Philadelphia Racquet Club meet A. O. Hoyt and Al Core of New York in the other match.

THE GEM IS JUDGED BEST POMERANIAN

Carries Off Leading Honors of American Club's Show at the Hotel Plaza.

MITE'S MAID ALSO SCORES

Radiant Eastney The Gem, pompous little Pom belonging to Miss Viola Proctor of Wenham, Mass., scored an international victory for the United States when he carried off the major honor in the fifteenth annual show of the American Pomeranian Club, held in the ballroom of the Hotel Plaza yesterday. Radiant Eastney The Gem was judged the best in the show by Theodore Offerman, winning over the London entry, Mrs. K. Carlin's Mite's Maid, which was judged the best of opposite sex.

The exhibition was one of the most successful ever held in the long history of the American Pomeranian Club. The ballroom was well filled from the time that the first class was called until the last special was completed, and the interest of the spectators in all the classes was especially lively. Almost 100 animals were entered and many came from long distances to compete for the cash and plate prizes offered. There were many entries from Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Washington, while Wisconsin, Tennessee, Missouri, Michigan, Maryland, Connecticut and the District of Columbia were other distant points represented, and Mrs. Carlin's home entry came all the way from England.

Radiant Eastney The Gem by Young Daintiness—Lady Light, scored his first victory in the class for sable dogs, winning from a large and very strong field. His coat was in excellent condition and his performance also was splendid. In this class he had to triumph over Mrs. Ethel C. McGovern's Nightingale Twinkle and Mrs. V. C. Gideon's Minegold Merriment, which finished first and second respectively, in order to enter the class for winners' dogs. Against the other victorious dogs, however, Radiant Eastney The Gem also triumphed and then went on to gain the title of best in the show from Mrs. Carlin's Mite's Maid, which had been judged the winners' bitch.

Mite's Maid Wins Twice.

Mite's Maid twice qualified for the winners' bitches class, first gaining the blue in the limit class for sable bitches and then the blue in the open class of the same distinction. In neither of these regular classes did Mite's Maid meet with much opposition and the judging was done in short order. However, it took Mr. Offerman quite a time to decide between the other entries for the winners' bitches award, Miss E. G. Hydon's Bogota Sheila making a strong bid and gaining the reserve award.

Although Miss Proctor's Radiant Eastney Gay Lord received the reserve award for winners' dogs, Mrs. Carlin and Miss Hydon received the most desired awards. Ernest Sharland's Dromore Sensation carried off more prizes than any other individual competitor. Dromore Sensation won the blue in four classes and received the second award in the only other event in which he was entered. The little toy was judged the best of the novice dogs of any solid color, the best American-bred dog of any color, the best of the black dogs in the limit class and also in the open class and finished second only to Miss Lotta Linthicum's Pom Toy, The Prince Chap in the class for dogs of five pounds and under.

Toy Pansy Blossom Scores.

Miss Linthicum's entries brought to her kennels three blues and two third awards, while Miss Hydon's toys carried off three blues and two second awards. Besides winning in the class for dogs of five pounds and under, Miss Linthicum gained the blue in the class for bitches of any color not otherwise provided for with her Fairy, while her Pom Toy Pansy Blossom was judged the best of the puppy bitches from six to nine months. Miss Hydon's Bogota Sheila won in the class for American-bred bitches. Her Cairndhu Sunbeam took the blue in the class for bitches of five pounds and under and her Rex of Bogota won in the class for dogs of any color not otherwise provided for.

Buying a State of Mind

When a man is really pleased with a suit, he has bought something more than cloth and thread and buttons.

He has bought a satisfactory state of mind. A pleasant consciousness of being well dressed. A realization that his suit is really becoming. A certain poise and a confident assurance in any company.

Such a state of mind is beyond price, but D'Andrea Brothers can supply it for the modest sum of $75.

CHILD LABOR DEBATE AT WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. George Owens, President of the Government Club, Speaks Against It.

The proposed child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution was debated yesterday at the Women's National Republican Club by George W. Alger, who favored its adoption, and Louis Marshall, who opposed it.

Mr. Alger said that, as soon as there was a shortage of labor resulting from decreased immigration and prosperity, there would be "decided pressure for the use of American children to take the place of 'muskies.'" Manufacturers opposed the amendment with this thought in mind, Mr. Alger said.

Mr. Alger declared that no new power was created by the amendment and that Congress would merely obtain powers already possessed by the various State Legislatures. As New York is one of the most progressive States in preventing child labor, he said it would not be affected in the least if the amendment were adopted.

Mr. Marshall said that if the amendment were in the Constitution a mother could not ask her children to get a pail of water because not only gainful but all labor was prohibited.

"The great reason for opposing this amendment," Mr. Marshall said, "is that it gives police powers to the Federal Government and leads eventually to despotism and tyranny. If the tendency to centralize power in this country continues, it will in time equal that of Rome or Russia. A centralized Government with tentacles reaching into all the States is a thing we have to fear. The proponents of this measure have already tried to stretch the Constitution and have enacted two laws which were declared unconstitutional."

Opposition to the child labor amendment was shown at the luncheon yesterday of the Women's Harding and Coolidge Club at the Hotel Marie Antoinette. Mrs. Ray F. Zucker, the President, outlined the purpose and Joseph T. Cushman spoke of what he said were its dangers. Mrs. George Owens, President of the Government Club, also opposed its adoption.

DE MILLE ORGANIZES A NEW FILM CONCERN

Cecil B. De Mille, who resigned three weeks ago as director general of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced yesterday the formation of a new alliance and the organization of a new motion picture company. He is to be the producing head of the new concern, which will be known as the Cinema Corporation of America. Incorporation papers have been filed in Delaware and provide for a capitalization of $10,000,000. Mr. De Mille's new association is with the Producers' Distributing Corporation as Vice President in charge of production.

The fact that Jeremiah Milbank is prominent in a financial group back of the new concern lends additional interest to the new motion picture company. Mr. Milbank is a director of Case, Pomeroy & Co., which took over control of the Southern Railway. He is also a director of the Charity Organization Society, the Chase National Bank and the Hocking Valley Railway Company. He has been interested for the last two years in the Producers' Distributing Corporation.

Producing headquarters of the new corporation will be at Culver City, Cal. The studio facilities, comprising fifteen acres, which were owned by the late Thomas H. Ince, have been purchased for about $500,000 and will be known hereafter as the Cecil B. De Mille studios. In addition to two or three pictures to be personally directed each year by Mr. De Mille, he will supervise between ten and twenty others.

The Motion Picture Capital Corporation, a finance organization which is already backing the output of twenty or more independent producers for half a dozen releasing organizations, has made contracts with the Cinema Corporation of America, under which it will cooperate in financing a program of production requiring several million dollars during the coming five years. The Motion Picture Capital Corporation was organized in 1923 by Frank R. Wilson, who now is its President. Mr. Wilson has associated with him in his enterprise a group of downtown capitalists.

Among the screen players the producer will bring to the new company are Leatrice Joy, Rod La Rocque and Florence Vidor. It is declared that the De Mille studio will have the immediate services of a group of supporting players including Mary Astor, Vera Reynolds, Lillian Rich, Julia Faye, Clive Brook, Warner Baxter, Barbara Bedford and Robert Edeson. It will also have the services of such writers as Jeanie Macpherson, who wrote the script for "The Ten Commandments"; Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Millhauser, Bradley King, Olga Printzlau, Frank Urson, Paul Iribe and others.

O'NEILL PLAYS COMING.

"The Emperor Jones" and "The Dreamy Kid" on Openings List.

Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones," together with the same playwright's one-act play, "The Dreamy Kid," will begin an engagement at the Fifty-second Street Theatre on Wednesday night of next week. The complete list of theatrical events for the week, with revised opening dates, is as follows:

Monday afternoon, "Ghosts" at the Princess Theatre, for the first of four matinees; Monday night, "A Good Bad Woman" at the Comedy Theatre and "Loggerheads" at the Cherry Lane Playhouse; Tuesday afternoon, an unnamed play at the Cort Theatre, for matinees only; Tuesday night, "The Dark Angel" at the Longacre, "The Rat" at the Colonial, and "Diff'rent" and "The Triumph of the Egg" as a double bill at the Provincetown Playhouse; Wednesday night, "The Dove" at the Empire and "The Emperor Jones" and "The Dreamy Kid" at the Fifty-second Street Theatre.

New Theatre for Far Rockaway.

B. S. Moss will build a vaudeville theatre and office building in Far Rockaway, in Mott Avenue, between Mott Place and Central Avenue. The plot has a frontage of 200 feet on Mott Avenue, with a depth of 180 feet. The theatre, which will follow the Moss policy of vaudeville and films, will seat 2,500.

SCREEN NOTES.

At the Mark Strand the chief attraction will be "As Man Desires."

Sydney Chaplin in the film version of "Charley's Aunt" is to be the feature next week at the Colony.

"Capital Punishment" is to be held over at the Cameo.

The principal feature at the Rivoli next week will be "Coming Through," with Thomas Meighan.

The celluloid version of "Chu Chin Chow" will be presented tomorrow at the Piccadilly.

The picturized adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story, "The Lost World," will be presented on Sunday evening at the Astor.

GIGLI WILL APPEAR AT BARNARD BENEFIT

Tenor to Sing for First Time on Concert Stage on March 5.

Beniamino Gigli of the Metropolitan Opera Company will make his first public appearance on the concert stage in behalf of the silver jubilee celebration of the organization of the Students' Loan Fund of Barnard College, to be held in the Hotel Astor on March 5.

The tenor, in establishing a personal precedent, will sing for an organization with a remarkable record of student achievement. During the twenty-five years in which the fund has operated only one loan has not been repaid, while part of another remains unsettled. The fund was established to aid students through courses which they otherwise would have to give up.

As a rule loans are not made to students during their first year by Barnard, and the system has been to make $400 the maximum of money advanced. The advances are made with the student's life insurance policy as security in cases where other bond cannot be furnished. The policy remains in the custody of the fund until the sum lent is returned.

The regulations governing the administration of the plan do not in any way hamper a girl's post-college struggle for economic independence. There is no strain put upon her usually slender financial resources, for the fund allows her five years after graduation in which to settle her indebtedness.

When the fund was put into operation its capital was recruited from class donations. When its usefulness began to be seen a theatre benefit was held and other steps taken to increase its resources. Lately owing to higher costs of tuition and living and the fact that a larger number of students are transferring from smaller colleges to attain a Barnard degree, the demands are outstripping the bank balance.

The committee in charge of the Hotel Astor benefit is composed of Mrs. Alfred F. Hess, Chairman; Harry A. Kahler, Treasurer; Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, Ticket Committee; Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, Program Committee; Miss Estelle O'Brien, Patronesses' Committee; Mrs. George S. Hellman, Printing Committee, and Miss Emma Bugbee, Publicity Committee.

Tickets have been placed on sale at the American Trust Company, 297 Madison Avenue. Those who have accepted as patrons and patronesses of the benefit are Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. Charles Senff, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, Mrs. Joseph Choate, Miss Mabel Choate, Mrs. Pleasants Pennington, Mrs. Adolph S. Ochs, Mrs. Victor Morawetz, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Mrs. E. Rowland N. Harriman, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, Miss Nathaniel Thayer Robb, Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. John Pratt, Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, Frank Munsey, Mrs. Frank V. Storrs, James Speyer, Andres de Segurola.

Sciaretti at Aeolian Hall.

Alberto Sciaretti at his second Aeolian Hall recital last night won a well-deserved success with Beethoven's "Appassionata." He had already in a preceding and captivating group by Scarlatti exhibited a fresh and clean-cut style, which had placed these charming airs in the most favorable light. It was a different thing to turn from their easy grace to a work like the "Appassionata." In the allegro the mechanism was still to the fore, but during the andante the voice of Beethoven made itself heard and Mr. Sciaretti, flying on the wings of inspiration, roused his audience to unwonted enthusiasm and won four recalls. He played four Chopin numbers in succession, three of them with marked effect, and ended his program with three melodious "Mignardise" by Pick-Mangiagalli and two pieces by G. Martucci. Mr. Sciaretti was warmly applauded in all his manifestations.

Lauri-Volpi Greeted at Opera.

Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, the Italian tenor, returned to the Metropolitan for a long half-season yet to come at last night's fourth performance of Puccini's "La Bohème." Mmes. Alda and Louise Hunter, Messrs. Danise, Rothier, Picco and Malatesta reappeared and Mr. Papi conducted. Mr. Lauri-Volpi was in fresh voice and form as Rodolfo, singing the poet's narrative to the evident pleasure of a brilliant subscription audience, and receiving especially hearty personal greeting from many Italian compatriots in the house.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Candida" will be moved to another theatre on Feb. 23, when "The Wild Duck" will open at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

Beginning the week of March 2, there will be three matinees of "Pigs" each week at the Little Theatre. They will be given on Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

"Tanglefoot," by Gertrude Purcell, will open in Stamford tonight.

"Wings of Chance," by Hugh Stanislaus Stange, has been acquired by Adolph Klauber for immediate production.

Henry W. Savage has acquired the American rights to "L'Institutrice," by Dario Nicodemi. It has been produced with success here as "The School Teacher." as "The School Teacher."

"Betty Lee" will be played in Sing Sing on Sunday afternoon.

The performance of "Mrs. Partridge Presents" at the Belmont next Monday night will be given in aid of the Protestant Unity League.

There will be a benefit performance at the Selwyn Theatre a week from Sunday night in aid of the St. Vincent De Paul Vacation Fund. Lupino Lane will be master of ceremonies.

A second company of "The Student Prince" will open in Chicago in about three weeks.

BATAVIA "WIZARD" GIVES UP.

Williams Renews Not Guilty Plea to Larceny Charges.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Feb. 5.—M. Earl Williams, Batavia "wizard" of finance indicted on four counts charging grand larceny yesterday surrendered to Genesee County authorities today. He renewed his plea of not guilty, entered for him yesterday by City Judge James La Seur, with the reservation that it might be changed later.

Arraigned before County Judge Newell K. Cone, Williams explained his absence from court yesterday as due to ignorance that his presence was required. He said he had spent the day in Buffalo.

NO—you don't see them in the lobbies or on the sidewalk any more. But some of them still survive in spite of the slaughter that McBride's has caused by sticking to a standard service price through thick and thin.

You can buy from speculators—but it seems foolish when McBride's service is better at 50c.—never a penny more.

CHINESE ART SALE BRINGS IN $26,176

J. B. Courtley the Purchaser—A. D. Barney Acquires Handsome Pair of Censers.

A sale of the Ton-Ying collection yesterday at the American Art Galleries brought $26,176. The final sale will be held today.

A rare Chien-lung fei-ts'ui jade pagoda incense-burner in eight sections, eighteen inches tall, No. 160 of the catalogue, was acquired by S. S. Terry for $3,800. It is of translucent white jade, with brilliant emerald green markings. The censer rests on a carved and pierced bell-shaped base bearing birds in relief, its top deeply carved in peonies. The censer is a tripod carved in relief, with foliage, singing birds and phoenixes in super-relief. Two scrolled uprights branching from the sides have fungus loop-handles, from which swing loose rings. The various stories of the pagoda are carved and pierced in motifs of birds and bamboo groves, and also with heron and phoenixes, and from the corrugated roofs of the overhanging towers loose rings with bells depend. Birds in undercut relief decorate the pinnacle.

Mr. Terry also purchased No. 150, a rich rose quartz vase, 8 inches high, supported on a phoenix with finely carved and pierced feathers. A loop of the sacred fungus protrudes from the feathers on its breast and supports a loose ring. The vase has two handles and the dome cover is surrounded by a young phoenix with outspread wings.

A pair of Ch'ien-lung imperial incense burners 6¼ inches tall, with covers of carved amber, were purchased by A. D. Barney for $1,400. These, No. 156 on the catalogue, are cauldron-shaped and each has three claw feet and also lions' heads. Two dragon-head loop handles are attached to the lip of each and from these swing loose rings. The bell-shaped covers have three highly ornamental handles in high relief, each handle a sphere reposing amid clouds. A coiled dragon in undercut relief tops each cover. Each burner is carved in ogre features and dragons in low relief. The compressed amber is clear and brilliant and has a golden translucence. Underneath each is the incised seal mark of Ch'ien-lung.

A Ch'ien-lung carved, compressed, amber vase, eleven inches tall, No. 157, went to J. B. Courtley for $1,450. It is an inverted pear-shaped affair with dragon-head handles supporting loose rings. The dome-shaped cover has four loose ring handles and bears a squatting kylin in undercut relief. An incised lei-wen border and a deep band of ornamentation run about the body of the vase, and there are lei-wen borders on other parts. The t'ao-t'ieh, or gluttonous ogre, and other decorations like those on antique bronzes are carved in low relief.

Mrs. James Childs bought No. 170, a pair of Ch'ien-lung jade flowering plants in cloisonné enamel jardinières, 20 inches tall, for $1,150. They are tree peonies, with green and fei-ts'ui jade leaves and white and fei-ts'ui jade, amethyst, amber, carnelian and agate flowers. The hexagonal jardinières have jui feet and are decorated with flowers on a turquoise-blue ground, inlaid with jade medallions that have gilded, incised designs. Mrs. Childs also paid $500 for No. 168, a pair of Ch'ien-lung jade and carnelian flowers in cloisonné enamel jardinières. These are 18 inches tall and have dark green jade leaves and carnelian blossoms.

Mrs. F. W. Chadbourn paid $1,050 for No. 160, a Ch'ien-lung fei-ts'ui jade double flower-holder. It is an oblong, with perforated carving developing an arboreal tracery in magnolia motifs. There are buds and birds and the sacred fungus in one corner, and large blossom-cups at its top for holding flowers. It is ten inches high. The Long Sang Ti Company acquired No. 164, a pair of fei-ts'ui jade Ch'ien-lung parrots, 10¼ inches tall, for $1,050. The plumage is in relief and incised and russet spots of iron peroxidation enrich the jade. The same company also paid $475 for No. 162, a white jade flower-holder in pomegranate motif, the leaves incised with veining, the whole cut from a liquescent mutton-fat jade in graceful fashion, the vase resting on foliage.

Yamanaka & Co. of Boston purchased No. 158 for $375. It is a Ch'ien-lung yellow jade vase with cover and is less than 11 inches high. A phoenix is seated on the cover and the vase is carved with the imperial emblems of dragon and phoenix, the former in relief and the latter undercut, with tail feathers curling across the flattened inverted pear-shaped body, while the dragon gazes at a jewel resting on clouds. Mrs. C. H. Holmes paid $480 for No. 135-A, an amber statuette of Kwan-yin less than seven inches high, of clear brown and opaque amber, with golden translucence.

This afternoon K'anh-shi, Yung-cheng, Ming, Han, T'ang, Sung and Chou, as well as Ch'ien-lung porcelains and jades, will be offered, also glass, cut velvets and rugs.

An accounting of the estate of Rudolph Keppler, banker, filed in Surrogates' Court yesterday, showed charitable bequests totaling $85,000 had been paid to seven hospitals and welfare institutions. The estate was valued at $750,000. The bequests to charity include $20,000 to the Lenox Hill Hospital, $20,000 to the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital; $10,000 to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, $10,000 to the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, $15,000 to the Wartburg Orphan Farm School and $5,000 each to the New York Ophthalmic Hospital and New York Association for the Blind.

Emil A. C. Keppler, son and co-executor with the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company, has received $250,000 cash, his father's country home at Twin Lakes, Conn., and personal effects valued at $30,000, it is said. The executors say they have deducted creditors' accounts of $25,221, losses on securities of $35,950, and funeral and administration expenses of $71,113. The balance of principal and income of the estate after paying beneficiaries is $118,963.

Roderick White, Violinist, Plays.

Roderick White, a violinist of American stock and one of a famous group of brothers represented in the three arts, returned to the local stage at the Town Hall last evening, assisted at the piano by Samuel Chotzinoff. Mr. White was heard by an audience that filled floor and boxes of an intimate hall, to which his program was proportioned with fine taste, ranging from a classic Mozart sonata in G to the rarer "Faust" fantasy of Wieniawski. It was in Glazounov's concerto that the player approached a more modern phase of creative art, and he himself figured as composer in some agreeable transcriptions of folksongs from the Norwegian, German, Hungarian, Spanish and French.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

The Philharmonic Concert.

Willem Mengelberg and Igor Stravinsky were the predominating features of the concert given by the Philharmonic Society last night in Carnegie Hall. There were other "features" of the occasion. Thus there was a symphony in C by one Schubert, and there was heard—barely heard—an atrociously vulgar overture of Tschaikowsky ("1812") in a swollen instrumental version wholly unnecessary and in bad taste for such an occasion. But these were secondary considerations. The audience wanted to watch Mr. Mengelberg, to look and to listen to Mr. Stravinsky as soloist in the first New York performance of his piano concerto.

This piano concerto is undoubtedly the most important and individual composition of Stravinsky's present "period." In the melodic sense there is not an original idea in the score. But as the expression of an individual temperament it is an amazing and electrifying development. With the exception of the middle movement, the least distinctive, the least individual of the four, the composition is almost purely contrapuntal and rhythmical in its nature. There is no love for melody as that word is traditionally defined; there is little "harmony," if by "harmony" is meant blocks of chords instead of combining melodic lines. There is no emotion, but ruthless, driving energy, and a spirit that is imperious and sardonic.

The orchestra of double basses, wind instruments, and percussion first discourses what may be called by courtesy a chorale. It is a rather cheap tune. Indeed, the impression is that the composer in conceiving this concerto thought of one chorale tune as being about as good as and no better than another—just as a contractor who was to erect a large building would consider that no one brick was better than another for his purposes. The chorale theme which opens the first movement of the concerto is planned apparently simply to provide a working basis, a lump of raw material from which to fashion an extended musical structure.

It is an unlovely passage. The piano enters impatiently with a vigorous rhythm, punctuated on off beats and measures by chords of a shrieking dissonance, which flick on the ear as a whip would flick over the flesh, and now the movement is fairly started. It plunges forward on its own irresistible way. The counterpoint may by a stretch of definition be said to echo the style of Bach or Handel, but it is not quite so. It is more brutal; it takes the bit in its teeth and rushes forward with apparently complete recklessness of consequences. The listener is caught in its current and whirled along with it. The force and impetus of this movement, which in advance of the finale already hints at syncopation of the "ragtime" variety, grows and accumulates to the last emphatic measures.

The slow movement is as a bad imitation of the slow movement of a violin sonata by Bach. There is a false melody, a melody with no real juice or life in it, a wraith of a melody, chilly as the grave. It is handled restlessly, moodily by orchestra and solo instrument, and the final measures of this movement become bases for the next one. In the finale Stravinsky returns to the contrapuntal manner, but with more boldness and rhythmic abandon than ever. Behind this abandon, however, it is the absolute certainty of the master.

The Bachlike figures begin to undergo bewildering transformations. An energetic but dignified motive is now distorted, jazzed, caricatured, and turned into a musical weapon of derision. The pace is always more headlong, until a fragment of the opening chorale makes a forlorn reappearance, to be dismissed with a few measures ripped out by the piano, with which the piece comes to an end.

This concerto made a very strong impression. A number laughed outright at some of its tonal grimaces and contortions, but it was very evident that the work had stirred a majority of the audience. Its rhythm alone, and the magnificent virtuosity of Mr. Stravinsky's performance—he seemed to have endless speed, power, precision at command, and was in fact himself a complete rival orchestra—would have made a sensational effect. Mr. Stravinsky is no conductor, but there are very few pianists who could have given the performance he gave last night, even granting the very advantageous position of the composer interpreting his own composition.

The question then comes, Is this music? This question is not easy to answer. Would the concerto wear? That is quite doubtful. Is there really any such thing as music which has no echo of the passions of the human heart? Perhaps. If so, then Stravinsky may really be on the track of a new music, abstract, classic in its conception, a music that derives its existence and its vital force simply by the conflict of opposing melodic lines and the propulsion of conflicting rhythms. But as the expression of an extraordinary brain and a certain phase of modern temperament this piano concerto is without a parallel. It is probably only one more step in the present path that Stravinsky is exploring, from which he may very well—and shortly—turn away.

But it is a work which reminds the listener that Stravinsky is no ordinary man, that he is an artist of prodigious force, and that it may be a little early for the critical brotherhood to bury Stravinsky. He is now in a state of restlessness and transition of which this severe, unfertile stuff encountered last night is a very characteristic symptom. Stravinsky may never discover his goal. It seems that he has been led into dangerous side-paths of late, paths as interminable as they are futile. But one thing is certain; he will have more to say before the end comes.

Mr. Mengelberg, conducting the Schubert sympathy, that marvel of Dionysian beauty, glorified himself, if he did not invariably glorify the composer. We have heard the introduction of the symphony given a serenity of a spirit which was not present last night. We heard last night details of instrumentation that seemed unimportant and climaxes of a needlessly noisy quality. But, on the other hand, there was the extraordinary authority and orchestral control of Mengelberg. The proper instrumental balances in this symphony are difficult even for experienced conductors to attain. This was the best balanced performance of the symphony, in the tonal sense, that we ever heard. And when Mengelberg rose to his height, and whether or not one agreed with him—he was Mengelberg. The climax of the slow movement, and the wonderful respiration of the 'cello phrases that follow the pause, present a case in question. This was incomparably eloquent, so that the listener merely wondered and reveled in the effect, and forgot until too late, to ask himself whether the score justified such a procedure or whether it did not. It was true creative interpretation.

What was unfortunate and wholly out of place was the open-air version of the Tschaikovsky "1812" overture employed on this occasion. It was vulgarity and ostentation triumphant, and a thing that must have left an unpleasant taste in the mouths of good musicians who were present.

Both men will be executed shortly.

An enthusiastic audience welcomed the first performance of the charming "Coq d'Or" of Rimsky-Korsakoff yesterday afternoon in the pantomimic version introduced in this country by the Ballet Russe and virtually reproduced the Metropolitan Opera Company. We in America do not know this opera in its original form, and have no means of ascertaining how the performance, by singers only, and without skilled dancers to represent the leading parts, would appear. But the version that is seen here is delightful from the standpoint of spectacle and ordered movement and color, and while Rimsky-Korsakoff's music is light, it is often truly satirical and a component part of the picture. The opera, although some of the finer edges of the production originally supervised by Adolph Bohm, and given by him and by the scenic artist its unique Russian character, is one of the most distinctive spectacles that the Metropolitan offers its patrons.

The performance as a whole was creditable to the organization which achieved it, although it was plain that this was not one of the good afternoons of Mme. Galli-Curci. Certain shortcomings on her part were apparently due to nervousness. There was unusual shortness of breath, as well as inaccurate intonation, particularly in the early trying moments. Later the tone was usually of a good quality, and as the performance went on the singer gained in self-possession and a surer employment of her voice. For any soprano the part of the Queen of Shemakha is a very taxing one, and few have been those who could successfully negotiate the aria into which this unfortunate if ocularly alluring queen is plunged as soon as she appears in the second act.

Other individual features of the occasion were equal or superior to the performances of last season. Mr. Diaz gave again his well-conceived characterization of the magician, and Mr. Didur sang the music of the King with his accustomed intelligence and expressiveness. The music of the Golden Cockerel is no simple thing; it was interpreted with spirit and oftenest a fresh and brilliant quality of tone by Miss Ryan. Mme. Alcock's Amelfa had the humor the part demands and a measure of imagination. The performance only lacked a certain measure of crispness and gusto in the ensemble, and a happier condition on the part of the prima donna, to make it brilliant instead of a generally competent one. We liked Mr. Kosloff's Czar better than last season, and Miss Galli's Queen a little less, since, with all its expertness, it has acquired somewhat the character of routine. The rest of the pantomime was efficient and as a rule well coordinated. Most impressive of all was the delicious fantasy of Willy Pogany.

In the performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana," which preceded Coq d'Or," the outstanding characteristic was the excellent singing of Mr. Gigli. Mme. Peralta lacked force and vocal sonority as Santuzza. Miss Telva's Lola has been worthily praised. The singing of the chorus had the spirit that the vivid music of Mascagni requires. There was much enthusiasm on the part of the audience.

MME. CARRERAS IN RECITAL.

Beethoven's Sonata "Appassionata" Brings Long Applause.

The luminous point of the recital given by Mme. Maria Carreras at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon was Beethoven's sonata "Appassionata." If the pianist had played nothing else she would still have earned the gratitude of those present, for she gave a distinguished performance. Mme. Carreras summoned her whole musical armory to give voice to her artistic faith. She found the reflex of her own emotion in the deep, unwavering attention which followed her through three movements. The sombre, subdued grief of the allegro gave place to the fateful deliberation of the andante, to be crowned later by the rushing impetuosity of the presto. The last chord was the signal for an outburst of prolonged applause, which recalled the pianist and resulted in an encore.

In a mixed group the pianist gave another measure of her capacity in Liszt's Petrarch sonnet, not the fac simile of a ruthless virtuoso, but an impression of a poet communing with a poet. "La Dance d'Olaf," a sparkling, feathery, capricious thing by Pick-Mangiagalli, received the compliment of a repetition. Chopin's "Allegro de Concert," which closed the program, though greatly applauded, was one of the least attractive features of the concert, while some old dances and arias of unknown composers of the sixteenth century, transcribed for the piano by Ottorino Respighi, proved an interesting introduction to the afternoon.

Safer Than Necessary

People who want to sell you a less conservative security may tell you that the First Mortgages sold by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company are safer than they need to be.

It is possible. That is one reason why the mortgage sales during 1924 amounted to over $110,000,000.

It is also a reason why the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company is willing to guarantee unconditionally the payment of both interest and principal on these mortgages.

When you invest your savings it is a comfortable feeling to know that you have put them where they are, if anything, safer than necessary.

"WHIMSICAL AND MERCURIAL."

This is a characterization of the Senate of the United States which no newspaper would dare to make on its own responsibility. It was made, however, in the House of Representatives the other day by the Democratic leader, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. He was debating the Postal bill, which, he argued, had been sent in defiance of the Constitution to the House by "that whimsical and mercurial body," the Senate. Nobody called him to order for the phrase, nor was he stricken down for sacrilege by the supernal powers, so that we suppose his words may be lawfully used.

Certain it is that they have been warranted by recent proceedings of the Senate. Where could one find clearer indications of whim and vacillation than in the course of the Senate regarding the nomination of Attorney General STONE to be a Judge of the Supreme Court? First came approval and even acclaim. Then a sudden rumor threw the Senate into a regular schoolgirl flutter. Mr. STONE was actually proposing to indict a Senator, if the evidence justified it! Merely on suspicion, the Senate hastily referred back his nomination to the Judiciary Committee and started a series of inquiries and expostulations and March-hare madnesses which, whatever other effect they may have had, have sadly injured the Senate's reputation for steadiness and sanity.

Nor has this been helped by Senatorial backing and filling in the matter of treaties and foreign relations in general. Here, too, we have had a long display of uncertainty, freakishness and inability to come to a decision. First one treaty is to the fore and then another. The Senate acts as if it could be happy with either, if only the other dear charmer were away so as not to distract its judgment. Yesterday the Senate Foreign Relations Committee wrestled for some time with the question what treaty to take up next. But about the only conclusion it came to was that it could not fix a time for calling up the World Court protocol. In favor of adhering to it the House of Representatives has pronounced itself, the Administration earnestly desires it, the consistency of the Republican Party calls for it, yet the Senate throws up its hands in a kind of helpless despair of itself.

A legislative body that thus conducts itself, even though it boasts of being the most august assembly on earth, deserves the description applied to it by Representative GARRETT. It shows itself to be too much ruled by whim and shifting convictions. Instead of being the branch of Congress which could be definitely counted upon, it has proved itself unstable and elusive. Even the confirmation of Attorney General STONE cannot make the people forget the melancholy show of itself which the Senate made before screwing up its courage to do that right thing.

TO RELIEVE THE SUPREME COURT.

The Supreme Court is more than a year behind on its list of cases pending. It is a glutton for work, but much more is thrown upon it than it can possibly do. It is obstructed by the large number of unimportant suits that are brought to it, merely for delay or to exhaust the patience or resources of the adversary. Two or three years ago the American Bar Association suggested changes that have been finally incorporated, after long and careful deliberation, in a bill drawn by a committee of the court, approved by every member of it, and passed by the Senate and the House. Without going into the details of a long and technical measure, framed by the highest experts, against whose judgment even Senator WALSH of Montana decided not to protest, it is enough to say that its purpose is to lessen the number of cases in which there is an appeal or writ of error as of right to the Supreme Court and increase those that can be carried to that court only by certiorari or certificate.

The bill makes the decisions of the Circuit Courts of Appeal final in a large number of cases and reviewable only by certiorari. Moreover, it makes intelligible the law of appeal, whether by appeal, writ of error or certiorari. The present laws on the subject were described by Chief Justice TAFT as a "trap" in procedure. The jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts of Appeal and the Supreme Court has been the subject of multiplying and discordant statutes. Mr. Justice VAN DEVANTER says:

> The situation now is that in the Supreme Court a good many cases have to be dismissed, their merits left untouched, because they have been brought there from a District Court when they should have gone to a Circuit Court of Appeals, or because they have been brought from a Circuit Court of Appeals on writ of error or appeal when they could come up only on certiorari, or because they have been brought from a State court on writ of error by certiorari as the only admissible mode of bringing them up. These mistakes are generally attributed to the fact that the practitioner has found a part of the statutes and not the rest. Sometimes the mistake is mere carelessness; but it not infrequently happens that lawyers who stand high in their profession at home mistake their remedy or the mode of invoking it either because they do not find the controlling statute or because they have difficulty in reconciling it with others.

Thus the procedure is clarified; the Supreme Court will be relieved of cases that should not be brought before it; willful delay by litigants will be ended or nearly so; no doubtful or weighty constitutional question will fail of review. As Mr. Justice VAN DEVANTER points out, "dicretionary jurisdiction" in regard to petitions for certiorari simply means that they are to be "granted or denied according to a sound judicial discretion." Every Justice studies the papers and gives his view; and the petition is always granted "when as many as four think "that it should be granted and sometimes when as many as three think "that way." A distinct step in the improvement of the administration of justice is made by this bill, prepared by the most competent authority. Congress is to be praised for accepting it. President COOLIDGE recommended legislation for the purpose in his message of Dec. 3.

A STATIC REVOLUTIONIST.

Having known BERNARD SHAW for forty years, the late WILLIAM ARCHER wrote an article on his "psychology"—one of the last things he penned. Comparing him to VOLTAIRE, whom he somewhat resembles as critical essayist, iconoclast and dramatist, Mr. ARCHER points out that, whereas the great Frenchman half unconsciously revolutionized his generation and an entire world, "SHAW, a professed revolutionist, will revolutionize nothing." The paradox of his career is "the extraordinary disproportion between his fame and his influence." Few men have "made so great a noise and so little mark."

To be a real force, a revolutionist "must either have an effective insight into things as they are, or, if "he sees them awry, must do so by "reason of a common and popular "obliquity of vision." To SHAW, or so Mr. ARCHER says, the factual world does not exist. He lives in a world of a priori self-evident truth of his own construction. "VOLTAIRE'S mind was "a plane, undistorting mirror; "SHAW'S is concave, convex, corrugated, many-faced—anything you "like, except plane and objective." His philosophy is a mere restatement, mildly exaggerative, of the leading thought of his time. Many years ago, when it was the custom to speak of SHAW as a weathercock of ideas always pointing against the wind, as a mad Irishman with a shillalah ready for every pate in Donnybrook Fair, GILBERT CHESTERTON characteristically exalted him as the one man of his generation whose ideas and animosities had remained fixed. Mr. ARCHER admits this, but finds in it a damaging accusation.

On the point of psychology, ARCHER is right. And CHESTERTON is half right. But why drag in psychology—and VOLTAIRE? Surely the time has come to forget what SHAW says he is and consider what he is. As a revolutionist he is the most intellectual of our writers of comedy, and one of the most amusing. As a shillalah-man he is perhaps the most versatile and sympathetic creator of character in modern drama—and, at his best, one of the most richly colored and poetic. No one has made us laugh more heartily or half so intelligently. As to the few basic human passions he has little knowledge or sympathy; but what dramatist has given us a more sensitively and deeply divined gentlewoman than Candida or Lady Wayneflete, a more finely and vigorously felt man of genius than Marchbanks or Caesar? Whereas VOLTAIRE as a dramatist is merely formal, SHAW has created a world all his own, a world of exquisite refinement and enduring delight. Mr. ARCHER admits, though with a rather parenthetical effect, that, "mere whimsicalities "apart, there is hard and solid "thought behind his every utter-"ance," that "it is always presented "in clear and sometimes truly lumi-"nous form." The same can be said with even greater truth of his observation of character—a dramatist's real stock in trade.

The true bill of indictment against this proclaimed revolutionist is not that he is a fizzle and a dud, but that he has somehow sufficient vitality to get between SHAW the man and SHAW the artist. For in all but a few of the plays there is a deal of the modern equivalent of bombast, of sound and fury signifying nothing toward the development of truly dramatic idea, or of character and situation. From "Arms and the Man" to "Joan of Arc", the Shavian repertory, considering each play as a whole, is mainly disproportioned, distorted, lopsided. It shows us a Donnybrook Irishman forever beating himself on the head.

MOFFETT AND MITCHELL.

Linking the name of Admiral MOFFETT with that of General WILLIAM MITCHELL in the aircraft controversy is surprising. Those officers do not think alike about a unified service to control army and navy aviation. Admiral MOFFETT strenuously opposes General MITCHELL'S plan, and has always insisted that the navy must be allowed to have its own air corps. Nor do the two agree about the respective values of the battleship and the airplane. The General holds that the battleship is practically obsolete; the Admiral that it is the "backbone of the fleet," the airplane only an auxiliary. In addressing the Engineering Society of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor last September he said:

> Haul down the American flag on your battleships, and you destroy your first line of defense. Do away with them, and you destroy the effectiveness of aviation in defense of our national interests on the high seas.

The two men differ greatly in temperament. The Admiral is cool and restrained in controversy, the General impetuous and assertive. Admiral MOFFETT is diplomatic, General MITCHELL freely attacks those who fail to agree with him, even though they may be his superiors. Representative PERKINS must have astonished Washington when he told the House committee of information given him "a month ago" that the Admiral as well as the General was to be "disciplined" for being "too enthusiastic and progressive." If any one in authority is gunning for the Chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, there is no evidence of it. He has distinguished himself by his zeal and energy in all branches of aeronautics. Who ever heard of his firing off verbal skyrockets?

General MITCHELL has given cause for uneasiness, for he plainly has the defects of those qualities that make him a militant reformer. The letter of Secretary WEEKS calling for an explanation of statements made by General MITCHELL to the House investigating committee brings out extravagances that it would be well for him to tone down for the good of the service and the welfare of aviation. On more than one occasion General MITCHELL'S words conveyed the impression that he was condemning the policy of the War and Navy Departments, as when he spoke of the "vested interests" that were arresting the progress of aviation. The expression was loose, for all that he had in mind was the opposition of conservative elements in the two services. Yet, aviation having a future which no man can set bounds to, General MITCHELL, intemperate as his zeal sometimes is, should have the credit of his disinterestedness and devotion to the national defense. To get rid of him by demotion or exile would be a scandalous misuse of authority.

ELECTION METHODS IN EGYPT.

Wednesday's primary elections for the Egyptian Parliament, in which ZAGHLUL Pasha suffered a personal defeat, were not primaries in the American sense. They were the first step in an indirect electoral system. The Egyptians, on the basis of universal suffrage, choose elector-delegates in the ratio of one for every fifty voters, and the delegates in each district elect the representative in Parliament. ZAGHLUL'S defeat, apparently in a tiny constituency of fifty votes, would be equivalent to an American candidate for the Presidency failing to carry his own election district.

This outcome was foreseen by ZAGHLUL, who declared nearly a month ago that the Ziwar Ministry had rigged the elections against him by tampering with the electoral law. Under the old law the elector-delegates held office for five years, and ZAGHLUL, as such a delegate, would be under no need of going before the people. The former Prime Minister was nevertheless confident of re-election unless the Government meddled with the ballot boxes. That charge will probably be made now. Outside observers assert that there is little to choose between the political parties in this respect. ARTHUR RANSOME, in The Manchester Guardian, cites one device by which ZAGHLUL obtained his huge majority in the previous Parliamentary elections:

> A band of students went about the country canvassing by various methods. In some places, when they had persuaded any one to promise his vote, they made sure of it by forcing him to declare that if he did not vote for the Wafd candidate his wife would be divorced. By Mohammedan law this conditional statement would have effect, so that if the poor wretch did not vote for the Wafd his wife would ipso facto be divorced.

East and West would seem to be touching pretty close when Parliamentary elections and Mohammedan divorce procedure are thus combined. Since it is impossible, however, to go behind the returns, one is justified in concluding that the outcome of the Egyptian primaries does indicate a quieter temper on the Nile. The British Government contributed to it by consenting a few days before the election to submit to arbitration the clause in Lord ALLENBY'S ultimatum asserting for Great Britain a free hand in using the Nile waters in the Sudan. That clause made an unhappy impression which may have been removed by Lord ALLENBY'S recent statement that the British Government "has no intention of trespassing on the historic "rights of Egypt in the waters of the "Nile." Coupled, however, with this conciliatory step has been the announcement of the establishment of a separate Sudan Defense Force responsible only to the Governor General of the Sudan. It is a policy of treading softly with a big stick, which would seem to assure the election of a friendly Parliament next month.

PROTECTING OYSTERS AND BATHERS.

Although the lowly oyster is given a clean bill of health by the joint legislative committee appointed to investigate the pollution of inland and tidal waters, the likelihood of contamination from sewage is admitted, and attention is called to the necessity of ending the pollution of all waters as soon as possible. The fact that the dangerous areas are small and are known and policed should allay fears that all shellfish are contaminated. But this should not be taken as an excuse for postponing effective action in altering the disposal of refuse of all kinds in and about the waters of New York Harbor and the near-by beaches. It is not enough to ordain that oysters from the dangerous regions shall not be sold on the market. The essential thing is to strike at the causes, and these are not hard even for the layman to find.

Ten million people, more or less, now live within the drainage area of the lower Hudson, New York Harbor and the western end of Long Island Sound. Much of the refuse of all kinds from this entire region sooner or later reaches these waters. The concentration is particularly heavy in the lower part of the harbor, owing partly to the inadequate flushing facilities of the East and Hudson Rivers and to the fact that each month sees the population increasing. According to the joint legislative committee, these waters are dangerous even for bathing. The same is true of the upper reaches of the East River and of the Harlem River.

It requires no scientist to show that, even if actual danger to health is not so great as some would have us think, the enormously important recreational value of these waters is destroyed by their appearance and odor. New York has lost one of its greatest opportunities in not availing itself of its waterfronts as it should have done. Thanks to its wasteful and crude methods of refuse disposal, it is now injuring near-by beaches. It is only a question of time before the waters at Brighton and Coney will be as unattractive as in the Narrows.

New York, like Chicago, faces the charge of being antiquated in its drainage system. The latter city may be forced into meeting the problem squarely in the near future. In the case of New York, it looks as if only a series of epidemics would arouse public opinion to the necessity of drastic action. If the temporary distrust of the oyster has served to create greater public interest in the entire question, the oyster men may find that their financial loss has been the public's gain.

MAKING THE POSTAL CONFUSION WORSE.

Representative KELLY now adds his guess about a postal pay and rate increase bill. The first zone rates proposed in Senator STERLING'S bill were based on the alleged facts of the Postal Cost Finding Commission's report. The briefest consideration of these, with the help of competent witnesses, was enough seriously to impair their value. Afterward Senator MOSES and Senator ODDIE hazarded their different zone rates. Mr. KELLY now essays a fresh recasting of zones and rates.

The present eight zones are reduced, for rate-making purposes, to three; and the effect of the new tariffs will be to raise the second-class rates 50 per cent. on the great bulk of matter now using the mail service. Mr. KELLY champions his measure as one which will raise additional revenue from second-class matter. It has not even that merit. The present high wartime rates on this class have already driven publishers to the use of cheaper baggage, express and truck services wherever possible. The Kelly provisions will push the newspapers to even greater use of these other services, and there is every reason to believe that the result will be an actual decrease in revenue.

The struggles in the House to piece together a pay and rate measure are probably due to President COOLIDGE'S hint that he would not favor a bill which fell so far short of providing the revenue to defray the expense of the increased postal salaries as did the Senate bill. It is difficult to believe, however, that the President can approve a measure which has been framed so much by chance. The premises in the case—that the pay provisions in the bill are necessary in toto—are far from being proved. If anything in the muddled situation is clear, it is that postal legislation, which the House leaders now plan to drive through under a special vote next Tuesday, should be passed only after Congress has given the bill painstaking and intelligent study and debate.

"LOW SPOTS."

The search for "high spots" in the public school system by the School Survey Committee has revealed "low spots" also. In the field of education, as in topography, photography, painting and the like, high spots suggest the existence of low spots, or at any rate lower levels. They may be plateaus on which peaks stand forth or they may be swamps that breed infection. In an earlier report of this committee one of the high spots mentioned is the concentration in one school on a special habit each month, progress being reported from time to time as to success in overcoming undesirable habits.

The report of last Saturday urges general attention to character training in order to eliminate the most menacing "low spots." It is difficult for the teacher, of whom so much is required, to devote adequate attention to training in what should be the aim of all school activities and the "groundwork of every school subject." The daily attitude of a teacher is itself the best sort of ideal, but there needs to be self-exertion on the part of pupils and concern for others if they are to grow in character to full height. The meeting of 2,500 school teachers Sunday afternoon, at which representatives of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish ministry spoke and over which Cardinal HAYES presided, while it had as its object the promotion of systematic weekday religious instruction outside of the schools, incidentally accentuated the need of character training within the schools. Commissioner ENRIGHT proposes "right doing" as the needful fourth "R," in view of the "growing flood of youthful crime."

If the school survey leads to such a reconstruction of the course of study as will not only give as the supreme object of all study the attainment of "character," but will start children on the way to it by daily discipline and example, it will have justified its work. Proposals as to methods are many, but it should be possible for teachers and principals to agree how the moral qualities which are basic to a sound education can be best promoted. This is what is above all else needed in education.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Delicate Question Was Raised.

There is some difficulty in following to its close the line of argument by which Judge CARPENTER, before whom in Chicago the former Director of the Veterans' Bureau was tried, explained and justified his refusal to include in his charge, as the counsel for the defense requested, the statement that the jurors were to ascribe no weight to the fact that neither of the defendants had taken the witness stand.

Instructions to that effect are common, and that a defendant's failure to testify should not count against him is a long-established rule of criminal procedure. Judge CARPENTER said that he made no mention of the rule because he did not want to impress upon the minds of the jurors that FORBES and THOMPSON had remained silent during the many days of the trial, and refrained from doing it lest the jurors should do exactly what he would have told them not to do.

Not improbably that would have been the effect, but, on the other hand, was it not at least as likely that the jurors, feeling the same surprise that the Judge said he felt at the course of the defendants, would deduce from it exactly what they and practically everybody does out of court in similar circumstances—that the men remained silent because they feared what they might be forced to admit under cross-examination?

This might or might not have happened, but for the Judge to give no instructions on the point certainly did not prevent it from happening if the jurors' minds in the jury room worked as they do outside of it. The Judge had to decide between two possibilities, and opinions will differ whether his course gave the defendants a chance of escape that legally belonged to them or decreased it.

A Protection No Longer Much Needed.

That no adverse conclusion shall be drawn from refusal to testify in one's own defense is but a phase of the rule that nobody can be made to testify against himself or of the other rule that the prosecution must prove guilt, while the defense is under no obligation to prove innocence.

These are ideas that go back to the days when doubts first arose as to the value of confessions elicited under torture, to be followed later by a determination that such confessions should have no standing in any court. Thus was created much needed protection of the innocent from tyranny, but a good deal of that protection now has been transferred to the guilty, through the unnecessary difficulties that have been placed in the way of prosecutors for the State.

In the ordinary affairs of life, a person who has nothing to say for himself when accused of misbehavior of any kind usually has his silence ascribed to guilt. "If he could clear himself, he would," is assumed as obvious. It must be a fairly good working hypothesis, else would it not be in such general use; but it is, or at any rate may be, fallacious, for guilt is not the only possible explanation of a refusal to attempt self-exculpation. It takes a legalistic mind to see that, however, or at any rate to see it clearly and constantly, and laymen are apt to be made impatient when told that they must not make an assumption which experience has taught them to be about as safe as any of the other assumptions on which their lives are conducted.

He Offers Caps to Many Heads.

In a highly characteristic article contributed to the February Atlantic, the Dean of St. Paul's discusses "Religion in the Future." It is a very readable article, like everything written by Dean INGE, and distributes vigorous blows as impartially and in as many different directions as did Sir LAUNCELOT DU LAKE when he engaged in one of his favorite battles with a score or more of enemies.

The "gloomy Dean," too, smites on the right hand and he smites on the left hand, and to find any variant of Christianity on which one of his blows does not fall in the course of these remarks, one would have to consult a list of denominations long enough to contain the most obscure.

Most readers of the article, however, will approve so much of what the Dean says about the followers of other than their own cults that they will enjoy the production as a whole, and few can fail to see that its author brings to his discussion a vast amount of exact knowledge, historical as well as scientific, that he follows logic fearlessly wherever it may take him, and that his judgment is affected by neither prejudice nor preconceptions.

It is not at all necessary to agree with all the Dean writes, but few will deny that his method of debate is a welcome change from most of the things said of late by both Fundamentalists and Modernists on topics which to Dean INGE probably do not seem to be of vast importance. He is himself interested in other matters, and if he must be called a theologian the class must be divided into two parts—the Dean and the others—for he is like none of them and none of them is like him.

There is nothing in this article to show why the Dean is called "gloomy." That term does not fit a man who could invent, as description of the bee community, such a characterization, at once so exact and amusing, as a "socialistic gynecocracy of maiden aunts." He almost declares that coming to something like that is among the possibilities that confront humanity. He doesn't really believe, however, that such will be our sad fate.

A Friend Pictured as a Foe!

Isn't the Department of Agriculture making a mistake when it prepares for distribution a film telling about the harm done by the common earthworm, and revealing nothing of the services rendered by that humble creature?

What if the earthworm does damage lawns and putting greens a little—or even a good deal, sometimes? These injuries are trivial indeed in comparison with the beneficent work credited by all scientists to the earthworm as a mover and renovator of soil, and something might be said in its behalf, too, as providing the favorite bait for innumerable generations of youthful fishermen and not a few adult ones.

If lumbricus terrestris were a beast really destructive, the earth would have been a barren waste long ago, for it exists in uncountable multitudes all over the world, pretty well up to both of the Poles, and has done so for more centuries than ever will be recorded with any definiteness. It has had time to do whatever harm it could do, and yet its reputation remains excellent among the wisest observers.

So the department artists should be more careful, lest they start a campaign against one of man's very best friends.

Seventh Day Adventists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Carlyle B. Haynes makes astounding statements in a letter appearing in THE TIMES of Feb. 3. Mrs. Rowen is an excommunicated Seventh Day Adventist because of her setting a date for the coming of the Lord. That Seventh Day Adventists have never set a time for that event, as contended by Mr. Haynes, is a legerdemain statement. When definite dates were set for this, as for instance, between March 21, 1843, and March 21, 1844, then again on Oct. 22, 1844, these people were First Day Adventists, their observance of the seventh day Sabbath dating from 1845. Some Seventh Day Adventists contend plainly that they were mistaken in the event to occur on the aforesaid dates. Just as Mrs. Rowen claimed to have been shown the end of the world for Feb. 6 of this year, so Mrs. White claimed on June 27, 1850, that she had been shown that this world had but a few further months to last. John O. Corliss speaks of it having been confidently stated by the Seventh Day Adventists in 1908 that the end was about due, and Warren E. Howell informs us that in 1874 it was repeatedly pointed out that the impending doom was rapidly drawing nearer. The doctrines of the Seventh Day Adventists are responsible for the existence of the Rowenites. As to the non-existence of the Reformed Seventh Day Adventist Church, a movement calling itself "The Seventh Day Adventist Reform Movement" began in Germany about the time of the war, and has today in America many representatives.

A CRY TO THE POETS.

Let poetasters build their pallid fires
Upon Art's altar, worship in her name
Their own imaginings, their vain desires—
Each fancying his own the sacred flame!
Let them expound, in groups sophisticate,
The secrets and the subtleties of Art;
Explain its whole technique and long debate
On this and that; discuss and tear apart
And rearrange each mincing word and line
Of poems that but faintly half imply
Ideas frail, emotions superfine
That Art will never let them clarify—
Let dilettantes play at poetry
While, unsung, Life's great pageant passes by!

But, poets, rouse you! Shake the earth again
With thunders terrible! With lightnings hurled
From Beauty's very altar wake the world!
Sound trump and cymbal, stir the souls of men
To awful wonder! Show them hidden things
Set them a-tingle with the wine of Life,
Assuage their wistfulness, keen them for strife,
And whisper them to dream of stars and wings!
Aye, waken, poets! Stir you from your sleep,
Keep those pale vigils seers and prophets keep!
The people cry to you. . . Oh, give them back
The Vision—lest they perish for its lack!
Their footsteps falter, fearful in the night—
Your torches, poets! Lead them, give them light!

A WAY TO THE WORLD COURT

A Joint Resolution of Congress Would Bring Us In, It Is Argued.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Yesterday's action of the House upon the World Court suggests one means of adhering to the protocol which would obviate the difficulty of securing the approval of two-thirds of the Senate. That is by joint resolution or act of both houses, the passage of which requires a mere majority.

There are a number of precedents to justify this method of procedure.

(1) Both Texas and Hawaii were annexed, not by treaty, but by joint resolution of Congress. On April 12, 1844, Mr. Calhoun signed a treaty for the annexation of Texas, which, however, was rejected by the Senate. The State Department informed the State of Texas that this did not mean that the project of annexation had failed, a statement which proved to be true, for on March 1, 1845, Congress passed a joint resolution expressing its "consent" that the State should be admitted into the Union.

(2) Different acts of Congress have authorized the President or some designated department head to enter into agreements which do not need the approval of the Senate in regard to postal, copyright, trade-mark and tariff matters. One of the latest examples of this method of doing business with foreign Governments was the act of 1922 establishing the World War Debt Commission with power to refund the interallied debt to the United States. The debt agreement negotiated with England by this commission did not take the form of a treaty, but merely of an amendment to the original act. (42 Stat. 1326.)

(3) Most important of all, the United States has adhered to two international organizations in the past of the greatest importance without the authorization of a treaty, but merely of an act of Congress. The first is the Universal Postal Union and the second is the Pan-American Union. The Postmaster General of the United States ratified the general postal convention of 1874, not by virtue of the approval of the Senate, but "in virtue of the powers vested in the Postmaster General by law" (19 Stat. 588). The law here referred to was passed by Congress on June 8, 1872. The same procedure was followed in ratifying the Madrid postal convention of 1920, which was not submitted to the Senate for its approval.

Moreover, there is no treaty authorizing the establishment of the Pan-American Union. The United States is a member of this organization by virtue of an act of Congress, passed "to enable the President to carry into effect the recommendations of the International American Conference," an act which also appropriated money for the expenses of the Pan-American Bureau (26 Stat. 275). If an act of Congress can thus authorize the participation of this government in the Postal Union and the Pan-American Bureau, it should also be constitutional to authorize our adherence to the protocol of the World Court.

It will be objected that while such subjects as postal rates and debts fall directly within the competence of Congress, no such power can be implied as far as an international court is concerned. The power of Congress to pass such a resolution may, however, be derived from three sources: (1) the power to declare war; (2) the power to raise armies and generally to provide for defense of the country; (3) the power to make regulations in regard to the judicial system of the United States.

If Congress has power to declare war, it should have the power to prevent the necessity for declaring war from coming into existence. If Congress has power to provide for the defense of the country, surely it is not limited to the construction of battleships when a more certain defense may be obtained by the resort to peaceful international judicial procedure.

So long as the present efforts to obtain the approval of two-thirds of the Senate for the World Court protocol are continued, a small minority may obstruct our entrance. The passage of a joint resolution by a majority of both houses would overcome this obstacle, because it is believed that a majority of the Senators would vote for the Court, once it is placed before them.

Politicians and the League.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

President Coolidge and Mr. Hughes have hypnotized themselves into the belief that the World Court is not a League of Nations Court, and are trying to hypnotize their Republican brethren of the Senate into the same belief. The latter are sincerely frightened at the League dangers that their imaginative brains created, for political purposes, in 1919. They know that the Court was created by the League under Article XIV. of the covenant of the League, that all Court members are League members, and that all, except one, of the Judges are citizens of League members. They recognize it as the Court of Wilson's hated League of Nations.

Other hypnotists are the "practical" politicians of the late Democratic Convention, who believe that the League issue was the cause of the 1920 Democratic defeat. The narrow 1916 victory was the only consecutive Democratic victory since 1856, and a third consecutive success on any issue or issues was clearly impossible. The people were as tired of the Democratic Party in 1920 as the Athenians were tired of Aristides the Just when they exiled him in 483 B. C. The reason for a vote to exile was, "I do not even know him; but I am tired of hearing him called The Just." Other unfavorable factors in 1920 were Harding's "Association of Nations" pledge and the statement of thirty-one pro-League Republicans that the only way for America to enter the League was to elect a Republican President and Senate.

The "practical" politicians welcomed the news of Wilson's death, for it meant that they would not be held to an honest League plank. By a vote of more than two to one they cast aside Wilson's greatest work, although Presidents Harding and Coolidge had approved of the League of Nations Court.

Consider how "practical" these politicians were. In 1922 the Democrats cut down the huge Republican majorities in both houses of Congress to narrow margins, and the Republican scandals made 1924 Democratic hopes very bright. Yet Coolidge had a larger popular plurality over Davis than Harding had over Cox. The people were more tired of the Democratic Party after a few weeks of "practical" politicians in the convention than after seven and a half years of the truly practical Woodrow Wilson in the White House.

Denies Anger.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to assure your readers that it is not the policy of the Citizens' Medical Reference Bureau to issue any statement on any subject in a spirit of anger. We ask, therefore, that a correction be made, in view of an item in THE TIMES, Jan. 29, under Topics of the Times, entitled, "An Experience Now Rare, Once General," in which the bureau is referred to as "chattering angrily." We take exception to the use of the word "monomaniacs" as applied to persons who resist all attempts to make the use of vaccines and serums compulsory.

SAYS CHURCH FAILS IN CHILD TEACHING

ASKS BOARD FOR HEARING

No Union of Church and School Sought, Spokesman for Church Federation Declares.

Joseph Lewis, President of the Freethinkers' Society, said yesterday that he had written to Superintendent of Schools William J. O'Shea, asking for public hearings before any affirmative action is taken by the Department of Education in connection with the proposed plan to give religious education to school children on school days, but outside of school hours and at places apart from school property.

"I know it is said that the plan is to work without any cooperation from the Department of Education, but the proposal is clearly an entering wedge for putting religion into the public school system," he said.

"We do not object to the religious education of children with the consent of their parents at Sabbath schools on Saturdays and Sundays, but that should be sufficient. The churches should not attempt to gain control over the children on week-days. The fact that they are attempting to get the children on school days shows that they are unsuccessful in getting voluntary attendance at Sunday school and that they want the public schools to help them out. First they will want one hour turned over for religious instruction, then two and three.

"We claim the right to a public hearing in order that the public should be clearly informed on any contemplated step that seems intended to change the traditional educational policy of this country. The people ought to be clearly informed as to the extent of the contact which the religious bodies propose to make with the schools."

Dr. Walter M. Howlett of the New York Federation of Churches said yesterday that the proposed experiment of offering religious instruction in their own faiths to the children of one public school had not been fully outlined, but that it was not intended to ask cooperation or help from the public school system.

"No connection of church and public schools is contemplated," he said, "but Catholics, Protestants and Jews alike feel that deplorable evils have resulted from the failure to teach religion and morals to the rising generation, and we desire to work out some practicable plan for remedying this situation.

"The number of children who are growing up without instruction in religion and morals is on the increase. Out of the 1,200,000 children in New York City, only 400,000 are receiving religious training, and New York's showing is not worse in this respect than that of the country at large. The fact is that most of the universities and great educational institutions of the country were founded primarily to teach religion, but this purpose has been disregarded and for the most part they do not teach religion at all. Then, two generations ago the plan of excluding religion from the common schools was adopted, and the teaching of religion has been neglected, with the result that today only one child in three receives such instruction.

"We are not seeking to overturn this policy. I believe that none of us favors mixing religion with the public schools. But we want to make the best of our situation by giving as many children as possible the religious training they should have."

Dr. Howlett said that the question of raising money to carry on the proposed schools might become a serious one. As far as the Protestants were concerned, he said that it was intended for the present that the local church where the religious school was held should bear the ordinary expenses, while the New York Federation of Churches would pay the overhead expenses.

ELSBERG IN CITY CAMPAIGN.

Will Direct Republican Attack on Hylan—Lyons Mentioned for Mayor

Former State Senator Nathaniel A. Elsberg said last night that he was trying to arrange matters so that he could remain as Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the New York County Republican Committee to help direct the campaign to defeat Mayor Hylan for re-election. Mr. Elsberg said the report that he was to retire as Advisory Chairman was based upon the difficulty he had had in finding sufficient time to do this political work and meet his professional engagements.

"I think I have arranged matters so that I may do both," he said. "That is all that there has been to the matter and there has been no disagreement of any kind in the committee."

Local Republicans received with interest the report, emanating from Albany, that John J. Lyons, former Secretary of State, might be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor. Mr. Lyons, who managed the campaign of Henry H. Curran, last fusion candidate for Mayor, is known to have cherished an ambition for the Mayoralty nomination. The general opinion among New York County Republicans was that Lyons would not press his candidacy.

SEES HOPE FOR RUSSIA.

F. A. MacKenzie Believes It Lies in Milder Rule by Communists.

In a talk on his observations of conditions in Russia under Soviet rule at a luncheon of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents at the Lawyers' Club yesterday, Fred A. MacKenzie, journalist, warned Americans against assisting counter-revolutionary movements in that country.

Mr. MacKenzie declared that the Bolsheviki become so incensed over the meddling by others in their internal affairs that "every $100 subscribed in America for counter-revolution means death or exile of one innocent person in Russia." That is the way by which they express their revenge, said Mr. MacKenzie.

"The Russians are trying to work out their own salvation, and I believe they will do it. I have seen enough of the Russian people and have observed their grit, their determination and their courage. What we are witnessing in that country is not the death of a nation but the birth throes of a great nation."

ARCHITECTS DANCE UNDER A 'BIG TOP'

THERE ARE 2,500 GUESTS

"Melodiflera" and "Beauty and the Beasts" Feature "the Greatest Show on Earth."

Under the biggest indoor "top" ever seen in New York (the Madison Square Garden doesn't count), the New York Society of Beaux Arts Architects gave their annual ball last night in the main ballroom suite of the Hotel Astor. There were fully 2,500 persons present, not counting the participants in the bill of the night's performance. It was called Un Cirque d'Hiver de Luxe. There was about it a certain touch of that atmosphere of La Ville Lumière, especially its Quartier Latin, where most of the architects of this city were wont to congregate in the days when they were students at the famous Beaux Arts. The ball was one of those endeavors of the prosperous architects of New York to raise funds to aid certain talented and struggling students in architecture, painting and sculpture at the Beaux Arts Institute of Design of this city and to give to them, too, a chance to taste the joys and tribulations of that city of art—Paris.

It was with the cooperation of leaders in the worlds of literature and the drama and with the substantial aid of the society that the undertaking was made possible. With the fertile ideas of a committee comprising such men as Donn Barber, George S. Chappell, Bradley Delahanty, Robert W. Chanler, Frank Cavenaugh, Alfred C. B. Falls, F. Burnham Chapman, Henry B. Culver, Howard Greenley, Ben Al Haggin, Leo Lentelli, Edward F. Sanford Jr., John Held Jr., Francis Lenygon, John E. Sheridan, J. Monroe Hewlett, Carl Melchers, Ferruccio Vitale, Raymond M. Hood, Benjamin W. Morris, S. Oakley Vander Poel, John Mead Howells, James W. O'Connor, A. Stewart Walker, Harry Allan Jacobs, Ernest Peixotto and Arthur Ware, including also Kenneth Murchison as Chairman, the result was such a circus performance as has not before been witnessed here.

Ballroom Like a Tent.

The big ballroom had all the appearances of the inside of a regulation circus tent of canvas with broad red and white stripes. From the double tier of boxes were suspended grinning faces of clowns painted on canvas, and in the centre of the room there was a huge chariot led by a pair of fiery-looking steeds whose behavior was as mild as could be expected, for they were carved out of wood. Each of the adjoining rooms had the appearance of a smaller tent, and in them were the sideshows, the cages of "wild" beasts, the tamers, tattooed men, contortionists, fat women, sword swallowers and fire eaters.

It was a wonderful audience that assembled for all this. Circus costumes were necessary, and no one without one was admitted to the arena. This gaily bedecked audience was seated in boxes of the grand tier and at café tables placed at the sides of the ballroom, while others seated on both sides of the chariot had a chance to watch the doings on a stage which, after the show, was removed to give space for dancing.

The "programme," as it was called, was ushered in by the "Music of Markels' Magnificent Melodifiers," conducted for the occasion by Kenneth Murchison, who had arranged the music, in which there were some of the reminiscences of his Paris student days, such as "Viens Poupoule" and the "Pere la Victoire." Then appeared on the stage the "L'Affiche Vivante," a living poster composed by John E. Sheridan featuring seven alleged most beautiful women of Paris, billed as follows: Mlle. Griselle McQuinon, du Theatre Marigny; Mlle. Llale Gris, du Ba-ta-Clan; Mlle. Marion Hurley, du Casino de Paris; Mlle. Patria Lyvengoode, du Theatre Femina; Mlle. Peggy Shannon, de La Cigale; Mlle. Lapin Roe, des Ambassadeurs, and Mlle. Helene Anderson, de Pigalle's. The only man in the group was Lejaren A. Hiller and the "poster" suggested Bougereau's "Nymphs and Satyr," that used to hang in the old Hoffman House barroom.

Dazzling Circus Acts.

Then Dr. Traprock, famed for his antarctic "expeditions on paper," presented his European act "Beauty and the Beasts," in which no less than forty ferocious lions, each in charge of two beauties, were subdued through the act of amazing intelligence, sagacity and kindness of Mlle. Marguerite Wilkins. There also was a dazzling and dizzy stroll on the tight wire by Mlle. Alice Diaz, and it is a wonder she did not drop in the midst of the audience. It was a hair-raising act that Henry Brundage Culver, builder of ancient styled ships, superintended from the mouth of the cannon's mouth Mimi, the Maid of Mystery, directly into a net over a distance of 175 feet "more or less," and she landed there safely. The lady, however, insisted that the ammunition should be a highly perfumed powder, which was sprinkled into the Krupp cannon.

A picturesque feature of the program was "L'Amour Provencale" a ballet whose plot dealt with the comedy and tragedy of a strolling circus company. Scenario and costumes were by Leo Lentelli, music by Kenneth Murchison with Howard Greenley as General Manager. It presented a motley group of gypsies and peasants all in gay costumes. The leading members of the cast were: Conchita, Mlle. Fleurette du Pree; La Gitana, Mlle. Marguerite Agniel; Pepito, M. George Mitchell; Malerba, The Gypsy Chief, M. Howard Greenley.

The incidental dances were executed by a society ballet. The groups included: Gypsies, Miss Katherine Murchison, Miss Maude Bouvier, Miss Doris Brixey, Miss Mildelle Bouvier, Miss Betty Stoddard, Miss Elsie Benkard, Miss Janet Kirby, Miss Caroline A. Rittenberg, J. U. Hussey Jr., Miss Josephine Scott, John C. Wilson, Miss Dixie Luboff and Louis Gourd. Villagers, Miss Alice Payson, Miss Jane Hamilton Brady, Miss Frances Miller, Miss Adele Brookfield, Miss Elisabeth Schroeder, Miss Peggy Stokes, Miss Cornelia MacKenzie, Miss Mea McClellan, Miss Eleanor FitzGerald, John Beach and J. Nevett Steele Jr. There were circus performers, including Miss Mary Almonte, Miss Betty Barber, Miss Sylvia Warren, Miss Trixie Smith, Miss Sara Dodge, Miss Louise Larocque and Henry Clapp Smith. The band comprised Miss Evelyn Perrari, Miss Elite Schwab, Miss Eleanor Knowles, Miss Caroline Hancock, Miss Margaret Olson, Miss Eleanor Ewing.

After this there followed, under the direction of D. Putnam Brinley, a parade of all the performers, who came down from the stage and mingled with the general audience for dancing and, later on, supper.

Donn Barber was the genial ringmaster and dressed like the genuine man of the ring in a French circus, pink coat with long tails, white small clothes and waistcoat and high boots, with a freshly ironed silk hat. When the dance was once in progress there was a forbidding appearing body of garden municipaux. Among their duties was to eject any one who dared to come without a fitting costume. As far as the general costuming is concerned there was pretty much everything suggestive of a circus. There were some of the old-time equestriennes in the riding habits of their day, Japanese and Chinese juggiers, ballet dancers, acrobats, Oriental slaves—in fact, anything that could be associated with the tan bark ring.

In the Boxes.

Prince Gelasio Caetani, who came on from Washington for the occasion, had one of the boxes, others being purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann, Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville, Mr. and Mrs. John Mead Howells, James A. Blair Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Thieriot, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vance Storrs, Mr. and Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. McClure, Mr. and Mrs. James N. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Rait Richardson and Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Pope.

Some of those who had tables, which were placed on both sides of the ballroom, were Miss Caroline King Duer, Mrs. Munroe Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Grant White, Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart Walker, Mr. and Mrs. H. Coleman Drayton, Mr. and Mrs. Elting Warner, Mr. and Mrs. J. Munroe Hewlett, Robert W. ABANDON 7-MONTHS-OLD BOY

Parents Leave Note Asking for Care for Child—"Jim Mystery" Still Unclaimed.

A young couple abandoned a seven-month-old boy in a rooming house at 552 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday. Mrs. Charlotte Deuzack, the landlady, told detectives of the Grand Avenue station that the couple, who were well dressed, hired a room on Tuesday and borrowed some dishes from her. When she saw them leave with a bag yesterday she went up to the room to get the dishes and found the baby playing with a rattle on the bed with a note pinned on his expensive silk cap. The note said:

"His name is Timothy O'Neill. Give him good care. May God bless you. He knows all."

She turned the child over to the police who sent it to the Kings County Hospital. The landlady gave a description of the missing couple and an alarm was sent out for them. She said that they gave their name as Signa when they rented the room.

The ten-day-old boy found in a satchel Tuesday night on the steps of the home of John Meyer, concert singer, at 602 Sanford Avenue, Brooklyn, is still unclaimed in the Cumberland Street Hospital. "Jim Mystery," as the child is known, did not seem very much concerned by the failure to find his parents or establish his identity, for he wept and ate in a normal fashion and gained two ounces over Wednesday night.

GOULD HEARINGS ARE NEARING END

Testimony in $82,000,000 Estate Accounting Will Be Completed on Monday.

COST IS $10,000 A DAY

Matter of Distributing George's Property Will Be Taken Up Early in March.

The taking of testimony before Referee James A. O'Gorman in the accounting suit in the $82,000,000 estate of Jay Gould, said to cost $10,000 a day and to be the most expensive litigation ever known, will end next Monday, unless it should be decided to take testimony from Frank and Howard Gould, either here or abroad.

This announcement was made yesterday by the referee at the office of Taylor, Knowles & Hack, 165 Broadway, where the hearings are being held. The suit was instituted in July, 1916, and the taking of depositions from George Jay Gould and his brother Edwin began the following year. The lawyers were still seeking information from George when he died, May 16, 1923.

The accounts of the estate of George Gould, who inherited one-sixth of his father's fortune, were filed yesterday by William Wallace Jr. of his counsel and the Equitable Trust Company. The accounts have been brought up to Jan. 27 last, it was announced, and Referee O'Gorman directed that if there were objections to the accounts they be filed Feb. 16.

Argument on a motion of C. A. Roberts of Henderson & Cravath, counsel for Lady Vivian Decies and Mrs. Marjorie Drexel to distribute the estate of her father, George Gould, will be heard by Referee O'Gorman March 6.

In the interim, possibly today, Samuel M. Seabury, former Supreme Court Justice and counsel for Frank Gould, will ask Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy for a supplemental order which will permit bringing into the discussion of the distribution of George Gould's estate the question of the validity of the original marriage clause in Jay Gould's will.

Under this provision, Jay Gould stipulated that if any of the six heirs married without the consent of a majority of the trustees under his will, a portion of the share of such heir in the estate should be forfeited. A portion of the share of Frank Gould is at present in escrow because of a question as to whether he had such consent before his marriage.

The question also has been raised as to whether George Gould had the consent of a majority of the trustees to his marriage to his second wife, Guinivere Sinclair. A third part of the argument on March 6 will be devoted to the question of what share, if any, the three children by this second marriage should receive from George Gould's estate.

The hearing will be resumed at 10:30 A. M. next Monday.

TAXI DRIVER ADMITS THAT HE SHOT KENNY

HAS AUTO THEFT RECORD

Police Say He Told Them That He Fired Pistol at Youth Because He "Got Mad."

RAN CAB WITHOUT LICENSE

Police Are Praised for Capturing Him With Only a Slender Clue to Work Upon.

After a week of persistent search, following a very slender clue, detectives early yesterday morning arrested John Leventine, a taxicab driver, and charged him with shooting Dennis Kenny, son of William F. Kenny of 820 Fifth Avenue, after a dispute over fare in front of 397 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, a week ago yesterday. The prisoner, the police said, confessed that he shot Kenny in a fit of anger because he did not think he had been paid enough for making the trip from Greenwich Village to Brooklyn.

The prisoner was held by Magistrate Reynolds in the Gates Avenue Court without bail on a charge of felonious assault for examination on Monday. While waiting to be called before the court the prisoner, a short, slender youth of 24 years, sat on a bench with downcast eyes. The charge against him was made by Detectives Thomas J. Cavanaugh and Henry Holland of the Ralph Avenue Station. The other arresting detectives were Sergeant Joseph Gilkinson and Sergeant Thomas McDonough of the Mercer Street station.

Leventine had but little to say in court. He gave his age and said that he lived at 500 West 123d Street. He said that he was married but separated from his wife. He admitted to the detectives that although he had driven his taxicab for more than a year he had no license. He did not apply for a permit, the police said, because he had a record in prison for stealing automobiles.

Re-enact the Shooting.

The dramatic incident of the day was the re-enactment of the shooting at the scene. The roles were taken by the prisoner and Miss Annabelle Flower of 397 McDonough Street, who was the companion of young Kenny at a dance and who witnessed the shooting. A large crowd was drawn to the scene while the official photographs were taken. A stenographer from the District Attorney's office personated Kenny.

Gossip among taxicab drivers, picked up by Detectives Cavanaugh and Holland, who have been conducting all-night searches for the assailant at taxicab stands and parking spaces all over the city, proved the clew that led to the arrest. Starting outside the Club Espinard, at Third and Tompkins Streets, the point where Kenny engaged the taxi, the hunt was broadened until more than a dozen detectives were covering Manhattan. In the vicinity of Brooklyn Bridge the detectives heard several men discussing the appearance of a new car at the stand at the Municipal Building.

This man, they said, used to "hack" on the east side and there was some speculation as to why he had changed his cruising grounds. Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning the detectives of the newcomer on the stand was noted at the curb near the Bridge end of the Municipal Building. Detective Gilkinson inquired of one of the drivers who owned the cab and Leventine was pointed out to him. He answered Miss Flower's description.

Detectives Are Congratulated.

When the prisoner was brought to Police Headquarters the detectives were congratulated by Inspector John D. Coughlan. He said that they had done an exceptional piece of work in tracing him from a meagre description through all the taxi drivers in Manhattan.

Leventine confessed, the detectives said, that he had shot Kenny because he "got mad." He had lost his way in Brooklyn, he said, and spent much time in looking for the McDonough Street address. When Kenny offered him a $5 bill and asked for $1 change, according to the agreement for a flat rate, Leventine said to him "Don't you think it was worth more than $1?"

Kenny, the driver said, replied that he had not contracted to be driven all over Brooklyn and insisted on his change. Words followed, but what made Leventine especially angry was that Kenny said he had intended to give him the change as a tip, but would not do so because of his conduct. The chauffeur said he drove a short way down the street and turned around. As he drove back he shouted an epithet at Kenny. The latter replied and advanced toward his taxi. Thereupon Leventine, according to his story to the detectives, drew a revolver and fired three shots, two of which took effect. Then he drove away and took his machine to a garage in Forty-fifth Street and put it away for the night.

Leventine was arrested under the name of Joseph Bruno on a charge of stealing an automobile in October, 1917, and for this offense received a suspended sentence. As John Leventine he was arrested for automobile stealing a month after he received a suspension of sentence and this time Judge Nott sent him to the Elmira Reformatory. He got into trouble with the Federal authorities following the burglary of a bonded warehouse in Greenwich Street, but was discharged. In November, 1919, Lenventine was again arrested for grand larceny.

Police Commissioner Enright praising the detectives for good work in arresting the assailant of Dennis J. Kenny, used the incident as an argument why the police should have supervision of taxicab chauffeurs.

"This is just an instance," he said, "of the serious condition that the police have got to combat. Take the case of this prisoner, an ex-convict. By paying the owner of a taxicab $5.50 a day he gets a taxicab with which to cruise the streets of this city. He had no license but a big revolver in his pocket. The Police Department, as I have said before, should have full supervision over all taxicab drivers in this city.

"The police could then investigate the records, and a man with a reputation similar to that of the prisoner, an ex-convict, would not be permitted to operate a taxicab or an automobile here. I am of the opinion that it was the same kind of chauffeur who shot and killed Patrolman Charles J. Reynolds and Patrolman Frank Romanello, at Sixty-fourth Street and Second Avenue on the evening of July 26, 1923. The chauffeur of that murder car, I believe, got his taxicab in the same way that the prisoner arrested today got his."

World Climate Doesn't Change, Weather Man Tells Rotarians

The world's climate has remained the same for thousands of years and will not change perceptibly for ages to come, said James H. Scarr, official forecaster of the United States Weather Bureau in New York at a luncheon of the Rotary Club yesterday in the Hotel McAlpin. "The climate may vary," he stated, "by just as much as the speed of the earth's revolutions around the sun and on its own axis may vary. But the redwood trees in the West, one of them 4,000 years old, prove that since the dawn of history there has been no perceptible change in climatic conditions.

"There is nothing in the economy of nature more inevitable than the weather, which has been predestined from the beginning of time. Get into step with the weather, and if the weather doesn't suit your plans, change your plans."

WORKED HARD FOR MOTHER

Friends Thought Him Happy and Expected Him to Wed Girl He Courted Five Years.

David Attinson was 22 years old and for a long time had been preparing himself to live. He wanted intensely, it seemed, to enjoy life and to make life enjoyable for others. Yet he died yesterday by his own hand. He was found in the bathroom of his home at 31 First Street with a gas tube in his mouth.

David had fought hard to live. His father died when he was a baby. He had taken care of himself and helped his widowed mother, Minnie, and his sister Rose since he had been a small boy. He had delivered papers and magazines early in the morning when other folks were asleep and then gone to school. He was an honor pupil at DeWitt Clinton High School. He won the Regents' Scholarship in 1919. He was graduated from City College in 1923 with an A. B. degree and more honors.

History was his specialty at college. It was his ambition to return to DeWitt Clinton as a teacher in that department.

Yet that was not his sole ambition. He had attended the normal department of the Jewish Theological Seminary even while he was attending City College to prepare himself also to teach Hebrew to the young Jewish boys of his neighborhood. He was a cantor in the synagogues of the east side. Sometimes he was invited to chant in the synagogues uptown, and he added the cultivation of voice to his other work, attending the Music School Settlement in Third Street so that he might become an even better cantor.

Courted Girl Five Years.

Then when David was graduated from college he got a position teaching in Public School 20 at Forsythe and Rivington Streets. Almost simultaneously he got a certificate from the seminary and he began teaching Hebrew at night to the small boys of the neighborhood. He sang in the synagogues on Friday evening, Saturday morning and on holidays. In the evening when he was not teaching or at the synagogue he went to the music school.

Occasionally David found time to go out with a girl, the same girl with whom he had been going out for five years. People in the neighborhood said they were to be married. And often, for David's time was limited and he wanted so much to do all the things he liked to do, he would invite his best friend, a boy with whom he had been reared since babyhood, to accompany him and the girl so he could see them both.

These were full days and nights for David, but he did more. Every evening when he came home he washed the dishes for his mother, for she was an invalid and her second husband—she had been married to E. Bosches—was an invalid, too. Then, in spite of his mother's protests, he would scrub the kitchen floor.

"It is all right for a college graduate to scrub floors," he would reply to her, "if it is to save his sick mother work."

Friends Thought Him Happy.

Everybody who knew him said he was happy. He had so much—all the work and study that he liked, his plans as soon as he made more money to move his mother from the tenement on First Street to an apartment uptown, his prospects as a teacher of history, and—the girl he had been going with for five years.

He made more money, but his mother refused to move from First Street. She had lived there so long; and David, with an A. B. degree, continued to wash dishes and scrub floors.

Then the mother was taken to the Post-Graduate Hospital, and Monday, when she was sent home, bent with rheumatism, David's step-father was stricken and had to be taken to Flower Hospital for an operation.

The same day he got his assignment as a high school teacher. He had been expecting history at DeWitt Clinton. He was certain he would get it, he had asked for it, and he had worked so hard to qualify for it. He opened the envelope. The notice directed him to report at Textile High to teach German.

But David remained cheerful. He came into Henry Polonsky's pharmacy at 20 Second Avenue to get something to stop nose-bleed. Life could be a lot worse, he told Polonsky, and then he went into a telephone booth, as he often did, Polonsky thought, to call up the girl.

He came out silently and walked from the shop.

David's mother awoke his sister yesterday morning to say David was not in his bed. Rose broke the bathroom door window with an umbrella and David was in the tub, the gas tube in his mouth, dead.

Twelve hours later, in accordance with the orthodox Jewish law which forbids embalming, David's body was buried in Montefiore Cemetery.

David's mother and sister did not come home, but stayed with friends. However, Joseph Fishbein, who lives on the third floor and who read the burial service for David at the cemetery, came home shortly after dark.

"Everything would have been all right," he said, "if the girl had not gone away with the friend."

HELD IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Charge of Homicide Made on False Report of Victim's Death.

Israel Tanenbaum, 34 years old, a motor truck driver, of 425 East 166th Street, was held in $5,000 bail yesterday for examination on Feb. 10 on a homicide charge, although it later developed that the man whom Tanenbaum was accused of having killed with his vehicle was alive in Bellevue Hospital. Tanenbaum's truck knocked down Leonard Pepe, 43 years old, of 316 East Eleventh Street, when Pepe was crossing Third Avenue at Fifteenth Street.

COUZENS UNCOVERS DRY LAW FRICTION

DUPLICATION IS ALLEGED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Relations between the prohibition unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau and the Department of Justice were discussed at hearings before the Couzens special committee made public today.

During testimony by James J. Britt, counselor to the unit, on the question of alleged duplication of activities, Senator Couzens brought out the fact that there had been friction.

Mr. Britt submitted data showing that 127 indictments from the wine and beer section had been prepared and submitted to the Department of Justice or United States Attorneys during the period since Aug. 1, 1921. This information was compiled by Mrs. A. D. Stallings, chief of that section. In addition 243 criminal informations were delivered. Out of these had come 188 criminal prosecutions.

This report showed also that when prohibition started 1,141 breweries were in operation, of which 150 were dismantled immediately or converted into other industries. From December, 1920, to June, 1921, 157 breweries were reported for violations and but two convictions obtained.

Now 147 cases await presentation to Grand Juries and total fines of $320,250, with aggregate jail sentences of thirteen years, have been imposed.

Additional information was to the following effect: 150 search warrants prepared; 140 breweries seized, 117 libels for forfeiture prepared; 93 libels filed by District Attorneys, 10 libels not filed, 12 merged with injunctional proceedings; 202 bills for injunction prepared and submitted to Department of Justice officials, 47 temporary injunctions obtained, 29 permanent injunctions obtained, 12 breweries padlocked by injunctional order, approximately 50 injunctions tendered were not filed because Department of Justice officials differed as to the strength of the case, 64 injunctions now pending for hearing.

"There has been considerable friction, has there not, between the officials of the Department of Justice who are charged with the responsibility for prohibition enforcement and the officers in the prohibition unit?" Senator Cousens asked.

"Well, to put it mildly," Mr. Britt replied, "there have been some very serious differences of opinion."

Senator Couzens later said that the situation indicated a good deal of duplication of effort and work and that there should be unification so one would not pull against the other. The inquiry was turned into the matter of settling penalty assessments, which was a subject discussed by the committee some weeks ago.

Mr. Britt testified that in 1924 the assessments aggregated $16,909,855.21, of which only $2,632,337.90 had been made by collectors. This sum was compromised at $704,696.38. Mr. Britt declared the method on which settlement was based was sound.

Senator Couzens recalled that the settlements were behind closed doors. Mr. Britt again defended what was done.

"I think, Mr. Britt, you are dodging the issue," Senator Couzens said. "I have not suggested at any time that the practice there is different from that of any other department; neither have I impugned the motives back of these settlements at all; I still reiterate that the practice exists in the Bureau of Internal Revenue with respect to tax cases, that these matters are settled by mere negotiation across the table without public record or public hearing in connection with them.

"My only reason for bringing that up is because it is the judgment at least of the Chairman that some tribunal ought to be set up for the settlement of these enormous cases rather than that they be settled by administrative officers who have no responsibility to the public, no responsibility except to their own executive officers."

"In the great bulk of cases," Mr. Britt said in defense, "the proof, while morally strong, is legally very weak, though we know there has been a violation."

Senator Couzens said he was not criticizing the conduct of the bureau but the action of Congress in not providing a better method.

James E. Jones, Assistant Prohibition Commissioner, defended the distribution of agents over the country, a matter that had been criticized previously. The committee discussed in detail the issuance of permits to breweries.

45 DOCTORS FACE LOSS OF MISSOURI LICENSES

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 5.—The Missouri State Board of Health today issued citations to Dr. Waldo Briggs, Dean of the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, and forty-four other physicians in Missouri and elsewhere to appear before the board March 9 to show cause why their licenses to practice medicine should not be revoked.

Dr. E. P. North, President, said that the board had just completed an investigation of the professional records of the physicians cited and had decided to place them on trial before the board. The board also has asked a St. Louis Grand Jury to investigate charges of fraud in obtaining medical diplomas and licenses.

"Missouri is now taking final and decisive action in the long fight against the operations of the nation-wide diploma mill ring," said Dr. North. "With the issuance of forty-five citations today Dr. James Stewart, the new board Secretary, started work on a new list of names, and additional citations will be issued within a few days."

Among those cited in the official list are Dr. F. de la Madrid, City Health Commissioner of Havana, Cuba, and Dr. Joseph Solomon Ergas of the Panama Canal Zone.

Today's citations centred mainly on graduates of Dr. Briggs's college, founded in 1869, which has been under fire of the State and American Medical Associations for years. Thirty-two of the doctors cited are graduates of Dr. Briggs's school. Nine others are graduates of the Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery or the Kansas City University of Physicians and Surgeons.

Immigrant Boy Who Toiled for $2.50 a Week Becomes Officer of an Old New York Bank

Shortly after the big blizzard in March, 1888, a 12-year-old immigrant boy, Max Rubin by name, landed at Castle Garden from Germany. A few days after his arrival he found employment in a cap factory in Elizabeth Street at $2.50 a week. He remained with this firm a year, and then left because they would not raise his pay 50 cents a week.

Yesterday this same Max Rubin, thirty-seven years after, was greeted as the Vice President of the National Butchers and Drovers' Bank, at Thirty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue. Many large floral pieces were banked around his desk, the tribute of former associates in the garment industry. Several of his friends who visited him handed him deposits amounting to more than $2,000,000 as a mark of their esteem.

Mr. Rubin told yesterday something of his ambitions as an immigrant. "When I asked for a 50-cent raise in my wages from the Elizabeth Street factory," he said, "25 cents more a week was offered me. So I quit and got a job with a competitor at $3 a week. I felt then that I had arrived. Meantime I was attending one of the neighborhood night schools."

Mr. Rubin helped to build the firm of Rubin Brothers, of which he was elected a life member recently on his retirement from the garment industry. He is a charter member of the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association, formed in 1910.

The National Butchers and Drovers' Bank was established in 1830 at Broome Street and the Bowery, where the drovers came in with their cattle. It was the clearing point for the financial transactions of the wholesale meat industry and for the tanning and leather trades. Richard J. Faust Jr. is President of the bank.

SUPER-PAROLE BODY IS ANDERSON'S IDEA

WRITES TO LEGISLATORS

Volunteers to Give His Views to Senate and Assembly If Assured of Publicity.

William H. Anderson, former State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, who after his release from Sing Sing last December volunteered to make disclosures about the parole law if assured that his own parole would not be canceled, in an open letter to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly offered yesterday to present his views to the Legislature in the hope that the parole law might be changed.

In proffering his services, Mr. Anderson says he does so on the advice of counsel that he has "a right to discuss in any proper way the operation of any law, or any weakness of the judicial system of the State, if I speak in general terms and saying nothing false or libelous."

While Mr. Anderson does not go into details his letter clearly indicates that he does not believe the courts should sentence prisoners but that a board of pardon and parole should determine when convicts are fit for release. If we are not prepared for enlightened reform we should be consistent, he says, and "go back to the whipping post, the pillory, the underground dungeon with shackles and other forms of brutality."

Mr. Anderson's letter indicates that he favors a full-time, non-political, adequately paid parole board and he says there are "strong reasons" why such a board "should be free to disregard both judges and prosecutors." He would not even have it hampered by a minimum sentence.

"I am ready," he writes, "to go before the proper committee of either or both of your bodies with reasons, based on actual observation instead of mere theorizing, why the sentencing in court rooms of men convicted of crime is at best an anachronism, working an injustice to many men and often a gross injustice to society, and why this is peculiarly true in large cities. Some of the reasons will surprise the public. Some facts will be a shock."

Then under a sub-division which is headed "Judges Should 'Do Time' to Develop Comprehension," Mr. Anderson says a Supreme Court Justice whose name he does not give had told him in Sing Sing that he favored the suggestion that men should have the power to commit others to State's prison who has not himself served six months "to insure comprehension and stimulate human sympathy." He remarks, however, "that this, of course is not feasible."

"I am offering the fruits of observation," the letter says, "first to the legislative bodies over which you respectively preside in the hope that they may change the law as to make it possible to remedy conditions. What I have learned fully justifies the proposed inquiry into penal and parole laws, and may be of value to those conducting it. If my information should not be desired I will then be free to give it to the public in my own way and at my own time. I shall decline to make any confidential statement which can be suppressed. For obvious and sufficient reasons I need and insist upon the protection of publicity. If any further attempt is made to penalize me for the exercise of free speech for the public good, it is my intent that the public shall see that fact and understand why.

"I have other things to contribute to the discussion that have not, so far as I have seen, been suggested by any of the others who have discussed this question. Whatever the original theory, this operation of the indeterminate sentence law perpetrates a tragic farce in ways not yet mentioned. And the so-called first offender gets the worst of it in ways not yet touched upon that put a premium upon crime as a profession."

At his home in Yonkers last night, Mr. Anderson declined to give the name of the Supreme Court Justice referred to in his statement.

"I do not feel at liberty to do so," he said. "I had no expectation then of discussing this matter and the Judge did not expect it, either. Without his permission, unless ordered by a legislative committee, I feel I am not at liberty to give his name."

OREGON DAM BREAK CAUSES $250,000 LOSS

Flood Carries Away Herds of Sheep and Cattle in Malheur River Valley.

VALE, Ore., Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Loss estimated at about $250,000 was caused by a flood at Vale and surrounding country in the Malheur River Valley and along Bully Creek early today. No loss of life was reported, though there were some narrow escapes.

About three hours after the Bully Creek irrigation dam, nineteen miles west of Vale, gave way with about 10,000 acre feet of water impounded, it was estimated that nearly 3,000 sheep, 500 head of cattle, a number of horses and dogs were drowned. Several small dairy herds were wiped out entirely and more than twenty miles of fence was washed away.

The water came down Bully Creek until it ran into Malheur River, at the junction six miles west of Vale. Here the rush of water spread out across the valley, taking everything before it.

One band of sheep containing 1,200 head was caught on the feed ground within two miles of Vale and drowned. Carcasses of cattle, horses, sheep and dogs are strewn along the State highway from here to the head of the valley. Marks of the high water show that it was over the road to a depth of five feet in places.

The Oregon Short Line's Vale-Burns branch was out by the washing out of a bridge.

HITS LIQUOR TREATY IN FRENCH CHAMBER

RATIFICATION MAY FAIL

PARIS, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—The liquor treaty between the United States and France, which is along the lines of that between the United States and Great Britain to prevent rum running, signed in Washington June 30 of last year, is meeting with vigorous opposition in the Merchant Marine and Foreign Affairs Committees of the Chamber of Deputies. Ratification of the treaty is believed likely to be held up for some time by Deputy Valude of the Merchant Marine Committee, who was designated to report the bill out.

"On examination of the text of the convention," said M. Valude today, "it is easily seen that the whole question of international maritime rights is under review."

A report on the treaty was expected some time ago, but the text was sent "for study" to the Foreign Affairs Committee, with the notation, "under reservation for advice of the Merchant Marine Committee."

This latter body appointed M. Valude to investigate the treaty, and in his report he says:

"The United States seems to wish completely to change the problem of territorial waters. It demands a veritable right of visit aboard all ships destined to its ports, and that is a grave infringement on existing principles."

While recalling the fact that the United States has signed similar conventions with other powers, M. Valude asks:

"Shall France once again be the guardian of principles? France, a great producing nation of wines and spirits, cannot, without serious examination, treat with questions touching that production. She cannot, moreover, admit of any kind of general suspicion of contraband concerning ships flying her flag."

M. Valude finds that the American limitation of territorial waters at one hour's steaming distance from shore "is a makeshift method which may lead to many misunderstandings."

"Furthermore," the report of M. Valude says, "in practice, this extension of territoriality the United States pretends to desire to install by saying that ships in contact with buildings ashore are within territorial waters, cannot be approved unreservedly." This reference of M. Valude is in regard to ships alongside docks.

M. Valude is in consultation daily with committee colleagues, who are urging Parliament's "serious examination" of the treaty and insisting that the committee cannot approve it without "serious discussion."

As the Government on such subjects usually follows committee recommendations, it is foreseen in Chamber of Deputies circles that if the committee makes an unfavorable report on the treaty the chance of France ratifying the maritime contraband convention is likely to be a slim one.

NEVADA SENATE WANTS DRY LAW MODIFIED

CARSON, Nev., Feb. 5.—A resolution asking Congress to call a constitutional convention to consider a modification of the prohibition amendment was adopted unanimously by the Nevada State Senate today.

The resolution was drawn by Frank H. Norcross, former Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court, who believes the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution should be substituted by a provision empowering Congress to prohibit or regulate the importation, manufacture and sale of liquor, thereby placing the question in the hands of the national Legislature.

MRS. SCHLEMMER SUES; DENIES SHE'S DIVORCED

William F. Schlemmer, head of the hardware firm of Hammacher, Schlemmer & Co., was sued in the Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Mary A. Schlemmer for a divorce. The suit follows the recent announcement that Mr. Schlemmer had divorced his wife in Mexico and had married there Mrs. Elsie O. Wilkinson, who had previously been charged by Mrs. Schlemmer with alienating her husband's affections.

The complaint sets forth that the Schlemmers were married on Aug. 29, 1914, and that while the plaintiff was still the wife of the defendant he contracted a bigamous marriage with Elsie O. Wilkinson and "for a number of months past has been living in unlawful wedlock with Elsie O. Wilkinson." Mrs. Schlemmer also alleges that in November, 1923, she got a separation, with $8,500 a year alimony, and that the defendant was directed also to pay her back alimony of $5,250, which has been paid in monthly instalments of $218.75, of which nine are still due. Mrs. Schlemmer alleges that she has no income except $2,200 a year from securities, while her husband is worth more than $1,000,000 and has an income of more than $100,000. She asks that suitable alimony be awarded to her.

Organize to Raise Enright's Pay.

The Advertising Club's Committee of Nine, named recently to consider means of getting Police Commissioner Enright's salary raised, organized at the club yesterday. Chairman Frank Harwood, advertising manager of the American Tobacco Company, announced that no action had been taken and that another meeting would be held Monday.

TRANSIT FINDINGS FINISHED BY M'AVOY

NO ACTION AT ALBANY

Justice John V. McAvoy, appointed by Governor Smith a Moreland act commissioner to investigate the transit situation in New York City, is expected to deliver the report to the Governor by Monday.

It was learned yesterday that Justice McAvoy has practically finished the report and will go over it today for possible last hour changes with his counsel, Henry L. Sherman. Justice McAvoy, it was said, will not make the report public, but will leave that to the Governor, who is expected to arrive here tonight or tomorrow and to make it public before his return to Albany.

Little authentic information as to what the report will contain could be obtained, although there was a great deal of speculation concerning it. The best guess of those who have followed the inquiry continued to be that the report would recommend the dismissal of the charges against the Transit Commissioners and possibly legislation to abolish the Transit Commission on the ground that authority over transit matters should not be divided between a State Commission and the city.

Local Republicans, who said they were without knowledge as to what the report would contain, insisted that there was no chance that the Legislature, with a substantial Republican majority in each house, would pass a bill to abolish the commission. It also was said to be unlikely that the Legislature would adopt a resolution to submit Controller Craig's proposed constitutional amendment to exempt $275,000,000 in rapid transit bonds from the city's debt limit. It was said to be the Republican view that the additional borrowing power sought for the city by this amendment was wanted for the recapture of existing subways, now operated by the Interborough and B. M. T., rather than for the construction of new subways.

There was speculation as to whether Justice McAvoy's report would criticize Mayor Hylan for alleged delay in approval of subway construction contracts and failure to supply shops as quickly as should have been done, or whether Justice McAvoy would confine his criticism on these matters, if any, to the Board of Estimate. Lack of shops was alleged as a reason for the inability of the companies to improve their service during the investigation hearings.

Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson in commenting upon the report that Justice McAvoy might consider the city's method of operating its so-called emergency bus system in his report, said that Louis Marshall, who obtained and served an injunction to restrain the operation of the municipally supervised buses, had acquiesced in the continuance of their operation until the city had obtained the right to operate them.

In a statement, Mr. Nicholson said:

"I am rather surprised that Mr. Marshall should, in a statement, have attributed to him in the day's newspapers, in regard to the injunction in the case of Schafer vs. the City of New York. It is no secret that the Court of Appeals denied the application to appeal to that court, and it is a matter of common knowledge that the buses are still running and serving well a great public need for transportation. That the buses are not stopped by the decision cited by Mr. Marshall of the judgment in Schafer's case, is due to his acquiescence in their operation, until the city itself shall obtain the right to operate. That the administration has been vigorously endeavoring to do, and the Municipal Assembly has passed four local laws designed to grant that power. The first move the city made under the new laws was met by two injunction orders, one obtained by a persistent taxpayer plaintiff and the other by Mr. Marshall. Eminent counsel have been retained to oppose these actions and to secure from the courts a decision defining the municipal authority under the new local laws. Until the courts have passed upon the question now before them it seems to me that the matter of an unfavorable report on the treaty the chance of France ratifying the maritime contraband convention is likely to be a slim one.

MAYORS FAVOR BUS BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—The Legislative Committee of the State Conference of Mayors, at a meeting held here this afternoon, went on record as favoring the "purpose and principle" of the Walker-Bloch Municipal Bus bills which, introduced at the request of the Hylan Administration, would give to New York and other cities the right to own, operate or lease municipal bus lines.

The five-cent-fare provision did not meet with the approval of the entire committee. Some smaller cities would not be able to operate on a five-cent fare, members said.

The committee opposed a bill which would make the officials of any city individually liable for damages caused by buses which were being operated without a certificate from the Public Service Commission. This measure is said to be aimed at the Hylan buses in New York, which are being run without the consent of the Transit Commission or the Public Service Commission.

HIRSHFIELD SUBPOENAS FAIL

Investigation of Fire Prevention Concerns Postponed Indefinitely.

Because of the refusal of important witnesses from the Croker National Fire Prevention Engineering Company, 22 West Thirtieth Street, to appear for a hearing on the activities of this and other fire prevention concerns, the proceedings had to be postponed indefinitely yesterday by David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts.

Mr. Hirshfield declared that he would continue to serve subpoenas upon the desired witnesses until he succeeds in compelling their attendance. "Unless they appear," he said, "I will have to assume that the accusations against some of these corporations are well founded and it will become my duty to inform the public in order to protect it against possible impositions."

Fire Commissioner Drennan yesterday issued an order that firemen who are detailed as building inspectors shall notify owners and occupants of buildings that no person connected with the Fire Department is authorized or permitted to sell tickets or to solicit orders for fire prevention or fire fighting equipment. Commissioner Hirshfield said he believed this order to be a direct result of his investigation.

To Discuss Westchester Transit.

John G. Agar and Henry M. Brinckerhoff will discuss plans for the improvement of the transit facilities of Westchester County at a luncheon of the Westchester County Chamber of Commerce at the Commodore next Monday. One of the principal points to be discussed will be the plan to provide a through express service from different points in Westchester County to downtown Manhattan, eliminating congestion at the Grand Central Terminal. Members of the Transit Commission have been invited.

Faithful Dog Looks in Vain For His Runaway Boy Master

A Belgian police dog has been the most persistent searcher for Joseph Pagano, a 15-year-old junior high school boy, who has been missing from his home at 406 Fifth Street since Jan. 26. The dog was the boy's pet. Its name is Regina IV. and nearly every day it may be seen running up and down First and Second Avenues looking into the faces of passers-by.

Three times since Joseph went away the dog has disappeared for a day at a time, apparently seeking its young master. The boy's father, Placid Pagano, told the detectives of the Bureau of Missing Persons he believed that if Joseph read in the newspapers that his dog was so eagerly searching for him he would return home.

The boy's mother had been ill in the hospital and the father had explained the son's absence by telling her that he was visiting relatives. When a truant officer called at the house to find out why Joseph had not been at school, she first learned the truth and collapsed. The father has offered a reward of $50 for information about his son.

HEDLEY OPPOSES BIG SUBWAY CREWS

TRAINS CLOSELY WATCHED

Inspected by Three Hundred Experts Unseen by Passengers Aboard.

Passage of the bill introduced by Assemblyman Bungard of Coney Island, requiring the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to increase its train crews, would not add to the safety of travel but would defer the time when the subways operated by the Interborough may be able to pay interest on the city's investment with them, Frank Hedley, President of the company, declared yesterday.

"Few persons realize the large number of trained employes continually observing every train during its travels through the subway," Mr. Hedley said. "Quite outside from the small but experienced crew on the train itself, the only men whom the passengers see, many other railroad men in the line of their duty supervise each train at various points along its trip. No disturbance or breakdown, either electrical or mechanical, can occur for any appreciable distance or length of time without some one seeing or reporting it.

"Each train is watched by tower men and dispatchers, by train clerks, car inspectors, signal maintainers and track walkers. In fact, all employes of the company working within the tunnels, on the elevated structures or in the stations are charged with the duty of observing trains and reporting any defect which may cause trouble. During the run of a train from Van Cortlandt Park to New Lots Avenue in Brooklyn it passes under the observation of some 300 or more competent men, many of them highly trained specialists. It will be seen, therefore, that the crew actually on the train constitutes a relatively small part of the safeguard provided for the subway traveler.

"The presence on a train of a larger operating crew than a motorman and conductor and ten-car trains of an additional guard has never been necessary as a measure of safety. The additional guards were originally required to operate the doors, which was done by hand. With the introduction of the electro-pneumatic doors, which are actually five times as safe as the old type, the need for this large train crew has ceased to exist.

"Of course, this change will eventually mean a reduction in operating costs, in which the people of New York have a very real interest. It is to our interest to give the public the safest and the best rapid transit possible with the facilities which have been provided for us to operate. It is to the public's interest to see that the system they own and which this company operates is not handicapped by unnecessary legislation. For, after all, if the I. R. T. is unable to earn enough to pay interest on the city's investment in these subways, the taxpayers and the rent payers must make up the deficit."

BARNES SELLS PAPER TO POLITICAL RIVAL

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—The sale to The Evening News of The Evening Journal, founded in 1830 by Thurlow Weed and published by William Barnes, his grandson, for many years Republican leader of Albany County and one of the outstanding figures in the Republican Party in State and nation, will be announced tomorrow, according to reports current here.

The Evening News, launched in October, 1922, is controlled by Stephen Clark of Cooperstown, a son of Corning Clark, who amassed a fortune in the manufacture of the Singer sewing machine. The same interests control The Knickerbocker Press, a morning paper, which some years ago acquired and discontinued publication of The Argus, for generations the most influential Democratic newspaper in the State.

It is understood that The Evening Journal will cease publication after the papers transferring its Associated Press franchise and its good-will to The Evening News have been signed.

The Evening Journal printing plant and its modern building, part of the Gothic structure of the Delaware & Hudson Company at the foot of State Street, will not, it is reported, be included in the deal. No information could be obtained with regard to the purchase price.

If the negotiations, which have been in progress for some time, go through, the city will have only two evening papers, one of which will be The Evening News, Republican, and the other The Times Union, Democratic, acquired by William R. Hearst from former Governor Martin H. Glynn, who died last year.

With the disposal of The Evening Journal, William Barnes will have severed his last tie with county politics, with which he has been identified since he was graduated from Harvard, for most of that time as leader of the county.

May Build Hotels in Florida.

David H. Knott, former Sheriff of New York County and head of the Knott Hotel System, and Charles E. Gehring, Vice President of the Atlantic City Ritz-Carlton Hotel and President of the Gehring Publishing Company, sailed Wednesday for Miami on the George Washington, to investigate resort hotel conditions in Florida, where several projects are under way.

ASKS THE ABOLITION OF FAIR COMMISSION

State Estimate Board Urges Giving Powers to Farms and Markets Bureau.

REPUBLICANS FAVOR STEP

MOVE FOR CONSOLIDATION

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—Abolition of the State Fair Commission and transfer of its functions to the Department of Farms and Markets were recommended in a resolution adopted by the Board of Estimate and Control at a meeting held this afternoon at the office of Governor Smith.

The Governor is the only Democratic member of the board at present, but the resolution had the support of Republican members as well as his, so that there is every reason to believe that legislation to be introduced at an early date to carry out the recommendation will be adopted by the Legislature. The change can readily be effected by an amendment to the statutes.

The action of the Board of Estimate and Control was due to disclosures made in a report to Governor Smith by Joseph H. Wilson, Director of the Budget, following his investigation of the finances of the Fair Commission.

Lieut. Gov. Lowman, who first charged the commission with irregularity in its financial methods, and the Republican leaders here are taking credit for the steps which have led to the proposal of the Board of Estimate and Control. The Governor was hesitant about making recommendations himself on the ground that the Department of Farms and Markets for some reasons, although in every respect an administrative department, is not directly responsible to the Chief Executive.

The resolution adopted by the board was as follows:

"An investigation of the State Fair Commission ordered and conducted by the Board of Estimate and Control reveals that the law permits each member of the commission to make purchases and create obligations separately and to delegate to others the same power.

"The looseness of the law has resulted in the growth of a system which tends to extravagance and wastefulness. During the year 1924 the Legislature appropriated $224,598.23 for the conduct of the fair and the receipts were $224,828.02, all of which has been expended. In addition there are unpaid bills amounting to $30,418.88.

"The investigation reveals a condition which, in the opinion of the board, is wrong, but cannot be corrected except by statute.

"We therefore recommend to the Legislature that the present State Fair Commission be abolished and the management of the fair be transferred to the Department of Farms and Markets, and that legislation to that end be enacted."

Transfer of the management of the State Fair to the Department of Farms and Markets was rec

MAY ASK MISTRIAL IN STONEHAM CASE

NO RULING ON DISMISSAL

Court Announces That Consideration of Motion Requires More Time —Decision Expected Today.

Judge Frederick A. Winslow, who was expected to hand down a decision yesterday in the United States District Court on the motions to dismiss the indictments charging Charles A. Stoneham, Elmore D. Dier and four others with misuse of the mails, postponed his decision until this morning. He said he needed more time to consider the applications.

"I have been giving very careful consideration to the law and facts," he said. "As you know, the record is exceedingly voluminous and I am going over it carefully, so I will need more time. The question, as I have stated before, is solely as to whether or not a Federal statute has been violated."

Herbert C. Smyth, counsel for Stoneham, declared then that, in the event Judge Winslow ordered the continuation of the trial, he would be forced to ask that mistrial be declared. He pointed to clippings from the morning papers containing reports of Judge Winslow's remarks Wednesday, when the Court declared the evidence showed both the Stoneham and Dier firms "bucksted outrageously."

"No jury," said Mr. Smyth, "which had access to these papers could fairly decide the issues in this case."

Judge Winslow declared he could not consider the motion, terming it "collateral matter."

"I am not concerned with that at this time," he added. "I assume the newspapers have reported, as they have a right to do, what has happened in this court in public. The court will not set itself up as a censor of the newspapers. I am not a censor of public morals or public writings."

Victor House, Special Assistant District Attorney, who has been conducting the prosecution, presented additional briefs to the Court during the afternoon.

Counsel for the defendants, while hopeful the indictments would be dismissed, made preparations for continuing the defense, since Judge Winslow in adjourning court directed them to be prepared to go ahead with the trial in the event he decided against them.

The point at issue now is whether the evidence taken during the three weeks of the trial shows that there was misuse of the mails in sending letters to customers of the Stoneham firm concerning the transfer of the accounts of Stoneham's customers to E. D. Dier & Co., which failed Jan. 14, 1922, for $4,000,000.

If Judge Winslow decides that the Government has failed to make a case, his action is final and cannot be appealed. Neither can the defendants be reindicted.

District Attorney Banton of New York County commented yesterday on the statement of Judge Winslow that the Stoneham and Dier firms should have been "tried long ago in the State courts for bucketing."

"In the trial of the Dier case, Judge Winslow remarked yesterday, very properly, that the crime of bucketing is a State crime and not a Federal offense, and prosecution of that crime should proceed in the State courts. There are thirteen indictments against the Dier crowd charging various offenses, pending in this office. By mutual arrangement with United States District Attorney Hayward, right of way in the Dier case has been given to the Federal authorities.

"There have been no complaints made against the Stoneham crowd in this office. Unless some one has been defrauded and makes a complaint, the district attorney will never hear of the fraud."

STATE'S CHIEF WITNESS GONE.

Banton Reveals Reason for Not Proceeding With Dier Case.

The declaration of Judge Winslow in the Federal Court last Tuesday that brokers accused of bucketing the orders of customers more properly should be tried in the State criminal courts revealed yesterday that the "key" witness for District Attorney Banton in connection with the trial of some of the thirteen indictments returned by the Grand Jury against Elmore D. Dier and others on bucketing and grand larceny charges had been a fugitive for more than a year, although the Department of Justice and inspectors of the Post Office Department had been making vigorous efforts to locate him.

In a statement issued yesterday afternoon, Mr. Banton agreed with Judge Winslow's opinion, but said that the State authorities had given way to the Federal prosecuting forces in the Dier cases by agreement with United States District Attorney Hayward. Later, when Federal Prosecutor House, in charge of the Government's interests in the Dier-Stoneham cases, issued a statement regarding the fugitive, Mr. Banton admitted that most important cases against Dier had been held up because the person most needed to support the State's case was at present beyond his reach.

"The witness, whose name I shall not reveal, ran out of the jurisdiction of the State a little more than a year ago," Mr. Banton said. "It was because of this that Colonel Hayward and I agreed that the best thing to do was to have the Federal cases against Dier brought to trial as soon as possible.

"This is only another instance of what prosecutors have to contend with in coping with men who violate our laws through dishonest manipulation of brokerage firms. If the public only knew a little of what we have had to contend with in such cases, there no longer would be any question, but that the Legislature could adopt the laws which I have been advocating to give the State prosecutors more power to put an end to bucketing."

TRUANT IS A PUGILIST, MUST TRAIN, HE SAYS

"And why did you stay away from school, my boy?" asked Magistrate Cobb in Municipal Term Court yesterday when a fifteen-year-old offender was brought before him, among sixty-two truancy cases.

"Well, your Honor," the lad replied, "it was this way: I was hooked to fight in clubs in Boston and Springfield, and a fellow has got to do some training."

It turned out that the truant was telling the truth, much to the amazement of the Court. His name is Reuben Dinzes and he lives at 1,697 Park Avenue. He appears on the court record as 15 years old, but his sixteenth birthday comes today. When the Magistrate called his attention to his smashed nose and incipient cauliflower ears and suggested prizefighting was not a healthy occupation at his age, the boy said he would give it up for the present. The Court asked him what he would do.

"Well, I'll get a job as a longshoreman," he replied. "Harry Wills was a longshoreman and he built himself up, and I guess I can do the same."

The Magistrate suspended sentence on condition he attend continuation school.

Another surprise came in the case of John Barno, 16, of 401 East 114th Street. Truant Officer Dennis Kilgore reported he was a willful truant and that his mother had been warned before to keep him in school.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the Magistrate.

"Well, I'm the leader of a jazz orchestra of five pieces in a cabaret on Eighty-sixth Street, near Third Avenue, and I have to work late every night."

Magistrate Cobb found that the boy was the sole support of his mother and adjourned his case until Feb. 26, giving him time to make arrangements to go to a continuation school for the few months the law still requires him to attend.

Mrs. Dora Salzman of 126 Goerck Street, a widow, with five children, whose arrest under the truancy law had attracted some attention, was fined $5 as a fifth offender. She paid the fine herself, though several persons appeared in court after her arraignment saying they wished to help her, after reading her story. Truant officers who had investigated the case reported that her condition was not as difficult as it had been represented, and that she had a son who earned enough from a news stand to give considerable help to the family.

Of the sixty-two parents summoned from Manhattan, twenty were fined from $1 to $5.

FIND GARVEY ON TRAIN; $15,000 BAIL FORFEITED

Marcus Garvey, the negro leader, whose sentence of five years' imprisonment for the fraudulent use of the mails was recently affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, was arrested at 6:30 last evening at the 125th Street Station on a New York Central train that had come from the West. He was locked up in the Tombs.

Federal Prosecutor Maxwell S. Mattuck, who obtained the conviction of Garvey, waited until nearly noon yesterday for him to surrender, and then went before Federal Judge A. N. Hand, got a bench warrant for Garvey's arrest, and had his bail of $15,000 forfeited. The bail had been put up in cash by Garvey's wife, Amy Jacques Garvey.

Word that Garvey was wanted was broadcast throughout the United States with the information that he was believed to have left this city two days ago to visit Detroit or Cleveland to fulfill a lecture engagement. Agents of the Department of Justice between these two points and this city were especially active, and late yesterday a telegram was received stating that the alleged fugitive was on the train that would reach the Grand Central shortly after 6 o'clock.

It is expected that counsel for Garvey will ask that he be permitted to remain in the Tombs pending an effort to obtain from the United States Supreme Court a writ of certiorari so that the case may be reviewed. Mr. Mattuck said that if such a request was made he did not know whether he would consent or whether he would insist upon the immediate transportation of Garvey to the Atlanta Penitentiary. Mr. Mattuck also said that efforts would be made to collect from Garvey the $1,000 fine which was part of the sentence imposed upon him, and that the forfeiture of the bail would probably be rescinded.

If Messrs. Mason & Dixon had run their line through Boston

THE existing division of Boston's population into two distinct groups could not be more real if a surveyed boundary ran between. Just as the famed Mason-Dixon line has served for generations to mark a sharp separation in national thought and custom, so the invisible factors of ancestry, tradition and evolution have come to divide the people of Boston no less certainly into two comprehensive groups.

Each of these great Boston groups has its own particular beliefs, likes and dislikes. Each patronizes the type of newspaper that faithfully mirrors its own cherished ideas. As a result, the newspapers of Boston serve either one or the other of these two groups. No paper can cover both.

One of these groups can be reached through one or more of several newspapers. The other group--comprising the most important part of the great Boston market, from an advertising standpoint--can be covered only through The Herald-Traveler.

To cover both of these groups is necessary to the success of most advertising campaigns. To reach The Herald-Traveler group is vital to the success of every worth while product advertised in Boston.

Let us send you "Business Boston," an instructive booklet that explains the situation as it exists in Boston and tells how you can most effectively advertise and merchandise your product in the great Boston market. We will gladly send it upon request on your business stationery.

Plaid Backs or Not.

The chances are said to favor a growth in the volume of purchasing of napped through-and-through overcoatings for Fall as against plaid backs. While the manufacturing trade and retailers still rank the plaid backs in high favor, owing to their popularity with consumers, despite the better wearing qualities of the through-and-through fabrics, the merchandising aspects of the situation dominate. In a season which starts off under the handicap of poor overcoat turnover by both manufacturers and retailers this Fall and Winter, the price question is uppermost. And the through-and-through weaves are assured of the price bill more than the plaid backs do.

Silk Hose in Excellent Demand.

Not for a long time has the higher priced end of the women's silk hosiery business been in such good shape as it is at present. The demand for the goods is coming from all parts of the country, and on "numbers" ranging from $18 to $24 a dozen one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the industry is now sold up to May 1. On goods above the latter price the call is also active. An executive of this concern said yesterday that its 1925 sales quota has been set higher than ever before, but despite this fact shipments during January exceeded those specified as the month's goal by 23 per cent. This executive further said that, although the first week in January is usually very dull, this year's sales for that week were 3,000 dozens more than production for the same period. Light retail stocks, due to good consumer buying of hosiery during the holiday season, and rising prices are held responsible for the large business that has been done.

Gingham Prices to Be Late?

One of the topics now up for discussion in the cotton goods trade is the probable date of the opening of Fall lines of ginghams. Last year these goods were priced for the new season by the leading producer on Feb. 18, a date that this year would correspond to Feb. 25, but reports around the market indicate that the opening of the 1925 goods by this company may be later than this. The rise in cotton and the recent advances in percales apparently presage higher prices than those of last year, but as yet nothing has been said or done to indicate just how much of a rise would take place. The recent revival in the call for ginghams by the jobbing trade makes the date for pricing Fall lines of more general trade interest than would otherwise be the case.

Gray Goods Quiet Down Here.

With buyers of printcloths apparently pretty well covered for the time being, trading in the local gray goods market tapered off materially here yesterday. Buyers were bidding 11⅝ cents for spot 39-inch 68-72s, which were scarce, and a few of them sold at that figure. In the 38½-inch 64-60s some business was done at 9⅝ cents for spots and at 9¾ cents for late April and May. The 38½-inch 60-48s were available for April at 8¼ cents, and that price was bid for them for March with little success. Spots were said to be missing at any price. In the sheeting 36-inch goods moved, including 5-yard cloths at 8¾ cents and 6.50s at 8 cents. Some 37-inch 48-square, 4-four-yard sheetings were sold at 10⅜ cents. In the heavy goods business was done in wide drills for the automobile trade.

Woolen Mills Appear Satisfied.

If there was one thing that stood out more than another in the reaction of the goods trade yesterday to the Fall prices named on Monday by the largest factor, it was that representatives of the mills making men's wear woolen fabrics were not particularly upset by the levels set for the new season. It appears that the prices as ones that can be met without the severe strain of competition which has characterized more than one season in years since 1920. They figure that the market on the whole is now about on an even level as far as the price element is concerned, and to a greater extent than heretofore as far as raw wool entters into cloth production. The worsted mills managers, however, were not in as equable a state of mind.

Larger Raw Silk Consumption.

Raw silk stocks in storage on Feb. 1 were smaller than the quantity on Jan. 1, the amount being 58,732 bales, as against 61,533 bales on the latter date, according to figures issued yesterday by the Silk Association of America. Consumption during January took a substantial spurt, the deliveries to American mills totaling 39,885 bales, compared with 33,961 bales in December. On the other hand imports were less, the total quantity imported last month being 37,084 bales, or 2,894 bales less than the December imports.

Men's hat manufacturers are working out price policies on their Fall lines, which will be offered to the trade some time next month. The rise in price of hatters' furs and leather is no small item in their calculations, and the probabilities are that the new lines may bear an advance of from 10 to 15 per cent. Leading lines which start at $30 per dozen may be priced for Fall at $45, with the higher levels in proportion. This would bring the hat retailing at $5 into the $6 category, which is not to the liking of the manufacturer who has late particularly favored the former price. This merchandising phase is being given careful study. The lower priced merchandise, it was said yesterday, is equally affected by the rise in raw material costs.

Cheviots In Men's Fall Fabrics.

One feature of the American Woolen Company's line of men's wear Fall fabrics is the range of worsted cheviots. Two numbers, particularly 3567 at $2.05 and 414-1 at $2.27½, are mentioned as of particular interest as meeting buyers' price views and as fabrics which tailor well. To demonstrate the latter, the company has two suits made of these numbers on view on their men's wear sales floor. The cheviots are being offered in a large range of colors—twenty in solid colors and twenty more in fancy mixtures. The bright shades are stressed. About a year ago, interest began to revive in cheviots, the manufacturing clothiers taking well to them last Fall and for the present Spring. The belief is that they will figure larger than ever in the development of the Fall season.

It Pays to Keep Trying.

That it pays to keep after inactive charge accounts, no matter how long they have been dormant, is shown by an experience cited yesterday by the credit manager of a prominent local department store. The manager in question kept pegging away on his inactive accounts, among them that of a man who had bought nothing in the store for two years. After he had received several letters asking why he had ceased buying, he replied that he had bought a suit there and had not been satisfied with it. Being of the type who would rather patronize some other store than complain, he just stopped buying. His letter "started something," however, the end of which was a full refund on the suit, despite the fact that he had bought it two years before. This made such an impression on him that he not only reopened his account, but has since brought three friends in personally and sent in a fourth, all of whom became charge customers.

Women's Shoes Moving Well.

Little fault is to be found with the present movement of women's shoes in this market. Both oxfords and pumps are reported active, the latter being sold well in both strap and gore effects. Pumps generally are said to be running to simpler effects. The oxfords are selling best in tan leather, from all accounts, while the pumps are moving in tan, black and patent leathers, black and brown satins and suedes. Styles with medium toe lasts dominate in the business that is coming in, though orders received for some of the so-called turn effects from certain parts of the country call for shorter and broader lasts than those generally wanted. Heels of the best-selling models run from an inch to 1⅝ inches in height, although in more extreme cases they run up to 2½ inches.

FEARS BRITISH MERGER WITH PACKERS HERE

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Fear of a possible temporary or permanent alliance between the Vestey organization, of which Lord Vestey is the head, and the American meat packers, was voiced before the Food Commission today by F. E. Wise, formerly Assistant Secretary to the Ministry of Food. He asserted that there was no guarantee against such a combination, which would have British meat consumers at its mercy, and he argued that unless concerted action was taken prices would continue to rise.

Mr. Wise proposed the creation of a Government board to control the importation and distribution of meat in the interest of the consumers, and to arrange for the transformation of the Vestey undertakings into an organization run on public utility lines under Government control. This scheme was adversely criticized by the Chairman of the commission, Slir Auckland Geddes, and others.

TREGOE TO CREDIT MEN.

Manager Recommends More Thoughtful and Energetic Work.

J. H. Tregoe, Executive Manager of the National Association of Credit Men, advocated more thoughtful and energetic work on the part of credit men to insure genuine service to business communities, at a meeting of Eastern Secretaries held here yesterday.

"I'd like to get up a thinking club of business men pledged to do nothing but think for thirty consecutive minutes a day," said Mr. Tregoe. He stated that the permanent heads of local credit organizations, made up of wholesalers, manufacturers and bankers, should furnish the thoughtful work of the organization.

STOCK EXCHANGE EXPELS N. J MILLER

E. H. H. Simmons, President of the New York Stock Exchange, announced yesterday the expulsion of Nathan J. Miller, head of the former firm of Miller & Co., from Exchange membership. This action by the Board of Governors followed a decision handed down by Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner on Tuesday denying the permanent restraining of the Exchange from taking action against Mr. Miller and also vacating a temporary injunction of last December.

"The substance of the charge and specification on which Nathan J. Miller was found guilty was that Nathan J. Miller, through the then firm of Miller & Co., participated in and actively assisted in the furtherance of a campaign involving improper transactions in the stock of the Southern States Oil Co.

"A preliminary injunction was granted on Dec. 31, 1924, by a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, restraining the Exchange from announcing Mr. Miller's expulsion. Counsel for the respective parties argued the matter before the Court on Dec. 31, 1924, and a decision has been rendered by the Court vacating said injunction."

When asked last night if he had any statement to make regarding the Exchange's action, Mr. Miller said: "I have nothing to say at the present time."

"A charge and specification having been preferred under Sec. 6, of Art XVII. of the Constitution against Nathan J. Miller, a member of the exchange, said charge and specification were considered by the Governing Committee at its meeting held on Dec. 10, 1924, said Nathan J. Miller being present; and, the Governing Committee having determined that said Nathan J. Miller was guilty of said charge and specification, the said Nathan J. Miller was expelled."

DECISION ON DANZIG APPEALED BY POLAND

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—Poland has protested to the League of Nations against yesterday's decision of League Commissioner MacDonnell at Danzig, denying Poland's right to have her own mail boxes at Danzig except at one specified place.

The Poles contend that MacDonnell's ruling violates the Versailles treaty and the subsequent agreements, wherefore it has no binding power on Poland. They also contend that Mr. MacDonnell bases his ruling on former decisions not having application to the present case.

Meanwhile the ruling is hailed here with great satisfaction, though the fact that it may be overruled at Geneva is not ignored. At Warsaw the ruling is arousing intense dissatisfaction. Owing to the late hour when it became known yesterday, little Warsaw comment is available as yet, but what there is shows how angry the Poles are.

A direct hint that the dispute is not merely between the Free City of Danzig and Poland, but in the final analysis is a test of strength between England and France, is contained in a statement by a prominent Warsaw newspaper, the Rzeczpospolita, "that Mr. MacDonnell's action is not calculated to raise the League's prestige and runs counter to England's peaceful Baltic policy."

Another Warsaw paper accuses Mr. MacDonnell of partisanship, and still another writes that "the Danzig dispute is merely a stage in the fight waged from Berlin with iron resolution against the status quo."

WARSAW, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—The decision handed down by the League's High Commissioner in Danzig yesterday that Poland's attempt to establish an independent postal, telegraphic and telephonic service within the confines of the Free City of Danzig was illegal, continues to foment bad feeling here. The Polish business men have decided not to participate in the forthcoming fair at Danzig.

DANZIG, Feb. 5.—Great uneasiness exists in Danzig lest physical clashes occur over the Polish mail box dispute, which may cause the Poles to take military action.

SLEEPING BABY'S "JOY RIDE"

Restored to Parents After Two Boys Drove It Off in a Taxi.

Two boys, who unknowingly gave three-year-old Dorothy Mottas a five-hour "joy ride" through the Bronx and Westchester and back in a taxi which they are charged with stealing, were reminded to the Bronx Children's Society by Justice William Young in Bronx Children's Court yesterday for hearing on Feb. 16.

The boys were Anthony Quaglotte, 13 years old, of 2,344 Beaumont Avenue, the Bronx, who is alleged to have driven the cab, and Anthony Reina, 14 years old, of 2,325 Beaumont Avenue, the Bronx.

Quaglotte is alleged to have taken the cab with the child in it from in front of 189 Grote Street, the Bronx, where Mrs. Anthony Mottas, Dorothy's mother, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gargana of 196 Mott Street had gone to look at an apartment recently rented by the Mottas. Gargana is the owner and driver of the cab. A moment after leaving the cab with the child asleep in it they heard the taxi start and saw it disappear up the street. After a five-hour drive the boys left the cab in Bronx Park. When they heard there was a child in it they went to the park and drove the cab back, with the child still sleeping, to the Grote Street house, where they were arrested.

BAIL FIXED AT $50,000.

Prisoners Had Boasted They Could Get $20,000 Bond.

Magistrate Miller fixed bail at $50,000 in the Jamaica Police Court yesterday for Fred Jacobson, 19, of 687 Eighth Avenue, and Thomas Blaine, 29, of 138 West Forty-ninth Street, charged with burglary. The bail was made so high because the prisoners boasted they could get bonds of $20,000. Detectives said the men had confessed fifty robberies in Queens and Brooklyn. The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

Yesterday Detective William Herbert had in the home of Albert Thill, at 8,522 108th Street, Richmond Hill, which robbers had entered Saturday, but from which they had been frightened away, leaving jewelry behind. Herbert had been in the house an hour when two young men tried to open the front door. Herbert rushed out after them and fired three shots. Blaine fell on the ice and Herbert caught him. Jacobson escaped but was arrested later.

SKULL OF APE MAN WILL BE KEPT IN NATAL

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JOHANNESBURG, Feb. 5.—The fossil skull of a manlike ape found at Taungs is to remain in South Africa, and its home will probably be in the Witwatersrand University until such time as the Johannesburg municipality provides a museum.

In a further statement on his discovery Professor Dart said:

"Thousands of other fossils, no doubt, have been unconsciously unearthed from the Taungs lime workings in the past. It is obvious now that records of stupendous and probably of far greater significance than those secured are either lying in the dump at the quarry or have gone in lime to the Natal sugar refineries or carbide works at Germstein."

He added that he had been informed that a complete skeleton had been blasted out of the cliff and thrown into the quarry dump, and he continued:

"It would be foolish and waste of time to search the dump for fossils thus carelessly thrown away. Nobody knows where this skeleton is, and they would have to sift hundreds of thousands of tons of earth, which would require tremendous financial resources. What would be more worth while in the interest of science would be an appeal to have every lime deposit being worked at present in the Union and Rhodesia carefully watched for the unearthing of bones of any sort."

Professor Dart said that in view of the latest discovery the Taungs area would be very closely watched for further fossils. He doubted that the area would attract research parties from overseas for some little time to come. Unless an expedition were organized, he said, such work entailed much expenditure. One thing that the discovery of the skull brought into the forefront was that scientific research in this country needed to be assisted and endowed, he added.

Man has, and the ape has not, the religious feeling, and that is the big difference between man and ape, according to Dr. Wolfgang Kohler, German psychologist, who arrived yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner Thuringia. Dr. Kohler comes to lecture at Clark University, Worcester, Mass.

Dr. Kohler's research into the brains of anthropoid apes is known throughout the world. He explained that his studies had as their real objective a fuller understanding of the faculty of perception in man.

"We study the anthropoid apes merely to learn, if possible, more of the submerged emotions of men," said Dr. Kohler. "Man and these apes, in fundamental things, especially their sex relations, are very much alike."

Asked in what respect man and the apes differed, Dr. Kohler said:

SETS ASIDE 3 STORES FOR BURGLARS TO ROB

Atlanta Chain Grocer Asks Them to Confine Raids to These and Spare the Other 127.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 5.—Because it has been robbed twenty-one times in a month, the L. W. Rogers Grocery Company, has issued an open invitation to all burglars to rob only three of its stores in the future in order to protect the remaining 127 from molestation.

The front doors of the three stores will be left open, the company announced, adding that the lights will burn throughout the night "so you can see to get just what you want."

"Go in almost any time during hte night to make your selection," the company continued. "So far as we know, there will be no one to interfere with you or stop you."

The invitation was carried in page ads in the Atlanta papers. It points out that this move is made in the interest of economy, and to save costs of alterations and repairs. In addition to a loss of $10,000 in groceries, the overhauling of stores has been expensive.

"Having done this for you burglars," the ads continue, "we want to put you on notice that none of our other stores must be molested. To show we are in earnest, we offer $1,000 reward for arrest of any man breaking into the proscribed stores."

The ad winds up by declaring that the blame rests not with the Police Department but with failure of the city to employ sufficient force. To remedy this, Mr. Rogers offers to be one of one hundred citizens to put up $5,000 each to help the city hire policemen.

PERLMAN-SIROVICH COUNT.

House of Representatives Will Pass Finally on the Vote.

The recount of the vote of the Fourteenth Congressional District, Manhattan, in which last November Nathan D. Perlman, Republican, was credited with having defeated Dr. William J. Sirovich by a margin of 126 votes, had progressed last night to a point where the ballots of ten of the fifty-six election districts had been canvassed. The districts examined were the Fourth to the Thirteenth, inclusive, of the Sixth Assembly District. At the end of the first two days work of the recount it was announced that the Democrats had challenged twenty-three Perlman votes, while the Republicans had challenged twenty-one Democratic votes.

The examiners did not disclose the relative standing of the two candidates as affected by the ballots canvassed yesterday. With the recounting of the first three ballot boxes opened on Wednesday a considerable gain was shown for Dr. Sirovich. On completion of the canvass several days hence a detailed report will be made to the House of Representatives, which must finally pass upon all challenged votes and also upon a number of ballots which are disputed by both sides. Until then the further progress of the recount in its effect upon the contestants is supposed to be held in confidence.

GLEASON PUTS A QUESTION

Would I Lose or Gain in Sale of Wife, He Asks in Sanity Hearing.

Dr. Robert W. Kennedy of Cornell, a specialist in nervous diseases, testified yesterday before three sanity Commissioners and a jury of twenty-four that Albert J. Gleason, business school head, was sane. He said he was as competent as any one to handle his affairs. The hearing was ordered by the Chancery Court on the complaint of Gleason's wife.

The plaintiff's case was completed yesterday. Merritt Lane, counsel for Mrs. Gleason, recalled her husband to the stand. Gleason received permission to submit a question to the lawyer.

"Mr. Lane," he asked, "if I were to sell one wife for what three have cost me, would I gain or lose, and what per cent.?"

Lane did not reply and Gleason was excused. The hearing will be continued today.

RADIO CORPORATION LOSES IN TUBE SUIT

DE FOREST CONCERN VICTOR

WILMINGTON, Del., Feb. 5.—Federal Judge Hugh M. Morris has granted a temporary injunction to the De Forest Radio Telephone and Telegraph Company restraining the Radio Corporation of America from selling radio tubes of the De Forest patent manufactured by the Westinghouse Lamp Company. The Court denied a temporary injunction to prevent the Radio Corporation using tubes manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

The case will now go on to final hearing to determine whether the injunction shall be made permanent and an accounting ordered. The patent under which the suit is brought will expire in a few weeks.

The Radio Corporation of America maintained that the De Forest Company had given the right to manufacture these tubes to the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and that this gave the right to the Westinghouse Lamp Company, a subsidiary. The Court held that the license before the Court did not show that this was the case but did show that the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company had a right to make and sell the tubes. The Court therefore restrained the use of tubes made by the lamp company but denied the injunction to stop the use of tubes made by the manufacturing company.

Price of Radio Stock Breaks.

The preliminary injunction restraining the Radio Corporation of America from selling vacuum tubes manufactured by the Westinghouse Lamp Company caused a sharp reaction yesterday in Radio Corporation shares on the Stock Exchange, Radio common, which has been much in the speculative limelight lately, broke nearly four points on the news to 59½ under a wave of selling in the last hour. Before the market closed, however, the shares had recovered to 61½, for a net loss on the day of only 2½ points.

De Forest Radio shares on the Curb went up as sharply as Radio Corporation went down. The voting trust certificates representing the De Forest stock were up 4¾ points on the day at 33¾, a new high. Trading in both Radio Corporation and De Forest stocks was extensive, transactions in the former aggregating more than 53,000 shares, while in the De Forest shares dealings amounted to more than 41,000 shares. At the closing price of 61½ Radio Corporation was a half point below the year's previous low and compares with the year's high of 77¼.

Two With Pistols Rob Booth at Ninth Ave. and 42d St. After Crippling Telephone.

Two men who had cut the telephone wire in the downtown elevated station at Ninth Avenue and Forty-second Street, escaped in an automobile with $295, the day's receipts, last night after they had held up the change agent, A. C. Storch.

A train had just left the station when the robbers, each wearing a cap, appeared in the waiting room from the stairway on each end of the station. They walked over to the change booth in which Storch was seated. One of them pointed a pistol through the grillwork at Storch and commanded him to open the door. The other stood in the middle of the waiting room twirling an automatic pistol around the forefinger of his right hand, glancing occasionally toward the stairways on each side of him.

Storch opened the door of the booth and the first robber, who was tall and muscular, walked inside and slammed the door behind him. Then, pointing to the safe behind Storch, said: "Open that up."

Storch impetuously started to grab the telephone beside him, but the robber smilingly said: "Don't try to use that—we've already cut it off." Then he shoved the muzzle of his pistol against Storch's body, and added: "Now, don't be a fool. Open that safe, or I'll throw a few shots through you."

Storch complied and then the robber pulled out one bag containing $216 and another containing $80, and stuffed them in his pocket.

DR. WIEDFELDT SAILS.

Retiring German Ambassador Says Americans Are Kindly.

"I have enjoyed my post in America very much," said Dr. Wiedfeldt, "and have found the American people very dependable and kindly."

Dr. Wiedfeldt said that when he returned home he probably would reaume his financial interest in the iron and steel industry. He sailed alone, Mrs. Wiedfeldt having preceded him. Consul General Karl Lang and Consul Erich Kraske were at the pier to bid bon voyage to the retiring German Ambassador.

The Albert Ballin carried 3,500 sacks of American mail, and on board were a staff of United States postal clerks, marking the resumption of the postal service on the Hamburg-American Line which was suspended at the beginning of the World War. The ship carried 282 passengers.

ACCUSED IN FATAL CAVE-IN.

Michael Wengel, a laborer of Princes Bay, Staten Island, was killed yesterday when the sides of a tunnel under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad crossing at Sharrott Avenue caved in and buried him beneath several tons of earth. Wengel was one of a gang employed by a contracting company removing a grade crossing. The foreman, Harry Gaylord of Perth Amboy, was arrested on a charge of homicide after an investigation by the police.

Wengel was laying pipe alone in the tunnel which was dug for a culvert, when the cave-in came. Other laborers dug him out, but he was dead from suffocation and from striking his head against a rock. When the police discovered that there were no timbers to hold back the sides of the tunnel they placed the homicide charge against Gaylord. Magistrate Croak paroled him in the custody of his lawyer when he was arraigned in the New Brighton Court. Wengel had a wife in Europe.

TWO WOMEN GET WRIT AND HALT EXTRADITION

The extradition of two young women to Baltimore, in connection with the theft there some time ago of $12,000 in bonds, was brought to a halt yesterday, when Justice Bijur in the Supreme Court issued a writ of habeas corpus and set the hearing for tomorrow.

The accused, Miss Vera Ross, 25 years old, of 1,140 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, and Miss May Gallagher, 33 years old, a milliner at 621 Washington Street, Boston, who lives at 20 St. Luke's Road, Allston, Mass., were arrested several days ago when they were alleged to have attempted to dispose of two of the stolen bonds worth $1,200, in the financial district. They were held without bail as fugitives from Baltimore, to await the arrival of extradition papers.

On their second arraignment before Magistrate Edgar V. Frothingham yesterday, Assistant District Attorney William F. McKenna presented papers signed by the Governor of Maryland, and countersigned by Governor Smith, and the Magistrate discharged the young women.

The Baltimore detectives started with their prisoners for the train, but were intercepted by a writ signed by Justice Bijur, which commanded that the young women be produced immediately before him. The writ was obtained on the contention of the young women that they could not be fugitives from Baltimore as they never had been in that city in their lives. They had told the Magistrate on their first arraignment that they came to this city to buy millinery for Miss Gallagher, and while here they decided to dispose of the two bonds. Which, Miss Gallagher said, she had obtained from a customer, a Mrs. Perlman, as security for a loan of $500, which Mrs. Perlman didn't take up.

Before Magistrate Frothingham turned them over to the Baltimore detectives the young women declared that they would produce witnesses that they had never been in Baltimore, and establish the truthfulness of Miss Gallagher's story of the manner in which she came into possession of the bonds. They were committed to the Jefferson Market Women's Prison to await the outcome of the Supreme Court proceeding.

Later in the afternoon James Walters of 157 Hoyt Street, Brooklyn, was held in $2,500 bail for a hearing next Saturday when analyses by the Magistrate on suspicion of bringing stolen securities from Baltimore into this State. Detective Fay of the Old Slip Station, in an affidavit, stated that Walters was suspected of having brought two stolen bonds, worth $2,000, into this city from Baltimore on Sept. 15 last. The Baltimore police announced last night that Walters was not wanted there in connection with the $12,000 theft which led to the arrest of the two young women.

FIRE LOSS IN 1923 OVER HALF BILLION

Loss of property in the United States by fire during 1923 amounted to $535,372,782, a new high record for the world, it was made known yesterday by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

"The sum of $535,372,782," said W. E. Mallalieu, general manager of the board's actuarial bureau, "includes the usual allowance of 25 per cent. for unreported fires.

"The total fire waste definitely recorded was $428,298,226, and the chief originating cause was found to be the twin hazard of 'matches-smoking,' the actual destruction charged against it amounting to $29,045,017. This is about $5,000,000 more than in 1922 when it also was the leading cause. The second largest item, $20,828,162, was due to defective chimneys and flues, while stoves, furnaces, &c., occupied third place with a total of $18,658,248. Spontaneous combustion was responsible for $16,110,945; sparks igniting combustible roofs caused destruction amounting to $15,931,342, while the total due to electricity was $4,051,792. Lightning was charged with the sum of $10,922,669.

"Other prominent causes with their respective totals were as follows: Petroleum and its products, $11,183,421; friction sparks from running machinery, $7,499,699; hot ashes and coals together with open fires, $5,365,014.

"These tremendous losses," Mr. Mallalieu continued, "have such a definite economic effect that they influence the cost of living to a marked degree. It is impossible to waste needed buildings and commodities on such a scale without paying the bill. Fire losses increase taxes and tend to advance the cost of insurance."

INDIAN ORGIES A PAST EVIL

Elimination of Liquor Has Reduced Vice, Expert Says.

The fire water of the Indian is a thing of the past. It no longer constitutes a question of moment on the Indian reservations, according to Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance Company of America, who spoke yesterday at the Art Centre, 65 East Fifty-sixth Street.

The meeting was arranged by the Eastern Association of Indian Affairs with a view to making known the American Indian of today. The white man's problem regarding the Indian was discussed from many angles by Lewis H. Carris, Director National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, and Dr. Henry Craig Fleming, Director of the Zuni Reservation.

Dr. Hoffman said that firewater orgies have been virtually eliminated. The speaker, who is widely known because of his investigations among the American aborigines, said that efforts to eradicate the liquor traffic had reduced vice and crime among the Indians.

Certain Indian tribes were approaching extinction, Dr. Hoffman said, on account of the neglect of the Government and the apathy of the whites toward measures for the preservation of a race capable of giving "salutary lessons in morality, faithfulness and certain other virtues of sturdy manhood." The full blood population of the country, he estimated, today is not more than 163,000.

GRAFT IN SNOW REMOVAL.

Hirshfield Finds 43 Loads Charged For, but Not Dumped.

Charges that emergency snow removal contractors and inspectors listed and charged for forty-three more truckloads of snow than were actually dumped in District 8, at Fifty-third Street and Eighth Avenue, last Friday, were made before Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield yesterday when he continued his examination into alleged grafting in the Street Cleaning Department.

These charges were substantiated by the testimony of several employes in the Commissioner's office who had been assigned to investigate snow removal.

William E. Sloane, a loading foreman attached to the dumping gang in Fifty-third Street, who also is employed in the office of the Borough President of Queens, when shown the tickets which he was supposed to have written certifying the loads, declared the certification was not in his handwriting. The investigation will be resumed this morning.

"If we have no more snow," Commissioner Hirshfield said, "the cost of removing it from the streets this Winter will be between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000. Of that sum, if we had not stepped in with a check-up, from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 would have gone into the pockets of grafters."

WON'T LIVE WITH MOTHER.

Girl's Parent Warned Not to Annoy Daughter Again.

Tears were in the eyes of many persons in the Flatbush Police Court yesterday when they heard Grace Gillin, 18 years old, beg Magistrate George H. Folwell not to send her back to the home of her mother. The mother, Mrs. Grace Gillin, 37, of 526 Flatbush Avenue, received a suspended sentence on her promise that she would not bother the girl.

As a child the girl was sent to a home by her mother. She was taken from the home by a family named O'Malley in Kew Gardens. Later she went to live at 2,125 Regent Place, Flatbush, with Mrs. Agnes O'Malley Naetzker, a daughter of the O'Malleys. Mrs. Gillin came to the Naetzker home recently and took the girl away. Grace returned to the Regent Place home and asked to be taken back. She told Mrs. Naetzker that her mother compelled her to work in a restaurant washing dishes and that for other reasons she was not happy with her. On Wednesday Mrs. Gillin appeared again at the Naetzker home and threatened Mrs. Naetzker, who called a policeman and made a charge of disorderly conduct against Mrs. Gillin.

In court yesterday the Magistrate called the girl to the stand and said:

"Which do you choose? You are of age now. With whom do you wish to go, your mother or Mrs. Naetzker?

"Oh, not my mother," the girl cried. "Don't make me go back to my mother. I do not want the sort of life my mother can give me. Please let me stay with Mrs. Naetzker."

The Magistrate told the girl that she had the right to go where she chose and warned Mrs. Gillin that if she bothered Mrs. Naetzker again she would be sent to the workhouse.

TARIFF BOARD CASH VOTED.

House Restores Item and Passes $482,000,000 Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The House voted today to restore to the Independent Offices Appropriation bill an item of $712,000 for expenses of the Tariff Commission during the coming fiscal year. The vote was 255 to 89.

The section was eliminated from the bill several days ago while only a small membership of the House was present. After the vote restoring the item, on which many Democrats joined the Republicans, the bill was passed.

Representative Garner of Texas, ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, who offered the amendment to eliminate the appropriation, contended the commision in reality was not a bi-partisan body, as the law requires.

The eighty-nine who supported the Garner amendment were all Democrats, while sixty-six Democrats joined the Republicans in opposition.

The bill carries $432,000,000, of which $405,000,000 isfor the Veterans' Bureau and $24,000,000 for the Shipping Board.

Its passage leaves only the legislative and District of Columbia appropriation bills and another deficiency budget to be acted on by the House, so far as supply measures are concerned, this session.

LINCOLN DAY CEREMONIES.

Wreaths to Be Laid Next Thursday on Statue in Union Square.

Lincoln's Birthday, next Thursday, will be celebrated with ceremonies befitting the sixtieth year of peace between the North and South and since the President's death, it was announced yesterday by the Non-Partisan Lincoln Memorial Committee of the National Republican Club. Patriotic exercises will start at 10 A. M. at the Lincoln Statue in Union Square, where W. Stotesbury, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, will preside.

Placing of wreaths on the base of the statue, many emblematic of the occasion, will be part of the program. The army, navy, Post Office Department and National Guard will participate, each accompanied by a band.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Pressure has decreased almost generally over the United States and Southern Canada during the last twenty-four hours and disturbances were central Thursday night over Northern Manitoba, Oklahoma, Western Quebec, Southeastern Nova Scotia and off the British Columbia coast. The barometer was relatively higher over the far Southwest and from Hudson Bay southward to Florida. Fair weather has prevailed almost generally east of the Rocky Mountains, but there have been rains west of the Rocky Mountains, except in Arizona and Southern California. The temperature continued to rise Thursday east of the Mississippi River and it was more than ten degrees above normal almost generally east of the Mississippi River and in the Pacific States and along the Atlantic and Gulf States, and it was more than thirty degrees above normal in Southern Manitoba and portions of Minnesota and North Dakota.

Fair weather will prevail Friday throughout the Washington Forecast District, and there will be considerable cloudiness on Saturday, but precipitation will probably be confined to the lower lakke region and the upper Ohio Valley. The temperature will become somewhat lower in the North Atlantic Saturday night. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River it will continue considerably above normal Friday and Saturday.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Sharp Advances in a Few Stocks, Little Change in the Others.

None of the markets moved to any great purpose yesterday except grain, and the movement of wheat and rye was at the expense of values. Except for the fact that total transactions crossed 2,000,000 shares for the first time in a week and the second time in three weeks, the Stock Exchange did not present any different picture from that of other recent days. It had its handful of more or less spectacular advances, but they were scattered, largely isolated from one another, and not indicative of a general trend. How little meaning this week's fluctuations have really had may be judged from yesterday's sudden abandonment of the bidding-up policy in the railway group as a whole, after the enthusiastic attitude of the day before. Most of the stock market ended the day with negligible change in prices; the "averages" were about where they stood on the first day of the week, although considerably nearer to the high point of the year to date than to the lowest.

The wheat market declined 7¾ cents a bushel and closed with only a slight recovery. At $1.91⅝, its low point for the day, it had got back to the price of a fortnight ago. There was little occasion for surprise in the market's action; the spell was broken when the relapse from the two-dollar price showed how much of last week's advance was pure speculation. But yesterday's resumption of the decline, after the previous day's momentary recovery of the two-dollar level, set the Chicago Board of Trade hunting for explanations after the fact. This being so, the presenting of a Senate resolution for the Federal Trade Commission to inquire if the rise of wheat had not violated the Anti-Trust law was gravely discussed. The grain market perhaps failed to see the humor of this proposal; coming as it does, simultaneously with the Senate's angry insistence that something must be done in this session to insure the permanency of high grain prices for the farmers. Perhaps the incident with more actual bearing on the wheat speculation was the announcement from Chicago that the most successful "bull operator" in wheat, who was lately quoted as predicting a $2.50 price, had packed his trunks and started for a holiday in Florida.

In the Federal Reserve system's weekly statement, gold reserves were reported as $19,496,000 below the preceding week, $32,145,000 below the high point of January, and $125,360,000 below the total at the end of last November, just before the gold exports began in quantity. This figure is not far from the total amount exported during the interval; probably the loss of gold to the general circulation during December has been offset by the return flow to the Reserve banks since the holidays. But the system's reserve ratio still stands at 77⅞ per cent., or much above the December average.

Some of the weekly European bank returns were interesting. The German Reichsbank's increase of 351,000,000 gold marks in note circulation, making the largest recorded post-war total except at the end of last December, was an incident of the month-end settlements, which at Berlin always require a much expanded currency. In the corresponding week of 1914, for instance, there was an increase of 127,000,000. Notwithstanding addition of 21,000,000 reichsmarks, or $5,000,000, to the bank's gold reserve in the last week of January, the ratio of gold and foreign currency holdings to the outstanding circulation falls from 70 per cent. to 53¼.

The Bank of France made a more perplexing report. Its loan account in the monthly "settlement week" increased 383,500,000 francs, which might alone have accounted for the 342,800,000 increase in note circulation. But the cabled statement also reports an increase of 700,000,000 francs in the bank's loans to the State. This increase apparently had none of the usual effect on outstanding circulation; yet when the Treasury repaid the bank 800,000,000 francs at the end of December, that payment caused a decrease in circulation, notwithstanding 651,000,000 increase in the bank's loans to the market.

MONEY.

THURSDAY, FEB. 5, 1925.

Stock Exchange call money was quiet and steady at 3 per cent. throughout. Demand was very light, withdrawals likewise running to moderate size. A little outside money was placed at a fractional concession from the board figure. In time money, ninety days and six months maturities featured by being a trifle more in demand than the other dates. No variations in quotations were reported, however, as both borrowers and lenders met the demand of the other. Acceptances and merchants' notes discounted without change.

Odd Lots
By purchasing 10 shares of stock of the leading companies in 10 diversified industries, greater margin of safety is obtained than by purchasing 100 shares of any one issue.
Adverse conditions may arise in which any industry might be affected, but it is unlikely that the ten industries would be affected simultaneously.
Many advantages of trading in Odd Lots are explained in an interesting booklet.

TO TEST ALL BONDS OF FOREIGN NATIONS

Exchange Sets Up Standards of Safety by Which They Will Be Judged Before Listing.

TO REQUIRE BUDGET DATA

Questions of How States Have Paid Investors in Past and Would Pay in War-Times.

With many requests for American loans pouring in on bankers from foreign Governments, the first important step to safeguard American investors from unsafe securities was taken yesterday. The New York Stock Exchange adopted an ironclad rule for such loans, setting up a gauge whereby their merits might be measured and their soundness tested.

Foreign States are asking loans which may exceed $2,000,000,000. It was said yesterday. Foreign Government bonds valued at many millions were sold last year. Hereafter the Exchange will pass judgment on such loans whenever bankers ask that the bonds for them be listed. A refusal by the Exchange to list the bonds would practically eliminate a market for them throughout the country. It would render them next to worthless so far as ready sale value to the investor goes.

"A special code of requirements for listing foreign Government bonds on the New York Stock Exchange has been adopted by the Committee on Stock List.

To Protect the Public.

"This addition to the Exchange's existing body of listing requirements has been occasioned by the marked increase during recent years of foreign governmental security flotations in the American markets for capital. The United States has become the greatest creditor nation in the world, and our new international status is nowhere more apparent today than upon the Stock Exchange floor. This country, through its imports of foreign securities in exchange for exports of our goods and capital, has taken a leading part in restoring and stabilizing economic conditions all over the world; at the same time, as our expanding export trade has recently shown, these foreign loans have, to an important extent, tended to increase the demand for American agricultural, mining and industrial products.

"But in this process of absorbing foreign investments the American investing public should be afforded information sufficient to enable it to judge adequately concerning the value of the securities involved. This latest addition to the Stock Exchange's listing requirements is consequently in complete accord with its historic policy of making pertinent information concerning security issues available to the whole investing public of the country."

Until yesterday the listing of foreign Government bonds was left entirely to the discretion of the Committee on Listings. This committee now has a definite measuring rod. It will be obliged to call on all foreign Governments who might wish to place their bonds on America's cardinal market to furnish proof that their loans are good. The borrowers will be asked to show whether they have defaulted in interest payments on past loans, have scaled down interest charges, or in other ways have failed to make good their promises to investors. They also will have to show how their budgets are balanced, whether their foreign trade is profitable or unprofitable, and whether their countries are living within their means.

Nearly all of the recent foreign loans have been approved by bankers as representing the "cream" of such business. More loans of the same sort are to come. They will find it easy to be listed. But States of doubtful stability and those who have broken faith with creditors will find it difficult.

The Measuring Rod.

1. (a) Statement of debt, internal and external, and currency in which it is to be paid; statement of external debt to be computed in dollars.
(b) Contingent and actual liabilities, and priority.
(c) Revenue or assets pledged, if any, under present and other loans, and nature of administration.
(d) Summary of such revenue receipts and income from such assets for preceding five years, stated in dollars, if available.
(e) Status of the law under which said revenue or assets are pledged.
2. Past debt record with respect to:
(a) Defaults.
(b) Scaling down interest payments.
(c) Suspending sinking fund payments.
3. Where listed.
4. Currency in which interest and principal are to be paid.
5. Tax liability and exemption.
6. Statement of governmental income and expenditure for whatever account in the preceding five years.
7. Statement of the sums required in dollars to meet foreign interest charges in each of the five preceding years.
8. Statement in terms of weight and dollars (converted) of merchandise imports and exports in each of the preceding five years.
9. Statement of covenants, if any, with respect to payment of principal and interest of bonds dependent upon state of peace or war and nationality of holder.

GASOLINE PRICES NEAR 1924 HIGH

Advances of 7 Cents Above Last October's Low Point Noted in Some Cities.

DUE TO JUMP IN CRUDE OIL

The additional advances of 1 and 2 cents a gallon in wholesale prices of gasoline announced during the past week by leading Standard and independent oil companies have brought prevailing prices in some cities of the country as much as 7 cents a gallon above the low prices quoted last October. In New York City the current prices of 21 cents wholesale compares with a low of 14 cents posted last October. In New Jersey the price of 19 cents wholesale is now quoted, against 13½ cents last October.

Until this week higher prices were named in all sections of the country except on the Pacific Coast. The Standard Oil of California on Wednesday, however, advanced its price 2 cents a gallon, thus making the increases nation-wide. The average price of gasoline in thirty representative cities is now within a fraction of the high record established last Spring. The current average is 17.26 cents a gallon, against a low of 13.59 for 1924, established last October, and a high of 1313, touched last Spring.

The rapid upswing in prices was due to the higher prices for crude oil in most of the important fields of the country which followed the collapse of the Wortham pool in Texas, where production is now about half that reported in the middle of January.

Gasoline prices on Jan. 1, 1921, were probably the highest ever reached in the United States and declined sharply in that year. Prices in November, 1923, reached the lowest level since 1915.

MEETS STANDARD'S PRICES.

The General Petroleum Company yesterday announced an advance of from 25 to 45 cents a barrel in the prices of various grades of California crude oil, and an advance of 2 cents a gallon in gasoline on the Pacific Coast. These higher prices meet the advances announced on Wednesday by the Standard Oil Company of California.

According to official figures published yesterday the company held in storage 5,008,000 barrels of crude oil as of Feb. 2, 1925, 5,500,000 barrels of fuel oil, 2,200,000 barrels of gasoline and 2,000,000 barrels of other refined petroleum products, the estimated value of which approximated $33,000,000 as of that date. The advance in prices announced yesterday, it was stated, has increased the value of this inventory to $40,000,000 and is carried on the company's books at $26,700,000.

The Humble Oil and Refining Company yesterday advanced Mexia and Wortham crude oil 10 cents a barrel, to $1.80, making the price the same as quoted for Powell, Currie and Richland grades.

The Continental Oil Company, Sinclair Oil Company and the Texas Company yesterday announced an advance of 2 cents a gallon in gasoline in Denver, making the retail price 21 cents a gallon.

Production of crude oil in the Wortham pool in Texas yesterday was gauged at 80,000 barrels daily, against production of 73,000 barrels reported on Wednesday and 187,000 the peak level reported in the middle of January.

The Barnsdall Corporation announced yesterday that its daily production in the California oil fields now totals 4,000 barrels. Three wells have been recently completed in this field and seven others are in process of drilling.

OIL QUIZ MOVE NO SURPRISE.

Representatives of the larger oil companies with offices in this city were reluctant to comment yesterday on the dispatches received from Washington intimating that an investigation would be undertaken by Congress into the recent advances in gasoline and crude oil prices.

One official said he was not surprised at the news and looked upon it as the "annual investigation" of Congress. He expressed the opinion that the recent advances in both crude and refined products were justified. If crude oil were not worth its present price, in the opinion of the larger purchasing companies they would not be offering to take over the product at prevailing quotations and at the same time premiums would not be offered for the surplus stocks now held in storage.

The opinion of trade leaders is that production in the United States, due to the recent collapse of flush production in the newer fields, presages a smaller output for this year, provided new fields are not discovered. In view of this, it was said, there will be a greater demand for crude oil this year than in 1924. Gasoline will naturally follow the price of crude.

It was admitted by one authority that production of gasoline in December was much larger than consumption, but this, he said, was due to the preparations being made by the larger companies to turn the crude product into gasoline in order to meet the record-breaking demand expected next Spring and Summer. If the oil companies did not stock up gasoline during the Winter months, according to this executive, a shortage would prevail during the Summer, as the refineries cannot turn out this product rapidly enough to meet the demand when the motoring season is at its height.

More Orders for Southern Pine.

The Southern Pine Association business barometer for last week shows orders received increased 0.5 per cent. compared with the previous week. Shipments increased 10 per cent. and production increased 4.8 per cent. Reports from the 130 mills show 73,296,100 feet ordered, 74,411,750 feet shipped and 74,680,813 feet produced. Orders on hand at the end of last week totaled 274,723,350 feet.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Sterling Lower When Indian Banks Resume Selling—Francs Weak; Yen Strong.

European exchange resumed the swing lower yesterday after the interval of a short-lived rally on Wednesday. Selling of sterling came again from the same source—Indian banks, but it was not as heavy as in the forepart of the week. Absence of supporting purchases by those who have been active on this side helped the decline along, the rate yielding to $4.78 7-16 at the close, a loss of one-half cent from Wednesday's final.

French francs were heavily offered on the weak statement of the Bank of France, which revealed a sharp increase in circulation, and borrowings by the State. Paris checks sagged 2 points to 5.39¾ cents. Italian, Belgium, Spanish, Holland and the Scandinavians were dull, but factionally under the previous levels.

Japanese yen was strong, advancing 6 points to 38.63 cents on reports that the Government would ship gold to help send exchange higher here. Dealers reported the appearance of a premium on March-April bills, where hitherto these have sold at a discount. Indian exchange was also higher, but the Chinese and South Americans were irregular.

EARNED 199% LAST YEAR

Quotation Is $550 Less Than That of the First National, Now Listed at $2,750.

Shares of the Kings County Trust Company of Brooklyn edged closer in bid price to those of the First National Bank of New York in a relatively brisk market yesterday for New York bank stocks. The capital of the Brooklyn company is $500,000 and that of the First National Bank, which still is the highest priced bank stock in the New York market, is $10,000,000. Earnings reported by the Brooklyn company for 1924 amounted to 199 per cent. on its capital, and those of the New York bank were 122.4 per cent.

A gain of $225 per share in the bid price of the Kings County Trust Company featured the bank group yesterday and carried the quotation to $2,200. The corresponding quotation on the First National Bank shares was $2,750 a share, a difference of $550 separating the two stocks.

In the last year bank stocks have figured in a rise that has far transcended in percentage of paper profits the gains made by some of the country's most speculative stocks of industrial companies. Back of the gains, according to bankers, has been a combination of events, the principal one being the continued easiness of money rates. This, it was said, had proved the foundation stone for the remarkable gains in prices of securities of all kinds, ranging from United States Liberty bonds to the penny stocks dealt in on the smaller markets of the West.

Bank earnings in the last year also have stood up well, most of the large institutions in Wall Street having reported a banner year. Speculation has also attracted some buyers to the possibility of melon cutting, but in the case of the two highest priced bank stocks it was said that such action, if contemplated at all, was being kept closely guarded by the respective directorates.

FOR A 25% STOCK DIVIDEND

Trust Co. of New Jersey to Vote on $500,000 Capital Increase.

A $500,000 increase in capital stock to $2,500,000 was recommended yesterday by the Directors of the Trust Company of New Jersey. Stockholders will vote on the plan on Feb. 16. It is proposed to issue the increase as a 25 per cent. stock dividend. In three years, the company, which has its offices in Jersey City, has increased its stock 66 per cent. and has added $18,000,000 to its assets.

The last stock increase was in December, 1922, when the capitalization was raised from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 by the payment of a 33 1-3 per cent. stock dividend of $500,000. The assets as of Dec. 31 last were reported to be $55,000,000.

WATER CO. TO RETIRE $10,000,000 STOCKS

COMMON TO BEAR DIVIDENDS

Call Probable on Porter's Return From Cruise, April 6—Utility Outlook Good, He Says.

The American Water Works and Electric Company expects to retire its $10,000,000 of 6 per cent. participating preferred stock, according to H. Hobart Porter, President. Mr. Porter made this statement yesterday prior to sailing on the Samaria for a several weeks' cruise. It will probably be necessary to issue new securities in order to retire this preferred stock, he said.

In informed quarters it is believed the new securities referred to by Mr. Porter will consist of a further issue of the new $20 par value stock brought out recently in exchange for the $100 par common on the basis of five for one. Both the old and the new common shares have figured in heavy speculation on the New York Stock Exchange, the activity in the old shares having been based in part on the reports that a split-up was coming. The speculation in the new shares during the last few weeks was based on the belief that the participating preferred stock would be called. The calling of the preferred would leave $600,000 a year in dividends, which would be received by the common stock. There are $10,000,000 of the new shares now outstanding of a total authorized $20,000,000.

The participating preferred is callable at 105. Mr. Porter will return April 6, and it is not probable, it was said yesterday, that the call will be made until his return. At that time the Board of Directors will meet for that purpose.

Mr. Porter said that the December earnings were very much better than any other month of last Fall, "reflecting a wave of prosperity which struck the country after the Coolidge election." The yearly earnings will be available next week.

The outlook for utility companies, he said, was very good. The American Water Works and Electric Company will receive in 1925 revenue from properties acquired last year, whereas in 1924 it had to pay interest on the investment in these properties without return.

PUSHING MEXICAN LINK.

Eighteen Months Will See Southern Pacific Joined to Lines Below Border

The Southern Pacific Railroad is in the best physical condition in its history, and the traffic since the first of the year has been increasing steadily, according to Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Executive Committee, who has just reached San Antonio after a trip of inspection over the railroad. The statement of the condition of the property was made public in New York yesterday.

In another year and a half, the statement says, it is expected that the link in Mexico connecting the lines from the United States to Mexico will be finished. Double tracking in the Sierras will be completed for the late Autumn traffic. Five miles of the new road on the Phoenix lines is in operation.

PRICES OF COPPER UP IN LOCAL MARKET

SALES MAKE A BIG GAIN

25,000,000 Pounds Recorded in 24 Hours—Export Rate Now 14.80; Domestic, 14⅞ to 15.

A sudden change for the better developed in the local copper market yesterday and higher prices accompanied an increase in demand by both foreign and domestic consumers. Prices for domestic and export copper were advanced from ¼ to ⅜ of a cent a pound, and total sales of approximately 25,000,000 pounds were recorded in the twenty-four hours to the close of business yesterday. This is the heaviest buying this year.

The first sign of strength developed on the London Metal Exchange. Early cables received in this city yesterday reported an advance of thirty shillings per ton in standard copper metal in London. This rise accounted for the rapid overnight advance in the New York market. The rise in London, according to the cables, was due chiefly to short covering by speculators and consumers who have been fighting the recent advance in price. This opposition to the market has been evident for some time and accounted for the recent sagging tendency of prices.

Local producers, however, aware of the situation, failed to express concern and were confident that better conditions would prevail before long, when consumers entered the market to cover their requirements for the Spring and Summer months. Such buying appears to be in evidence now, according to producers, which accounted for the sharp rise in this market.

The buying, following receipt of the London advices, caused an overnight gain of ¼ to ⅜ cent a pound in New York. Current quotations named by the leading producers range from 14¾ to 15 cents a pound covering deliveries in the Connecticut Valley and Western points. Small quantities of the metal were available on Wednesday at 14¾ cents a pound. Yesterday, however, consumers could not obtain any metal below the 14¾ or 15 cent level, depending upon the delivery point, and the prediction is made that still higher prices may prevail in the next few months, provided the anticipated buying actually develop.

In addition to heavier demand by domestic consumers the export market also hardened. Export copper was quoted at 14.80 cents a pound, f. a. s. New York harbor, which is equal to 15.05 cents, c. i. f. London, Hamburg or Havre. While most of the export business transacted was done on the 14.80 cents basis, some dealers and producers were quoting 14.85 cents, f. a. s. On Wednesday export metal was obtainable at 14¼ cents f. a. s. New York. The foreign demand was chiefly from England and France, but Germany is reported to have placed some orders.

$12,500,000 BONDS OF WABASH SOLD

Books Closed an Hour After They Were Offered at 96 to Yield 5.75 Per Cent.

MORE FINANCING AHEAD

St. Paul's $47,000,000 and New Haven's $23,000,000 to Be Cared For—Poland $50,000,000 Loan.

In a continued brisk market for railroad bonds, which yesterday carried in the open market a number of carrier securities to higher levels, the Kuhn, Loeb & Co. offering of $12,500,000 Wabash Railway refunding and general mortgage bonds was quickly absorbed. Books were closed about one hour after the bonds were placed on sale. The bonds were priced at 96 to yield 5.75 per cent, and carry 5½ per cent. coupons.

Several large railway financing deals are still ahead of Wall Street. One of these is the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul issue of $47,000,000 of bonds, falling due before the middle of the year. A $23,000,000 New Haven issue also will have to be cared for. Earning reports of the New Haven have been encouraging and bankers having this job in hand are faced with an easier task than the St. Paul's bankers, although that road is expected to show substantially improved earnings due to the improvement in Western farming conditions.

In the foreign financing field, attention again centred largely on the prospective Polish Government loan of $50,000,000. It was said yesterday that this issue would be secured by first liens on Polish sugar excise taxes and upon railway receipts. In view of the fact that the firm has not yet exercised its option on the loan, and possibly may take no action of any kind before Feb. 15, Dillon, Read & Co. had no comment to make.

The largest new offering of bonds for today consists of $1,000,000 California Joint Stock Land Bank of San Francisco 6 per cent. farm loan bonds due Jan. 1, 1945-1953, at prices to yield 4.05 per cent. They are issued for improvement purposes.

Eldredge & Co. are offering $750,000 Houston, Texas, 5 per cent. school district bonds, due $50,000 annually Dec. 1 1925-1939, at prices to yield 4.40 to 4.70 per cent. The school district embraces all of Houston and considerable territory next to it.

An award of $3,000,000 4 per cent. sanitary district bonds was made yesterday by the Board of Trustees of Chicago to a syndicate composed of the First Trust and Savings Bank, the Illinois Merchants Bank, the Harris Trust Company and the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank. The successful bid was reported to be 98.81, and the second high was 98.59.

Woolworth January Sales $14,204,388 An Increase of 17.06 Per Cent.

A detailed statement of the company shows that old stores operating a year br more, accounted for $1,333,256 or 10.99 per cent. of the gain reported compared with last year. The percentage of gain for the entire chain of stores was the largest reported for any month in some time.

COTTON PRICES SAG IN ERRATING MARKET

The reactionary tone which developed in cotton the previous day, became more pronounced yesterday and a setback of nearly half a cent occurred. Instead of many large buying orders such as proved the feature of trading early in the week, only one for 5,000 bales was executed during the session and this failed to prevent sagging prices. After several erratic fluctuations, the market weakened the last hour and ended at a loss of 19 to 27 points. For the first time, March selling orders were prominent both at the beginning and close of the day's trading. The first March notice day will be Feb. 24. Exports aggregated 47,000 bales, which brought shipments for the season in excess of 5,000,000 bales.

The opening call showed the tendency of holders of March contracts to reduce outstanding obligations as the month progresses toward the first day in that position. At the same time, action of the market on recession reflected a demand for May and July contracts with the result that, while March sold 15 points lower than Wednesday's close, May contracts changed hands only 8 points lower. The conspicuous absence of large buying orders had an unsettling influences in several directions, and at one time May sold 48 points under best figures of the previous day. Private reports of showers at some points in Texas brought selling orders in distant positions though the official weather map showed no precipitation of importance in Texas, Oklahoma or Arkansas. A sharp break in wheat and reports of an increase in the probable area to be planted to cotton in parts of Texas, together with further March liquidation and Southern hedging orders combined to produce an easier market.

The last hour a bulge in New Orleans and exports of nearly 50,000 bales ran prices up 20 points from low levels of the morning. Room covering carried May to 24.40 and the first large buying order of the day was executed at 24.55. The purchase of this block of cotton failed to bring in increased demand and active liquidation the last half hour carried prices to lowest levels of the session near the close.

COSDEN PLANS MERGER OF FIVE OIL CONCERNS

J. S. Cosden, until about a year ago head of one of the prominent independent oil companies bearing his name, is about to re-enter the oil business through the organization of a new company, according to advices received in the financial district from the West yesterday. Mr. Cosden was head of Cosden & Co., now the Mid-Continent Oil Company, up to the time local bankers obtained control of the company.

Mr. Cosden, according to the information, will be associated with New York bankers and will consolidate five mid-continent companies into one new organization. The companies mentioned in the report were the Berry Petroleum Corporation, the Hope Petroleum Corporation, the Moore Refining Company, the Burk-Gels Oil Company and the Burk-Hoffleit Oil Company.

A small interest in the Atlantic Petrolcum Corporation, it was also reported, will form the nucleus of J. S. Cosden Company, which will be the name of the new organization.

Public Service Customers' Stock.

Final figures in the customer-ownership offer of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey show that 77,572 shares were sold to 19,545 subscribers throughout New Jersey. This is more than 50 per cent. above the figure of 50,000 shares set as the goal at the beginning of the campaign extending from Oct. 1 to Jan. 31.

BROOKLYN EDISON SHOWS STEADY GAIN

ITS GROSS IS $26,030,840

Company Has Had Greatest Growth of Any Electric Utility in Past Five Years.

The Brooklyn Edison Company will mail to its stockholders today its annual report, showing a further substantial increase in its gross business and net earnings in 1924. The company, on March 2, will pay its one hundredth consecutive quarterly dividend on the capital stock—a record equaled only by very few American utilities or industrials. Available records show only eight electric utilities with a capitalization of $10,000,000 or more that have paid dividends without interruption for twenty-five years or more. The United States Steel Corporation has a history shorter than the period during which Brooklyn Edison has paid consecutive dividends.

The report shows that the company has more than maintained the rate of growth that has characterized it for the last five years, since M. S. Sloan became President. Gross revenue increased in 1924 to $26,030,840 from $23,422,313 in 1923, and net income to $7,059,011 from $5,714,402. The earnings per share, which were put by the company at $9.97 in 1923, after deducting the reserve for contingencies, increased to $10.96 in 1924. After all deductions the report shows a net increase in the surplus of $810,931.

The Comparative Statement.

Expenses, including taxes, maintenance, retirements and uncollectible bills.	16,838,791.45	15,751,984.79
Gross corporate income	$9,192,048.70	$7,670,328.92
Dividends and employes' profit sharing	4,379,162.53	3,395,612.93
Total deductions.	$7,000,096.80	$6,706,803.06
Net surplus deductions	1,372,020.43
Net increase in surplus	$810,931.41	$963,525.86
Stock outstanding Dec. 31	$59,754,500.00	$43,704,300.00

The distribution of revenues last year shows that 9 per cent. went for taxes, local, State and Federal, while 51 per cent. went for operating expenses. 15 per cent. for dividends and a like amount to reserve and surplus. Interest took 8 per cent. and employes profit-sharing something over 1 per cent. The 15 per cent. of revenue allocated to dividends represents 8 per cent. on the capital stock outstanding at the time dividends were declared.

Capital Stock Increased.

During the year an increase in the capital stock from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 was authorized. Of the new stock, $16,000,000 was offered to existing stockholders and all subscribed for, while the remainder was held in the treasury. There was also authorized an issue of $25,000,000 per cent. general mortgage bonds. Ten millions of these bonds were used to redeem outstanding 7 per cent. bonds. The balance went to reimburse the company's treasury for capital expenditures in connection with the construction of the new Hudson Avenue generation station and the extension and development of the transmission and distribution system.

The company now has an authorized capitalization in stock and bonds of $120,000,000, of which $105,000,000 is outstanding, divided into $60,000,000 common stock and $45,000,000 bonds. Of the bonds, $8,500,000 are 6 per cent., $4,275,000 4 per cent. and the remainder 5 per cent.

The total number of meters added to the system in 1924 was about 150,000. In the five years since 1919 Brooklyn Edison, reflecting the tremendous growth of Brooklyn borough, has had probably the greatest expansion of any electric utility in the country. In that period the company's annual gross revenue increased from $11,000,000 to $26,000,000; net income has grown from $1,800,000 to $7,000,000, and the number of meters on the system has increased from 142,000 to 500,000 and the kilowatt hours sold from 255,000,000 to 500,000,000.

ARGENTINE LOAN RUMORS.

Conflicting Reports Cause Bankers to Cable to Buenos Aires.

Wall Street was flooded yesterday with conflicting rumors regarding the possibility of an Argentine loan. Stories were afloat that a new banking group was seeking to take the Argentine Government account away from the banking group that has handled it in the past; that the Argentine Government itself had taken the lead and was sounding opinion among New York bankers to see if it could get better terms, and another that the rumors were in response to speculation regarding an approaching maturity of Argentine short-term notes.

Several banks sent inquiries to Buenos Aires. No announcement was made as to their replies, but it was stated in some banks that definite denials had been received.

WESTERN MARYLAND INCOME

The preliminary statement of the Western Maryland for 1924 shows a surplus before preferred dividends of $569,553, compared with $1,671,169 in 1923. This is equivalent to $3.21 a share on the preferred stock compared with $9.41 a share in 1923. The slump of the coal business along the company's road was one of the factors which brought down the income. The account compares as follows:

HEAVY TRAFFIC IS EXPECTED

Railroads Ready With Surplus Cars and Locomotives.

Estimates by mid-western railroads indicate that their demand for cars during the first three months of 1925 will be as heavy if not heavier than a year ago.

Heavy requirements are predicted by the Chicago & Alton, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the Chicago & North Western, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Chicago Great Western, the Illinois Central and the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault. Ste. Marie Railway.

Heavy demands also are expected in the Southwest according to officials of the Southern Pacific and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe.

The Atlantic Coast Line, the Seaboard Air Line, and the Southern Railway also have estimated that their business this quarter will be as good if not better than a year ago.

Executives declare that a large number of surplus cars are on hand, and that more than 4,000 locomotives ready for service are now in storage.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Hogs, advanced 10@15 cents, packers holding off early, but became free buyers later and the close was strong. Packers and shippers both paid $11.20 for fancy heavies, or within 5 cents of the best figure of the year, while the general average of $10.85 was the best since Oct. 13. Few hogs remained unsold at the last. Receipts were 38,000. Small supplies of fat lambs with a fair demand caused prices to be well maintained, with a top of $18.75. Feeder lambs sold readily while aged sheep were dull and easier. Receipts were 11,000. The general run of cattle were in slow demand and barely steady, while the few loads of good steers offered were quickly taken by shippers. Best yearlings brought $11.65 and heavy steers $11.25. Receipts were 10,000.

WHEAT OFF 7 CENTS IN NEW COLLAPSE

May Option Drops to Two Cents Below Recent Low Mark, July and September Following.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Talk of Congressional action as the result of the recent wild upturn in wheat values, with an estimate that Argentina would export 7,080,000 bushels cash wheat for the week, sent the world's wheat markets crashing downward, with May here at the inside touching $1.21⅛, or two cents under the low point of Tuesday on the sensational decline from $2.05⅛, and nearly ten cents under the high figure of Wednesday. At the finish the market showed a net loss of 3¼ to 7 cents. Corn was off 1⅝ to 2¼ cents; oats ⅜ to 1⅝ cents down.

The break was mild as compared with that in Buenos Aires which dropped 8 cents for the day, or 19 cents under the close on Jan. 28, February in that market going from ½ cent over Chicago May on that day to 6 cents under, at the finish tonight. Liverpool was off 4¼@4½d. and Winnipeg 7⅝@8 cents, the latter on July. May at Winnipeg touched $2.00⅝, or 11⅜ cents under the top of Wednesday.

A revival in the export demand with sales of 700,000 bushels, including 225,000 bushels of hard Winter to Greece and 300,000 bushels of durum to Italy, had no effect on values.

Rye dropped 5¼ a 6 cents in the face of aggressive buying by export and cash interests and closed at the bottom. Norway and Germany took around 150,000 bushels during the day for deferred shipment. St Louis reports a mill there had made the best wheat flour sales for export in sixty days.

Primary arrivals today were 888,000 bushels; week ago, 1,072,000; last year, 915,000. Shipments were 624,000 bushels; last week, 755,000; last year, 585,000.

Corn receipts were 773,000 bushels; week ago, 1,006,000; last year, 1,176,000, and shipments, 537,000 bushels; week ago, 553,000; last year, 839,000.

RESERVE ASSETS GAIN $43,700,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The consolidated statement of condition of the Federal Reserve banks on Feb. 4, made public by the Federal Reserve Board, shows an increase of $48,700,000 in holdings of discounted bills and of $300,000 in holdings of acceptances purchased in open market, and a reduction of $5,200,000 in Government security holdings.

As a result of these changes total earning assets went up $43,700,000, to $1,032,300,000. Federal Reserve note circulation went up $6,100,000, the first increase represented this year, while cash reserves declined $18,000,000 and non-reserve cash $11,400,000.

The increase of $48,700,000 in discount holdings is reported by the New York Reserve Bank, and increases of $4,100,000 and $4,300,000 respectively by Philadelphia and Cleveland. The Boston bank shows a decline in discount holdings of $2,200,000 and Atlanta of $1,900,000, the seven remaining banks showing smaller changes in this item for the week.

Acceptance holdings of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston were $3,200,000 less than a week ago, while those of the San Francisco and Philadelphia banks were $1,800,000 and $1,100,000 respectively above the previous week's level.

All Federal Reserve banks report smaller holdings of United States Government securities. The system's holdings of Treasury notes went down $6,400,000 and of United States bonds $900,000, while holdings of Treasury certificates increased $2,100,000.

The principal changes in Federal Reserve note circulation were increases of $3,300,000 and $5,300,000, represented by the New York and Boston Reserve Banks respectively, and reductions of $6,900,000 and $2,700,000 respectively shown for Cleveland and Chicago.

RESERVE BANK POSITION.

Range of Various Items, Compared With Previous Years.

Yesterday's Federal Reserve statement showed the system's gold holdings to be at the lowest point of the year to date, while its rediscounts secured by Government collateral reached the highest point since December. The system's reserve ratio did not reach either a high or low point for the year to date, but the reserve ratio of the New York Bank stood at the lowest for 1925 this week.

The following table shows the highest and lowest point reached thus far in 1925, and in a series of years past, by the important items in the Reserve Bank statements. Figures are in thousands of dollars:

THERE is more to California than just flowers and sunshine and summer skies and seas. More to be enjoyed than the greatest playground on earth. More to be afforded than an opportunity for rest and relaxation.

A trip to California is an investment. An investment in health, for one thing—in added and more enjoyable years of life. Money cannot buy more than this.

And California, for you now, is also an investment in happiness. It is the happiness that comes from outdoor living, from inspiring mountains, from smiling flowers, from change.

* * *

Change is the spice of life. To do the usual continually is to grow old quickly. Perhaps that explains why people seem to find youth in California—it is a different land.

What to do here—well, almost anything you want.

On all sides are old missions, deserts, orange groves, strange flowers, trees and vegetation. And five thousand miles of motor boulevards, paved like city streets, connecting everything.

Rest? Within two hours you're in a log cabin among the trees beside a mile-high lake, in the great majestic quiet of the mountains.

Men, women, children—all are captivated because it furnishes what each likes best. Southern California is the land for every age. It's the new height to which you can climb from out of your old rut.

Come see for yourself how wonderful it is now—this winter. Or come this Spring so that you may be present for the wonderful outdoor Easter sunrise services—a unique spiritual refreshment. Remain as long as you will and find always life at its best—mild, balmy winters; cool, pleasant summers. Come and see!

Any railroad ticket agent can tell you all about it. Or mail coupon below to us.

California does not tax the personal property of visitors and tourists. California has no state income tax. California's inheritance tax law applies only to investments within the state. If you are interested in further facts regarding California's favorable tax laws, write for our "Special Tax Circular."

Sales in Westchester County.

J. Irving Davis sold a parcel of land on Mitchell Place, White Plains. The buyer is reported to be the Eastcote Realty Company, who are the record owners of the parcel on Mamaroneck Avenue, opposite Quorropus Street. This gives a combined area of over eleven thousand square feet.

Plans are being made for the erection of a two-story and basement garage with entrances on both streets, with ramps leading to the lower and upper floors. There will be showrooms on both Mamaroneck Avenue and Mitchell Place frontages. Prince & Ripley negotiated the sale.

R. E. L. Howe Jr. resold for Ward, Carpenter & Co. a plot 50 by 100 on Grove Street, White Plains, held at $25,000, to Thomas Holden, Jr., for investment.

The Stanley B. Kirk Company sold the two and a half acre estate on Wilmot Road, New Rochelle, which has been the residence of John J. Buell, formerly Vice President of James McCreery & Co., but who is now an officer of the Fair, one of Chicago's largest department stores. The purchaser is Dr. F. J. Weber of New York City.

Investor Buys Two Mount Vernon Corners.

Neason Jones, as broker, sold for Eleanor A. Queripel, to an investor, the two vacant corners, each about 100 by 100 feet, at the northwest and southwest corners of South Fulton Avenue and Fourth Street, Mount Vernon.

This property has not been transferred for over sixty-two years. It was purchased by Joseph Queripel, father of the seller, on Nov. 29, 1862, for $225. The property is now assessed by the City of Mount Vernon for taxing purposes at $10,100.

Dr. A. J. Lanza, executive officer of National Health Council, has purchased from Edward T. Monroe his nine-room colonial residence and garage, located on Buena Vista Driveway, Riverview Manor, Dobbs Ferry. E. G. Johnson negotiated the sale.

B. P. Moss Buys Site for a Modern Building.

B. S. Moss announced yesterday the purchase of a parcel of real estate in Far Rockaway comprising eighteen lots, located on Mott Avenue, between Mott Place and Central Avenue. The plot has a frontage of 200 feet on Mott Avenue, with a depth of 180 feet.

The property will be improved with a modern theatre seating 2,500, with twelve stores and offices. It is located in the centre of Far Rockaway, opposite the Masonic Temple and the Christian Science Church.

Queen Investors Sell.

Fred G. Randall has purchased through Augustus N. Parry Jr. from a group of investors a parcel on the southeast corner of Verbees Place and Roosevelt Avenue, Queens Borough. This plot has a frontage of 115 feet on Roosevelt Avenue. Mr. Randall announced yesterday that this plot will be made available for builders at once.

ASKS RULING ON AUTHORITY.

Transit Commission Doubtful of Its Power to Order Ferry's Continuance

Doubt as to whether the Transit Commission had the power to compel the Long Island Railroad to continue the operation of the Thirty-fourth Street ferry to Long Island City at a loss was indicated at the close of the hearings yesterday. General John F. O'Ryan of the commission asked Assistant Corporation Counsel Vincent Victory and Alfred A. Gardiner, counsel for the railroad, to submit briefs on whether or not the commission had this power, and if so whether it should order the company to continue operation for vehicular traffic alone, the testimony having shown that the passenger traffic was unimportant.

George LeBoutillier, Executive Vice President of the railroad company, testified that the space occupied by the ferry terminals was needed for car floats. He denied that the abandonment of the Long Island City passenger terminal was contemplated, but said the company intended to spend $1,250,000 for additional freight facilities on the Long Island waterfront.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—A protest against the discontinuance of the ferry service between East Thirty-fourth Street, Manhattan, and Long Island City has been made to the Long Island Railroad by Representative John J. O'Connor of the Sixteenth District, who wrote: "The western terminal of that service being in the heart of my Congressional district, I know well the benefits accruing from the operations of the ferry. To discontinue it now would cause a great loss to property owners, business and the city generally."

ONLY the well-dressed man writes his own ticket. The poorly-dressed man has somebody write it for him. The first sometimes overestimates his value, but the second seldom gets what he's worth. The fact is, a man must look like ready money to command it. He should dress, not according to his abilities, but according to his aspirations. He should also keep in mind that being well-dressed involves something more than new clothes. Even an old suit of good character is better than a new suit without a reference! And character's what we're selling! Even up to the last day you wear it, the garment you buy in this store will maintain your reputation as a WELL-DRESSED MAN.
